The site was granted, in exchange for other lands, in the 30th Hen. VIII. A.D. 1538, to Thomas earl of Rutland, a descendant of Walter Espec, the founder of the abbey; and by Catherine, daughter and heiress of Roger earl of Rutland, became the property of her husband, George Villiers duke of Buckingham, whose son, the second duke of Buckingham, sold it to Sir Charles Duncombe, knight. Thomas Duncombe, Esq. the grandson of Sir Charles, was the owner of the site in 1758. It is still in the possession of the Duncombes.

Of the REGISTERS and other DOCUMENTS of this priory, Tanner mentions one as in the possession of William Lite of Wilburgham in Cambridgeshire. There is a second Register among the Cottonian manuscripts marked Julius D. I. a volume very regularly and beautifully written: a small square quarto.^h

There is an imperfect impression on red wax of the COMMON SEAL of this Abbey, attached to a conventual lease temp. Hen. VIII. in the Augmentation Office. It represents an abbat, with his crozier, standing between two figures, of whom little more remains than their feet; scarcely any part of the legend remains. There is a counter seal, the subject of which is a man on horseback, destroying a dragon.

Peck has given a drawing from an impression of this seal in his volume above quoted, p. 52. Whence it appears that the form of the seal was oval: above the abbat is the figure of the Virgin with our Saviour in her arms, seated. The inscription SI . ABBATIS . ET . CONVENTVS . SANCTE . MARIE . RIEVALLIS. Peck's impression was appended to a deed of the 46th Edw. III. A.D. 1372.

The Cottonian manuscript Titus D. xii. fol. 936. has the following tetrastick prophesying the destruction of the abbey, with a comment. The former, said to have been written before the Dissolution.

“Twoe men came riding over Hackney way,
The one of a blacke horse the other on a gray;
The one unto the other did say,
Loo yonder stood Reves that faire abbay.”

“Henry Cawton, a monke, som time of Reves abbey in Yorkshire, affirmed that he had often read this in a MS. belonging to that abbay containing many prophesies, and was extant there before the Dissolution. But when he or any other of his fellowes redde it, they used to throwe the book away in anger as thinking it impossible ever to come to passe.” E. B.

The Ruins of Rievall Abbey which remain a short distance from Helmesley in Yorkshire, still rank among the most beautiful in that part of the country: they are as rich in architectural as in picturesque beauty.

Fundationis et Fundatorum Historia.

DOMINUS Walterus Especke miles strenuus et decorus in ætate juvenili uxorem duxit quandam, nomine Adelinam, quæ concepit, et peperit ei unum filium, nomine Walterum, similem patri suo. Qui formosus factus adolescens, multum delectabatur in equis velocibus equitare. Contigit ut quadam die, cum equum velocem ascendisset, et ipsum ad currendum, ultra vires urgeret, apud parvam petrinam crucem, versus^a Frithby, equus suus graviter cespitavit: et ille subito de equo cadens, collo suo fracto, vitam finivit temporalem. Quod cum rumor infortunii ad patrem suum pervenisset, consternatus dolore nimio, deliberavit de hæredibus sibi disponendis. Licet præcipue quando vir conquestus erat, et armorum actibus, quicquid habuit, acquisivit. Invocata igitur Spiritus Sancti gratia, amicis suis consuluit, præsertim Willielmum Gartonensem rectorem, et avunculum suum ejus consilio plurimum acquievit. Qui igitur consuluit ut de parte terrarum suarum Christum faceret hæredem, quod ad finem usque perduxit, fundans tria monasteria. Et primò monasterium de Kirkham viij. kal. Martii feria quarta anno Domini M.C.XXij. anno regni regis H. primi XXij. et præsulatus Thurstani Ebor. archiep. anno quinto. Et idem præsul primus priorem, Willielmum videlicet supradictum tunc canonicum, instructum in domo sancti Oswaldi ordinavit et constituit in pastorem, adjuncto sibi uno socio de eadem domo; qui quidem Willielmus prior rexit prioratum in domo de Kirkeham per unum annum menses tres et duos dies, et sic quinto nonas Julii ab hac luce subtractus est, et ad vitam migravit æternam fœliciter regnaturus. Et ad sustentationem ejusdem domus et onus hospitalitatis supportandum, idem Walterus dedit ju^s patronatus septem ecclesiarum per ipsum appropriandarum eisdem, in proprios usus habendum, et terras redditus ac possessiones ad summam mille et centum marcarum in comitatibus Eboraci et Northumbriæ.

Postea fundavit monasterium Rievallis A.D. M.C.XXXj. Et postea fundavit monasterium de Wardon A.D. M.C.XXXvj. Vixit autem idem Walterus, postquam fundavit monasterium de Kirkham, triginta annis, miles strenuus et circumspectus. Tandem dictus dominus Walterus, senio confractus, armis militaribus valedixit, Willielmum hæredem habens de corpore suo legitime procreatum: residuum verò terrarum suarum divisit inter tres sorores suas, sibi jure hæreditario successuras, quarum nomina hæc sunt: Hauwisa, Albreda, Adelinea. Primam duxit in uxorem Willielmus Buscye, secundam Nicholaus de Traylye, et tertiam Petrus de Roos; sed Adelinæ sorori suæ inter cætera dedit specialiter advocacionem de Kirkham, et Rievallis, et postea sumens habitum monachilem apud Rievallem, ibidem inter monachos per biennium conversans vitam finivit temporalem, jacens ibidem in sua ecclesia humatus vij. Idus Martii Anno Domini M.C.liij. cujus animæ propitiatur Deus, Amen.

Rievallis deinceps, et hæc tria, Wardona
Est fundata primitus à dicta persona,
Pro quorum meritis datur illi trina corona.

[Ibid. fol. 96 b.]

HÆC sunt illa quæ concessimus et donavimus monachis de Rievals de possessionibus nostris, pro amore Dei et salute animarum nostrarum, et pro communi societate statuenda inter nos et ipsos, pro pace et honore prioris nostri, et pro voluntate et desiderio advocati nostri; videlicet, Kirkeham cum ecclesia et ædificiis nostris, et cum gardinis, et ortis, et molendinis nostris, et omnibus in eodem loco consistentibus, præter unum horreum quod inde transferemus, et Hwite-wella, et Wiveston, et quatuor carrucatae terræ in Sextendala quas advocatus noster adhuc tenet in manu sua; et de nostro instauramento una carruca et c. oves, tali conditione, quod advocatus noster dabit nobis totam Lintoniam et Hwerflestorp cum omnibus ejusdem villæ pertinentibus, et ipse eas nobis adquietabit ex omni calumpnia, et liberas faciet ex omni servicio. Et prior noster et sui auxiliarii ædificabunt nobis ecclesiam, capitulum, dormitorium, refectorium de Spuor, sufficienti magnitudine, et alias quascumque domos necessarias de alia materie; scilicet infirmatorium, cellarium, hospicium, pistrinum, stabulum, granarium, horreum, et ibi nobis firmabunt bonum molendinum si fieri potest sine nimiis expensis; ecclesiam cooperient de scindula, et regulares officinas claustrum de Ros. Cartas autem et confirmationes Lintoniæ et omnium possessionum nostrarum adquirent nobis. Privilegium etiam domini Papæ nobis impetrabunt sine nostro labore vel expensa ad tenorem illius privilegii quod nobis magis placuerit et sit canonicum in hac diocesi.

Sciendum etiam quod in manu nostra cum ecclesia parochiali in Wiveston unam carucatam terræ retinemus quæ ad præfatam ecclesiam pertinet, et in qua ipsa ecclesia stat; id est in mora. Decimas etiam suas nobis dabunt monachi ubicumque terras excoluerint in ipsa parochia, et in Hwitewella, et in dominiis advocati nostri; videlicet, de omnibus rebus unde decima dari solet, nisi rationabili consideratione et ex nostro consensu eas adquietare voluerint. Tintinabulum unum eis remanebit quale voluerimus. Vasa etiam et utensilia et instrumenta domui necessaria quæcumque inventa fuerint sive in Kirkeham, sive in Hwitewella nobis licebit pro nostra voluntate transferre. Hoc quoque sciendum est, quod nec à loco nostro volumus discedere, nec priorem nostrum amittere donec ea quæ inter nos constituta sunt, ad prædictum finem perducta fuerint. Et si forte infra annum locum mutaverimus, res et redditus ecclesiæ nostræ sicut modò sunt per annum integrum in manu et potestate nostra erunt ad debita nostra adquietanda. Similiter etiam res et redditus Lintoniæ in manu monachorum ad construenda ædificia nostra. Hæc omnia prout inter nos constitutum est, ipsi ad finem debitum perducere satagent, salvis eorum conventionibus quos in terris nostris supradictis invenerint. Sciendum quoque quod omnes canonici et fratres de Kirkeham qui in præsentem vivunt, tantum habebunt in capitulo et ordine Cisterciensi, quantum ejusdem ordinis monachus.

Privilegium Alexandri Quarti Papæ Monachis de Rieval de non solvendis Decimis.

bilibus fratribus Eboracensi archiepiscopo, apostolicæ sedis legato, et Dunelmensi episcopo, et dilectis filiis clericis in eorum episcopatibus constitutis salutem et apostolicam benedictionem. Audivimus et audientes admirati sumus, quod cum fratribus Rievallis sicut aliis omnibus Cisterciensis Ordinis a patribus et prædecessoribus nostris concessum sit, et a nobis ipsis postmodum confirmatum, ne de laboribus quos propriis manibus aut sumptibus excolunt nemini decimasolvere teneantur; quidam ex eis nicholominus contra indulgentiam sedis apostolicæ decimas exigere et extorquere præsumunt, et sinistra interpretatione apostolicorum privilegiorum captum pervertentes asserunt de novalibus deberi intelligi ubi de laboribus est insertum. Quoniam igitur manifestum est omnibus qui recte sapiunt, interpretationem hujusmodi perversam esse, et intellectui sano contrariam, cum secundum captum illorum a solutione decimarum tam de terris illis quas deduxerunt vel deducunt ad cultum, quam etiam de terris cultis quas propriis manibus vel sumptibus excolunt sint penitus absoluti, ne ullus contra eos materiam habeat malignandi, vel quomodolibet in posterum justitiam molestandi, per apostolica scripta vobis præcipiendo mandamus quatenus omnibus qui vestræ sunt potestatis auctoritate nostra prohibere curetis, ne a memoratis fratribus de Rievalle, vel a fratribus aliorum monasteriorum Cisterciensis Ordinis, qui in episcopatibus vestris consistunt de novalibus vel de aliis terris, quas propriis manibus vel sumptibus excolunt, vel de nutrimentis animalium decimas præsumunt quomodolibet extorquere. Nam si de novalibus voluissimus tantum intelligi, ubi ponimus de laboribus de novalibus poneremus; sicut in privilegiis quorundam apponimus aliorum. Quia vero non est conveniens ut contra instituta sedis apostolicæ temere veniatur quæ obtinere debent inviolabilem firmitatem per apostolica scripta vobis præcipiendo mandamus, ut si qui canonici, monachi, vel laici, contra privilegia sedis apostolicæ prædictos fratres de decimarum exactione gravaverint, laicos excommunicationis sententia percellatis, reliquos ab officio suo appellatione remota suspendatis, et tam excommunicationis sententiam quam suspensionis faciatis usque ad dignam satisfactionem observari. Ad hæc præsentium vobis auctoritate præcipiendo mandamus quatinus si qui in fratres præscriptorum monasteriorum manus violentas injecerint, appellatione et dilatione remota, eos accensis candelis excommunicatos districtius evitari donec congrue satisfaciatur prædictis fratribus, et cum literis diocesanæ episcopi rei veritatem continentibus apostolico se conspectui representent. Dat. Lateran. kal. Maii.

Ego frater S. dictus abbas Rievallis testimonium perhibeo hanc libertatem a domino papa nobis indultam, et in eodem rescripto etiam aliis monasteriis ordinis nostri in Eboracensi et Dunelmensi episcopatibus constitutis, unde et præsentis scripto ad fidem faciendam sigillum meum apposui; cui testimonio nostro si fide adhibita acquiescere nolueritis, originalis copia rescripti cum necesse fuerit, non deerit nobis et aliis ordinis nostri.

Fountains Abbey, near Ripon, in Yorkshire.

HIRTEEN Benedictine monks of St. Mary's near York, says Tanner, left their house A.D. 1132,^a with design to observe a more strict and reformed rule; whereupon Thurston archbishop of York gave them a place then called Skeldale, not far from Ripon, thereupon to found an abbey of the Cistercian Order, to the honour of the blessed Virgin.

The details of this removal and foundation are given by Dugdale at considerable length from the Narration of one Hugh, a monk of Kirkstall, formerly in the Arundel library, but now in that of the Royal Society.^b Burton also has given an abridged translation of these details.^c

Hugh dean of York, and Serlo and Tosti two canons of that cathedral, rank among the earliest benefactors to this house: soon after which Robert de Sartis and his wife Raganilda bestowed upon the monks the town of Harleshows, with the adjacent fields, and the forest of Warkesall: Serlo de Pembroke gave the village of Caiton: and the abbat soon after obtained the grange of Aldeburgh.^d These possessions formed a sort of nucleus, which, in time, increasing, rendered Fountains one of the most important abbies of the north.

There are a few historical details relating to this monastery:

William archbishop of York, it appears, being deposed A.D. 1140, 5 Steph. the soldiers who favoured him came to Fountains to seize Henry the abbat, whom they considered to have been the cause of William's deposition: but not finding him there, they burnt the monastery, and half of the oratory.^e

John de Eboraco, abbat of Fountains, began the fabric of the church anew soon after 1204, laying the foundations, and raising some of the pillars.

John Pherd, the next abbat, afterwards bishop of Ely, carried on the work with the utmost expedition; and John de Cantia, his successor, finished the structure, instituting therein nine altars. This abbat also built the cloister, infirmary, and the apartment for the entertainment of the poor, in the entrance of the first area of the abbey toward the south. He also added to the new work of the chancel an ornamented pavement. At this time, likewise, it appears that there were nine altars in the transverse aisle of the most eastern part of the church, where there were many columns of black marble interspersed with white spots. In the chapter-house and refectory there were other large pillars of the same sort.^f

This last abbat John died in the 29th of Henry the Third, A.D. 1245; whence it appears, says Burton, that this fabric was erected in less than the space of forty years.

The prosperity of the convent, however, did not quite keep pace with the grandeur of the buildings; since, in 1294, John le Romaine, archbishop of York, wrote to those monks of Clareval who were sent as visitors of the religious places of the Cistercian Order in England, informing them of the injured state of Fountains abbey, and of the great necessity which the monks were in, partly, as it appears, from misconduct and extravagance.^g

The Monks of Fountains were likewise great sufferers by the invasions of the Scots, who, at one or two times burnt many of their houses, and destroyed the produce of their lands. On this account, in the 13th of Edward II. A. D. 1319, the king granted them an exemption from the payment of taxes.^h By an inquisition taken in 1363, the granges of the monks at Aldeburgh, Sleningford, Sutton, Couton, Cayton, Bramley, Bradley, Kilnesay, and Thorp, are represented to have become so ruinous that they could not repair them: but whether from the same cause is not distinctly stated.^a Subsequent to this time we read no more of their distresses.

The different charters of privilege and confirmation granted to the Monks of Fountains, papal, regal, and archiepiscopal, are enumerated in the following order by Burton: who first observes, that their exemption from the payment of tithes for all such ground as they kept in their own hands, or occupied at their own expense, was the common privilege of all houses of the Cistercian Order.

Pope Innocent the Fourth, on the 6th kal. Feb. 1241, granted them a bull, in which, to the exemption just mentioned, a further one was added from the payment of the tithes of wool, lamb, and milk, in whatsoever parish their sheep should be fed:^b and Pope Alexander the Fourth, who was elected in 1254, by a bull dated prid. Id. Aug. in the fourth year of his pontificate, granted that such lands belonging to them, whether cultivated or uncultivated, as had not paid tithes, although afterwards they should be let to others to cultivate, should yet be exempt from payment of tithes.^c

King Henry the First granted that the monks of Fountains, their horses, men, and effects should be exempt from payment of tolls, for passage and pontage, and be duty free wheresoever they went by land or by water; and especially to and from Boroughbridge.^d

King Stephen confirmed all the grants made to the monks here by Thurston, archbishop of York, Henry, his successor in that see, Alan, Earl of Bretagne, and others, and exempted their lands from all secular service.^e

King Henry the Second confirmed their possessions to them, with sac, soc, team, and infangetheof; and exempted them from themanelith, and danegeld, and from assize, and aid of the county or hundred.^f

Richard the First confirmed his father King Henry the Second's grants, together with those of their possessions therein specified, dated 16th of September, in the first year of his reign, A.D. 1189. His charter was renewed on the ninth of November in the tenth year of his reign.^g

King Henry the Third also confirmed their possessions.^h

King Edward the First, on the 18th of September, in the eighth year of his reign A.D. 1280, granted to the monks here free warren in their demesnes in Morkar, Somewith, Aldeburgh, Sleningford, and Sutton, provided those lands were not in the king's forests: and by other letters patent, dated Oct. 16th, in the 20th year of his reign, he confirmed to them free warren in their demesnes in Balderby, Marton super Moram, Thorp sub bosco, Kilnesy in Craven, Bordenby in Craven, and Bradeley.ⁱ

King Richard the Second, by letters patent dated the 9th of November, in the tenth year of his reign, A.D. 1387, confirmed to them all their possessions, and granted them sac, soc, toll, team, and infangenetheof, with the courts of all their tenants, and the cognizance of all transgressions on their lands, with the assize of bread and ale; and to have the nomination or removal of their own bailiffs and servants, with all fines and forfeitures within the said premises; and with the same liberties as the church of St. Peter at York enjoyed. He also exempted them from the assize of the county, riding, and wapentakes, from danegeld, aids, scutage, pontage, pedage, carriage, tolls for repairing castles, clearing fosses, stallage and taillage: forbidding every man from arresting any person within their premises, without the abbat and convent's licence.^k

King Henry the Sixth, by the consent of the lords spiritual and temporal in parliament, confirmed the same privileges in the first year of his reign, A.D. 1422.^l

Thurston, archbishop of York, who sat from 1114 to 1143, who gave the monks their first land, gave to them part of his wood de Herleso, with the land near the wood, which Wallef, son of Archil, the archbishop's man, gave to them.^m

Henry Murdoc, his immediate successor, who sat from 1147 to 1153, confirmed what Thurston and others had given, viz. the church of Fountains, Sutton-grange, Herleshou, the grange of Warthsal, and other lands.ⁿ

Roger of Bishop-bridge, archbishop of York, who sat from 1154 to 1181, confirmed the same;^o as did Roger the dean and the chapter of York.^p

ROGER FRAUNK was elected July 30, 1410.^q After much expense, says Burton, he was expelled.^r In the Harleian manuscript 6972, p. 124, we have the following abstract of the Pat. 1 Hen. He was also chosen abbat of Waverley, and reigned there two years; and being elected abbat of Fountains, he there first professed, and governed the house twenty-nine years with great reputation.^c The date of 1444, however, for his election, will give the space of his rule as twenty-seven years only.

ton, it had only the patronage of one church given to it, viz. Kirkby-Useburne, which the abbat and monks afterwards sold; and it was appropriated to the precentorship of York. They had, indeed, the chapels of Raynington, alias Rainton; of St. Michael on the Mount,^a and Staynburne.^b

The entries in Pope Nicholas's Taxation concerning Fountains, in 1291, are three only. They appear at that time to have had but one spirituality, and that in the diocese of Worcester: "Porcio in ecclesia de Rochmerton 3s."

In temporalities the monks here appear to have had a revenue of 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in the diocese of Lincoln, from possessions in the deaneries of Hoyland and Manak: and a revenue from their possessions in the archdeaconry of Richmond in their own diocese and neighbourhood of 343*l.*: making a total of income in 1291 of 356*l.* 9*s.* 8*d.*^c

The site was granted in the 32d Hen. VIII. to Sir Richard Gresham.^d

Tanner has given references to various REGISTERS of the abbey of Fountains.

1. "Registrum abbatiae, MS. in bibl. Cotton. Tiberius C. xii." This volume, which was slightly injured in the fire at Westminster in 1731, contains the Instruments relating to their possessions, the names of which come under the first four letters of the alphabet. It consists of three hundred and twenty-seven leaves of vellum. On a blank page at the beginning is the following memorandum:

"Mem. The volume containing the estates of this monastery, from the letter D. to the letter I. inclusive, is at Ripley in Yorkshire; and another volume, from the letter I. to the end of the alphabet, is at Studley in the same county. JOHN INGILBY. Feb. 13th, 1784."

2. "Registrum omnium terrarum, tenementorum, &c. ad abbatiam de Fontibus spectantium, in 4to. MS. in bibl. Coll. Univ. Oxon." This is the same Register which Tanner subsequently mentions as "penes V. R. Hugonem Todd." Doctor Todd presented it to the library of University college.^e

3. "Chartularium penes dom. Johannem Trevor."

4. "Registrum penes Carolum Fairfax de Merston."

5. "Registrum penes Ric. Chiswell bibliopolam, 1692."

6. "Registrum in bibliotheca Harleyana, 1734." This is a mistake: at least, no Register of Fountains abbey now exists in the Harleian collection.

7. "Registrum penes decanum et capitulum Ebor."

8. "Registrum terrarum, feodorum, et possessionum ad monasterium S. Mariae de Fontibus pertinentium, quod rescribi fecit Marmaducus abbas A.D. 1509. MS. penes honoratiss. com. Denbigh apud Newnham Padox in com. War. in fol. amplior. pergam."

9. "Apographum cartularii hujus abbatiae, A. D. 1672, penes Ricardum Richardson de Bierley arm."

Beside these, Tanner refers to various original charters and instruments relating to this abbey, detached in the library of University College, Oxford, J. IV.: as well as to others in the possession of William Aislaby, Esq. of Studley, in Yorkshire.

He adds,

fering from the coat in Tanner. It bears upon a chevron five crosses paté between three horse-shoes.

5. Another seal of the arms of the abbey, differing again, viz. on a chevron three horse-shoes. These Arms, according to Burton, were visible in his time upon the tower of the church.

The Abbey of Fountains, with all its offices and appendages, occupied, within an enclosure, near twelve acres of ground. Burton has engraved a ground plan of the whole. Its present Ruins are believed to occupy near two acres. The length of the Church is three hundred and fifty-one feet; that of the transept a hundred and eighty-six feet. The great tower, twenty-four feet square, at the north end of the transept, is rather more than a hundred and sixty-six feet high. The nave of the church is sixty-five feet in width. The Chapter House is eighty-four feet in length and forty-two in breadth. The Refectory is a hundred and eight feet long, and forty-five in breadth. The Cloister was, till of late, three hundred feet in length by forty-two in breadth: near to one end of which the lavatory is remaining. During a storm on the night of Oct. 5, 1822, ten or twelve yards of the cloister fell down. The Dormitory was above the cloister. The Kitchen is in part remaining; and there are the ruins of the abbats' apartments. Fountains forms another of the richest remnants of our ancient monastic edifices. It is the property of Mrs. Lawrence, and the remains are carefully preserved.

Fountains Hall, about two hundred yards west of the abbey, was built out of its ruins by Sir Stephen Proctor, into whose hands the site came in the time of James the First.

At the gate of the monastery, says Tanner, there was an HOSPITAL for the relief of the poor in the neighbourhood, and for travellers, as early as the reign of King Richard the First, which had several particular benefactions to it. He adds, "*Vide in Registro de Fontibus penes honoratiss. com. Oxon. foll. 155, 284, 310, 411. et in MS. Dodsworth, vol. lxxiv. fol. 161. cartam Heliae fil. Incipit præfatio opusculi sequentis de origine Monasterii de Fontibus, &c.

REVERENDO patri ac domino Johanni abbati de Fontibus, frater H. monachus de Kirkestall salutem quæ nunc est et æternam.

Placuit excellentiæ vestræ pater venerabilis, ut succincta brevitate in acta redigerem quo authore vel ordine illa mater nostra, scilicet sancta Funtanensis ecclesia (cui Deo disponente in præsentiarum præsidetis) suæ foundationis sumpserit originem, qualiter illa vinea Domini benedicta in loco horroris et vastæ solitudinis sic creverit, sic dilatata fuerit, extendens palmites suas ad mare et propagines suas ad extremas nationes. Monuisti etiam ad majorem evidentiam ut à seniori nostro Serlone sua super his sensa requirerem, qui in dubiis eo certiores faceret fidem, quo et ipse rebus gestis ex parte interfuit, et veritatem à majoribus suis ex ordine audivit. Conveni senem super his quæ venerunt in dubio, contestans hominem ne qua nobis incomperta suggereret, parceretque ab incognitis, reticeret ambigua, et ea sola proponeret quæ vel præsens ipse vidisset, vel majorum relatione fideliter accepisset. Tunc ille, sicut est in dicendo serius, sexagesimus, inquit, et nonus annus iste est conversionis meæ, et eram tunc ut memini incipiens quasi annorum triginta, cum me primo Fontes contuli, sacro illi conventui sociandus. Quæ tunc ibi gerebantur ignorare non potui. Egressioni monachorum de cœnobio Eboracensi ipse interfui, egredientes et facie et nomine à pueritia cognovi, in territorio eorum natus, apud eos enutritus, quorum nonnullis secundum carnem propinquus fui. Et licet sum (ut ipse vides) ætate provecior, magnas tamen gratias habeo senectuti meæ quod memoria mihi constat illæsa, eorum maxime tenax quæ à primis annis servanda recepit. Igitur de origine Fontanensis monasterii, illa ut jubes evolvam quæ vel oculis ipse vidi, vel à majoribus meis indubitata fide accepi. Scripsi igitur ex ordine quæ ex ore senis audivi, rem supra vires aggressus, curam tamen adhibens ut rerum series servetur, imposterum donec veniet qui materiæ dignitatem cultiore stylo adæquet. Me igitur excipiente, senior suæ narrationis seriem ita exorsus est.

NUM. II.

De Monasterio Rievallis.

REGNANTE in Anglia illustri rege Henrico, filio Guli-

elmi, cognomento Bastard, siluit terra à facie ejus eriguntur passim ecclesiæ, monasteria construuntur, et sopitis præliis sancta ubique religio dilatatur. Floruit eodem tempore felicis memoriæ beatus Bernardus abbas Clarevallensis, vir magnificus et in Dei rebus strenuè se habens, sanctitate præcipuus, doctrina præcellens, miraculis clarus. Summa illi cura de cultu divino, de salute animarum, ampliare gentem suam, dare gloriam Deo à labiis suis, et in nomine ejus gloriari. Multorum siquidem monachorum pater non pauca monasteria construxerat. Et missis expeditionis suæ militibus jam finitimas occupaverat regiones, claros agens de hoste antiquo triumphos, eripiens prædam et restituens regi suo. Hic instinctu divino, de nobili sua Clarevallensi vinea quandam bonæ spei plantationem ad Anglicanas partes direxerat, fructum in gente illa quærens sicut ubique terrarum. Extat adhuc eadem epistola quam pro eis ad regem scripserat, asserens, teneri prædam domini sui in terra illius, misisset de militia sua viros strenuos qui eam requirant recuperent et reducant. Suadet regi uti nuntiis assistat et in hoc ne deserat feodum suum. Quod et factum est. Suscepti cum honore à rege et regno, in provincia Eboracensi jaciunt nova fundamenta, constituentes abbatiam quæ Rievallis nominatur. Et hæc prima plantatio ordinis Cisterciensis in territorio Eboracensi. Erant autem qui missi fuerunt viri sancti et religiosi gloriantes in paupertate, sanctam pacem habentes cum omnibus nisi cum corpore proprio et hoste antiquo: præferebant siquidem illam suæ Clarevallis unde advenerant disciplinam, et quasi de domo aromatum recenter egressi matris suæ unguenta in moribus redolebant. Fama undique increbuit, advenisse homines de terra longinqua sanctitatis eximie, religionis consummata qui angelicam in terra habentes conversationem monachorum nomen meritis adæquarunt. Æmulatio illorum provocavit multos, et adjunxerunt se illis quorum tetigerat corda Deus, et brevi facta sunt gens innumerosa.

NUM. III.

De Monasterio Eboracensi et primis patribus ejus. Cap. 2.

ERANT tunc temporis in cœnobio Eboracensi quod monasterium sanctæ Mariæ dicitur, viri religiosi ambulantes in viis patrum suorum, incedentes sine querela in institutionibus quas à suis majoribus acceperunt. Vivebant pro more et consuetudine traditionum paternarum, honestè quidem, sub regula et abbate, longè tamen citra præceptum regulæ, citra votum professionis suæ, longè citra perfectionem Cisterciensis disciplinæ. Horum autem nonnulli, audita ordinis puritate, pia quadam æmulatione adducti sunt (accusantibus nimirum eos conscientiis, quod minus professionem suam implevissent; et ex aliorum perfectione suam metientes imperfectionem) cœpit eos teporis sui tædere, erubescere, imperfectionem damnare, delicias et consuetas fastidire.

Pudet eos citra perfectionem subsistere, consedissetamdiu in finibus Moab et trans Jordanem accepisse hæreditatem. Tædet eos seculi tumultus et strepitus civitatis: tota aviditate suspiratur ad eremum, ad laborem manuum, et ollas prophetarum. Fit conjuratione valida spiritus adversus carnem, bellum intestinum: licet jam sacco indui, cilicio in-volvi, et remissionis vitæ delicias severiori castigare censura.
Horum primi et præcipui fuerunt Ricardus Sacrificus, Ranulphus, Gamellus, Gregorius, Hanno, Thomas, atque Walterus. Hi sunt quos elegit sibi Dominus in semen, quorum opera et exhortatione reliqui moventur ad cursum, tra-huntur ad consensum. Conceperunt cum propheta à timore tuo, Domine, et pepererunt spiritum bonum; sicut rei pro-bavit eventus; fœdus ineunt, firmant propositum. Et erat verbum istud adhuc absconditum à priore, verebantur siqui-dem hominem ne forte eis adversaretur, et opus incœptum dissiparet, sed frustra. Jam verò ipse, simili præventus gratia, in similes transformatur affectus, eundem parturiens spiritum quem et ipsi conceperant; pudebat enim monachi titulum in vanum accepisse, et perfectione professam perfectionem minus studuisse. Quid plura? Audit vota fratrum, præbet assensum, et gratias Deo agens se illis socium gra-tanter adjungit. Erat autem et ipse vir religiosus et timens Deum, prudens in exterioribus, potentium amicus, fuit enim ob reverentiam religionis omnibus et honori et amori, familiariter notus pontifici qui tunc metropoli Eboracensi præsidebat, nomen illi erat Richardus. Jam itaque familiares conveniunt, fideliter colloquuntur, et mutuo sese cohortantes etiam alios attrahunt. Facti jam tresdecim numero quorum erat cor unum et anima una, placet omnibus Cisterciensis ordinis sancta simplicitas, illius inseri olivæ pinguedini, pau-pertates experiri, et sacratis illis gregibus sociari. Tractant mutuo de egressione sua, de modo egressionis, non paupertatem veriti, non hyemis asperitatem, solum id cogitantes, quomodo salva fratrum pace sine scandalo res ad effectum possit produci. Sed id factu difficile, jam enim palam factum est verbum istud, jam sermo exiit inter fratres, priorem et complices ejus levitatis spiritu incitatos discessionem à populo suo docere, moliri etiam quædam nova quæ non licent, et in contemptum ordinis, in dedecus domus suæ, ad scandalum et confusionem totius congregationis arguunt homines inconstantiæ, causantur indiscretionem, transgressionis obtundunt reatum, et reclamantibus fere omnibus factus erat tumultus magnus in domo. Errorem commissum videtur pro incertis certa relinquere, affluentiam pro paupertate, non curare de pace fraterna, de scandalo pusillorum, de facta olim inibi professione. Periculosa res patrum statuta contemnere, et fraternæ dulcedinis rescindere unitatem. Res defertur ad abbatem qui tunc præerat, et ipse vir grandævus et senio pene confectus, Galfridus nomine. Consternatur homo ad rei novitatem, suæ tribuens calamitati, quod in senecta, tanta ei evenissent incommoda, domus infamia, destitutio ordinis, filiorum subversiones. Monet eos ab incœptis desistere, mutare in melius quod nimis licenter præsumptum est, meminisse professionis olim factæ, non se sui juris esse, nec licere infringere fœdus quod tam sollemniter contraxerant. Inten-tat disciplinam ordinis, pœnæ severitatem, et quoniam exitus haberent incertos, manifestos docet ab initio transgressores.
Instat modis omnibus eorum mutare propositum, revocare intentionem, extinguere spiritum quem jam parturiebant.
Sed non est consilium contra Dominum, stat immota sententia, propositum immutabile, et quo eis dissuadere insistit, eo magis ferventioris fidei facibus inardescunt.

De Archiepiscopo Eboracensi Turstino.

PRÆFUIT in illo tempore Eboracensi ecclesiæ piæ me-moriæ archiepiscopus Turstinus, homo magnarum rerum et totius religionis amator. Nactus occasionem prior Richardus accedit ad eum, sanctum illi revelat propositum, inquit consilium, et auxilium reverenter implorat. Ostendit con-tradictionem fratrum, abbatis prohibitionem, ordinis disciplinam. Ostendit ei pondus professionis, vivendi remissionem, conscientiaestimulum, proficiendi desiderium, nec posse rem ad effectum produci nisi episcopalis auctoritas interveniat. Advertit sanctus episcopus opus Dei esse non ho-minis, et spirituali congratulatus desiderio suum præbet assensum et adjutorium promittit. De communi igitur die statuit quo sanctus episcopus ad monasterium fratres visitaturus accedat. Abbas loci hoc mandatum suspectum ha-buit, veritus ne et archiepiscopus parti faveret adversæ et in præjudicium domus suæ aliquid præsumeret inauditum.

Missis itaque nunciis per Angliam ad monasteria, viros convocat litteratos, et convenit multitudo monachorum non modica in adventu domini Eboracensis. Est hoc totum factum est, ut eorum auxiliis et episcopo resisteret et fratrum insolentiam cohiberet. Instante die adest sanctus episcopus in spiritu lenitatis et pacis, habens in comitiva sua, uti decebat, viros graves, discretos clericos, canonicos, et alios quamplurimos religiosos. Occurrit ei abbas in egressu capituli et una monachorum turba, interdicens ingressum, asserens non licere ei cum tanta frequentia ad eos ingredi nec secularium quemquam capituli interesse secretis. Dimittat se turba, solus si velit ingrediatur, ne clericorum insolentiâ turbetur ordinis disciplina. Molestè tulit episcopus suos à se amoveri, dicens, non decere se solum in tanto auditorio sine consiliariis residere, maximè cum et ipsi ex remotis partibus plures ibi monachos admisissent. Tumultuante itaque conventu et clero, pervalida dissensio facta est in claustro, propellentibus aliis, aliis vero volentibus introire. Tunc sanctus episcopus indicto silentio.

‘Vos (inquit ille) debitam nobis hodie subtrahitis obedientiam. Nos vero authore Deo quod à nobis habetis subtrahentes, ecclesiam hanc interdicimus, et monachos in ea commemorantes auctoritate qua fungimur à sacris suspendimus.’ His dictis, recedens se cum suis in ecclesiam recepit, eumque sacer ejus conventus est sequutus, separatus ab aliis sicut adeps à carne.

De Egressione Monachorum.

EGRESSI sunt cum archiepiscopo Turstino è cœnobio Eboracensi monachi tresdecim de rebus monasterii nihil se-cum ferentes præter simplicem habitum. Et hæc sunt nomina eorum, Richardus Sacrificus, Ranulphus, Thomas, Gamellus, Hanno, Robertus de Suella, Galfridus, Walterus, atque Gregorius, Jervasius, Radulphus et Alexander. Ad-junxit se etiam illis monachus quidam de Witheby nomine Robertus, sanctus et timens Deum, abbas postea et fundator Novi-Monasterii, de quo suis in locis plenius dicendum.
Hi sunt viri sancti quos elegit sibi Dominus in semen, radix generationis nostræ, plantatio Domini ad ipsum glorificandum. Egressi de domo opulenta, de affluentia bonorum temporalium nunc primum sibi videntur seculum renun-ciasse, nil secum de mundi rebus habentes. Sed Dominus providit eis. Venerabilis siquidem episcopus satis episco-paliter agens, recepit eos in domum suam, prospiciens eis in omnibus quæ ad curam corporis pertinerent.

De Persecutione Abbatis.

ANNO ab Incarnatione Domini millesimo centesimo tricesimo secundo, pridie nonas Octobris, egressi sunt mo-nachi de cœnobio Eboracensi qui ecclesiam Fontanensem ædificaverunt, sacerdotes duodecim et unus levita. Abbas interim non segniter agens pro parte sua, nuncios ad regem dirigit, causam ex integro exponit, episcopi præsumptionem, monachorum pertinaciam, subversionem ordinis, et sanctæ religionis confusionem; rem profecto absurdam pro-fessionis formam infringere, majorum immutare statuta, jus sibi monachorum dicere, et transferre terminos quos patres præfixerunt. Scribit etiam in odium novitatis episcopis ab-batibus viris religiosis necnon et vicinis circumquaque mo-nasteriis, et communem religionis totius in hoc casu causatur læsionem. Advertit hoc venerabilis archiepiscopus, et adversæ partis cupiens prævenire malitiam, domino Gulielmo Cantuariensi archiepiscopo apostolicæ sedis legato, proces-sum scribit negotii, egressionis eorum causam et ordinem diligenter declarans. Extat ejusdem epistola, quam utique ad maiorem veritatis evidentiam hac narratione censuimus inserendam.

NUM. VII.

REVERENDISSIMO et in Christiana charitate domino Willielmo Dei gratia Cantuariensi archiepiscopo apostolicæ sedis legato, Turstinus eadem gratia archiepiscopus Eboracensis, in Christo proficere et nunquam deficere exoptat.

Ecclesiasticæ dignitatis summus honor est cum filiis et optimatibus ecclesiarum inter difficilimos eventus summa communicare consilia; unde paternitati vestræ rem insolitam quæ inter nos Eboraci nuper contigit indicare decrevimus, domine venerabilis et egregie pater. Siquidem notum satis ac certum est multis, quanta bonitate ac fama enituit virtutis in auribus omnium insigne cœnobium sanctæ Mariæ Eboracensis, infra paucos namque annos et rebus plurimum excrevit et numero et religione fratrum laudabiliter abundavit. Verum quia cum opibus virtutes minus vigere, minus consistere haud dubium est, aliqui ex fratribus ejusdem cœnobii ante dimidium ferme annum divino (ni fallor) instinctu permoti, cœperunt de modo ac statu conversationis suæ vehementer agitari, et remordenti conscientia (sicut ipsi testantur) multis angoribus æstuare, nempe falli se pene metuebant si tantum votum executio digna minimè sequeretur, unde inæstimabili horrore dicti fratres Eboracenses percussi, eo quod professionis suæ votum in nullis vel saltem minimis in rebus adimplere viderentur, metuentes sane ne in vacuum currerent aut cucurrissent, si voti reos tantæ inobedientiæ pœnalis ultio non reprobaret; facinus namque vel potius insaniam videri credebant, se portare regulam beati Benedicti, non ad profectum salutis, sed ad iudicium mortis. His igitur permoti prædicti fratres, priori suo, Richardo nomine, mentis suæ difficiles æstus innotescere studuerunt, prætendentesque de transgressione formidinem, ex voti correctione patrociniū supplicabant, ac ne prosperitatis alicujus respectu vel adversitatis timeret auxiliari, per Spiritum Dei et Christi nomen adjurabant. Expavit ipse de novitate rei; ac licet inter suos dulcis fortunæ summa facultate vigeret, audito tamen rumore melioris vitæ, perpendit velut intentione censoria dubios casus labentis fortunæ. Interimque brevi, uti res erat, interne virtutis usus consilio, inter hoc et illud illico discrevit, decrevitque, pollicetur non modo auxilium verum etiam ejusdem voti fore se socium. Quid multa? paulo post numerus eorum ad tresdecim pene convaluit, qui de corrigendo statu vitæ suæ juxta regulam beati Benedicti immo veritatem Evangelii contendere proponebat. In vigiliis igitur apostolorum Petri et Pauli dilectus frater noster Richardus prior in quo tota pene monasterii cura pendebat, sumpto secum subpriori suo Jervasio inter suos concœnobiales nominato a religioso, rem uti agitabatur domino abbati suo familiariter exponere curavit. Itaque dominus abbas, vir utique pro sensu et ingenio suo honestus ac bonus, nimis autem simplex et illiteratus, novi rumoris miraculum exhorruit, antiquos ritus et solitas consuetudines quas pene toto orbe generalis multitudo obtinuit posse se in locello suo mutare negavit. At vero dominus prior utpote bene literatus, 'Nil rude,' inquit, 'O pater, aut novum inducere contendimus, veram et antiquam religionem beati patris nostri Benedicti, immo etiam antiquissimum evangelium Christi, quod omnes religiones et regulas antecedit, assumere et totis viribus cum gratia observare debemus; cæterorum monachorum nullos detrahimus, institutionibus eorum non invidemus, scimus quod in omni loco uni Domino servitur, uni regi militatur, et in foro, et in claustris gratia Dei eadem valet, Job etiam fortior exitit in sterquilino quam Adam in paradiso; denique quicquid beatus Benedictus instituit, ita totum Spiritus Sancti providentia destinatum est, ut nihil utilius, nihil sanctius, nihil felicius excogitari possit; cumque sciret ac prædicaret, quod socordia inimica sit animæ, certa quidem tempora ordinavit lectionis et orationis instantiæ, certa quoque tempora labori et industriæ, quatenus in altero salubriter exerceat animam, in altero carnem, in utroque vero tolleret fastidium.' Hæc quoque super adducit, 'Scurrilitates aut verba otiosa et risum moventia æterna clausura in omnibus locis damnamus, et ad tale eloquium discipulum aperire os non permittimus.' Et alibi quoque ait, 'Omni tempore debent studere monachi maximè tamen nocturnis horis. Hoc decretum quam diligenter observatum neminem latet qui nostras consuetudines nosse potuit. Euntibus namque aliis ad ecclesiam, post collationem alii recedunt vicissim ad nugas et inutiles garrulasque confabulationes, quasi non sufficiat diei malicia sua nisi et superaddatur nocti et sua.' Multa addidit præterea de ciborum insolentia, de dulci et solenni vicissitudine potationum, de pretiosa subtilitate pannorum. 'Non ita sapuit non ita docuit beatus pater noster Benedictus, ab eo quippe non color vestium, sed calor attenditur, non sapor pulmentariorum exquiritur, sed parcitate ciborum necessitas fallitur. Non agnoscit suos beatus Benedictus nisi sub regula et abbate in cœnobiis degentes. Porro si libet, o pater venerabilis, recurramus ad evangelicam puritatem, ad evangelicam perfectionem et pacem, et intueamur quam nihilum vel parum reluceat in moribus vel artibus nostris quod docuit Christus. Concupiscimus omnia, irascimur, rixamus, rapimus aliena, repetimus nostra cum lite, fraudes et mendacia defensamus, carnem et affectus ejus sequimur, nobis vivimus, nobis placemus, vinci formidamus, vicisse gloriamur, cæteros opprimimus, opprimi devitamus, cæteris invidemus, de nostris profectibus gloriamur et jocamur et ex alienis sudoribus impinguamur, et totus mundus non sufficit malitiæ nostræ. Et si videatur evangelium emortuum et impossibile in nobis, intueamur monachos Saviniacenses et Clarevallenses, qui nuper venerunt ad nos, quam clarè reluxit evangelium in illis, ut si dici fas est, utilius sit eos imitari quàm evangelium recitare; cum verò videtur sancta conversatio eorum, quasi reviviscere judicatur evangelium in illis; soli sua non repetunt, soli nihil possident unde se proximis anteferre contendunt; soli sunt qui proximorum damnum non appetunt, modica cultura terræ et usu pecorum contenti sunt, ea verò non habere appetunt nisi quam diu Deus vult, quia cum vult Deus ea auferri, non licita appetent. Eis ni fallor competit dicere, 'Nobis mundus crucifixus est et nos mundo.' Eis competit dicere, 'Dimitte nobis debita nostra sicut et nos dimittimus debitoribus nostris,' qui debitorem neminem habent à quo quicquam exigere velint. Fœlix hominum genus, quorum habitus, victus, totusque modus conversationis eorundem sapit evangelium, illorum portio solus est Deus. Illi plenè quantum humanæ facultatis est charitatem Dei et proximi implere dignoscuntur, quia soli Deo cohærentes, temporalia cuncta præter modicum et contemptibilem habitum ita planè deseruerunt, ut nihil concupiscant unde proximus sibi dignetur irasci. Non igitur, o pater, unquam possibile videatur tenere regulam beati Benedicti, quandoquidem talia Deus nobis ministravit exemplaria qui sanctis virtutibus præcesse-runt nos ut sequamur illos. Si verò propter viciniam et strepitum populorum non omnino valeamus sequi eorum puritatem, saltem modum vitæ et professionis juxta regulam nostram advertamus, propterea quod non monachi sed mortui sumus.'

In hunc modum locutus est dominus prior Richardus cum domino Galfrido abbate suo de correctione monasterii sui. Quæ verba dominus abbas non satis jucundè accepit, quia difficile est diuturnos usus amovere. Verumtamen cum se fateretur minùs perspicacem, et illiteratum, rogavit uti scripto plenius innotesceret, qualiter in loco suo talia actitari potuissent. Quod libenter amplectens non segniori studio susceptum implevit imperium. Scripsit igitur, ut non aliis colloctionibus nec pannis nec cibariis uterentur quam regula permittere videretur. Situm quoque et ordinem monasterii tam diligenter expressit, ut vix melius in eremo quam in urbe regula teneri putaretur; possessiones verò, sicut in rebus secularibus edoctus, ita fideliter ordinavit, quatenus ut in illis evangelicam justitiam vix in nullo excessisse crederetur, de redditibus siquidem ecclesiarum vel decimarum (de quarum investitura monachi 'magis reprehensibiles haberi solent) omnia suscipi et fieri legitima et canonica, consideratione episcoporum, et non nisi in usus pauperum peregrinorum hospitumve debere expendi, at verò ex legitima cultura terræ et usu pecorum monachos victitare decrevit. Quæ cum omnia cæpissent inter alios rumore notari, furor subitus multitudinis cæterorum in tantam prorupit invidiam, ut tali homini familiaribusque suis nil præter exilium deputarent vel distractam custodiam.

Tamen post multas et amicas altercationes hinc inde habitas, dominus abbas difficiliter se posse mutare referebat quod antecessores sui tenuisse videbantur, et velle super hac

re bonis uti consiliis, plenam responsionem usque post natiuitatem beatæ Mariæ protelavit. Interea cæteri fratres frustra metuentes se plus solito regulari districtione coartari, cœperunt in invidiam prioris cæterorumque Pharisæico pene more grassari, et nisi quorundam benignitate intercessisset dilatio, intestinæ persecutionis modum impetus excessisset. Interea rumor seditionis internæ inter exteriores turbas volitabat. Audiebamus sane strepitum vulgi, rei tamen ipsa veritas latebat. Cum ecce Richardus prior conjunctis secum subpriore et secretario monasterii sui totam rem uti erat nobis indicare curavit, postulabant quidem clementiam beati Petri ac nostram quatenus ad observandum quod voverant benignam opem non negare deferre, jamjamque necessitatem imminere proclamabant, præsertim quia jam conspiraverant fratres, ut si quis eorum de professione sua quicquam mussitaret, extra communionem fieret. De sociis etiam prioris vel timore vel amore vel vanitate conterritis jam ibant retro, non aliter pace restituta nisi culpam fatendo quod de servanda professione sua quicquam murmurassent. Ego igitur Turstinus Dei gratia Eboracensis dictus archiepiscopus, audiens Christi servos juxta præceptum beati Benedicti nil amoris Christi velle præponere, verebar in iis Christi gratiam offendere, si justæ petitioni eorum non curam episcopali pietate subvenire, quippe cujus officii summa est, et de monachorum religiosa quiete providere, et oppressis in necessitate condolare. Ac proinde religiosarum personarum usus consilio, dominum Galfridum abbatem et Richardum priorem cum subpriore suo ad opportuniorem locum evocavi, quatenus religiosi personis et fratrum petitionem et abbatis responsionem in bona pace consummarem. Ipsi nihil aliud quam ut prius cum multis lachrymis expectebant uti pauperem Christum in voluntaria paupertate sequerentur, et Christi crucem in corpora sua portarent, itemque evangelicam pacem regulamque beati patris Benedicti plenè observare non impedirentur. Ad hæc sanè domini abbatis licentiam opemque paternam flagitabant. At vero dominus abbas eorum operam longè fore necessariam sibi lachrymosè fatebatur, promittens quod eorum votum quia sanctum erat non impediret, opem vero quam expectebant nesciente capitulo suo promittere nullam auderet. Itaque dominus abbas cum monachis suis revertitur domum, data interim pace ac die constituta qua capitulum eorum advenire, ac religiosi adventantibus personis rem cum abbate pertractarem. Interea reliqui fratres in eorum invidiam insurgere tanto crudeliùs enitebantur, quæ ipsi votum suum explere manifestiùs appetebant. Advocantur interim fratres Majoris Monasterii et Cluniacenses monachi, qui in vicinia nostra demorantur, quatenus eis præsentibus et acclamantibus, eos velut communis ordinis desertores et violatores ab omni dignitate et cura monasterii sui reprobarent. Post abbatem namque in eorum manus summa monasterii cura fuerat delegata. Sed hæc interim. Ego igitur die statuta summo mane ad capitulum monachorum venire parabam, et jam ostii limen pene calcaveram, venientibus una viris sapientibus atque religiosi quorum nomina sunt hæc: Hugo decanus, Willielmus prior clericorum regularium de Gisburne, Willielmus thesaurarius, Hugo archidiaconus, Serlo canonicus, Aufredus capellanus meus, et canonicus, Robertus sacerdos de hospitali. Foris intra portam remanserunt equi nostri cum paucis hominibus. Denique introeuntibus nobis, ut dictum est, ostium capituli, occurrit nobis dominus abbas in ipso ostio cum monachis quibus capitulum plenissimum erat, et nisi partem clericorum qui mecum veniebant amoverem, intrare prohibuit. Vix ego respondere potui, quod cum clericis meis qui viri boni et sapientes et eorum amici erant, ad tantum negotium intrare non deberem, cum ecce totum capitulum tanto strepitu, tanto horrore personuit, ut magis seditiosus ebriorum et debacchantium hominum fremitus, quam monachorum humilitas quæ ibi nulla erat, videretur. Insurgunt plurimi et exertis brachiis velut ad luctandum advolabant, clamabant se exituros si ego intrarem. Tum ego, 'Testis inquam mihi sit Deus, quod sicut pater adveniebam, nec quicquam mali vobis inferre putaram, pacem tantum inter vos cupiens et Christianam fraternitatem: jam vero quia mihi quod episcopalis autoritatis et officii est auferre conamini, et ego quod vestræ necessitatis est itidem vobis tollo, cesset igitur ecclesia vestra.' Tum unus eorum nomine Simeon, 'Maluimus,' inquit, 'centum annis ecclesiam nostram cessare;' cui omnes assentientes, voce phreneticâ: 'capite,' inquit, 'capite.' Apprehenden-tesque priorem sociosque ejus, jam trahere incipiebant, volentes eos, sicut inter se consilium fuerat, aut in carcerem impingere aut in exilium agere. Ipsi vero, aliam qua manus eorum evaderent spem non habentes, me totis ulnis complectuntur, pacem beati Petri et nostram expetentes. Et ita vix in ecclesiam reversi sumus, illis usque in ecclesiam frementibus et proclamantibus: 'capite rebelles, apprehendite proditores.' Assedimus itaque in ecclesia et abbas cum reliquis monachis suis revertitur in capitulum suum. Interea homines abbatiae, foribus clausis et ostiis, aditus astare et velut in insidiis excubare. Tum nos (ut vera fatear) monachorum impetus metuentes, ostium ecclesiae, per quod itur in claustrum, intus observandum curavimus. Interea rumor evolat, occurrit populus. Nil tamen foris, aut dictum, aut actum est mali. Cum ergo inter monachos nulla concordia fieri potuisset, domum revertimus, abducentes nobiscum prædictos numero xij. presbyteros et subdiaconum unum, è quibus plures bene literati, omnes plenam observationem regulæ ac professionis suæ et evangelium pariter expetentes. Itaque in domo beati Petri et nostra hospitantur, nulla violentiæ adversitate à proposito deterrendi. Fratres autem abbatiae nihilominus in eorum ordine debacchantur. Abbas nescio quid acturus iter arripuit. Quocirca paternitatem vestram per Christum obsecramus, eorum partem qui ad severiora et arctiora transire cupiunt, auctoritate vestra defensare velitis. Si verò abbas eorum ad vos venerit, pro vestra a Deo data facultate et sapientia, in pacem illum reducat, et ne ejus filiorum sanctum propositum impediatur admoneatis. Quod si prævenierit et recessit, rogamus ut per præsentem nuncium literas illi exhortatorias dirigatis, ne pertinaciter adversetur illis immo potius opem conferat et opportunitatem qui Christi evangelio et regulæ beati Benedicti in veritate cupiunt obedire. Debet saltem abbas et monachi sui in hac re Ægyptios et Babylonios imitari, qui filios Israel in terram promissionis permiserunt utiliter repedare. Laban quoque Jacob ob ejus obstinationem clanculum fugientem, post crudelem persecutionem ad patrem redire permisit; neque vero desertores sed provisos censendi sunt, qui locum ubi peccandi libertas major est relinquunt, tutius Deo famulari desiderant; nempe Christus ipse detertere eos debet, qui Phariseos redarguit, eo quod nec ipsi intrent nec alios intrare sinant. Notum siquidem omnibus est, quod regula beati Benedicti toto pene et communi, ut ita dicam, orbe monachorum modum suum in omnibus prorsus amiserit et statum, adeo ut nemo satis mirari potest, quod quis audiet coram Deo et sanctis ejus, quod tanta solemnitate ipse vel quotidie negligit, sive, ut verius dicam, compellitur non observare. Cadit profecto in eos quod ait propheta, 'Populus hic labiis me honorat, cor autem eorum longe est a me.' Ut apostolus ait, 'Voce confitentur se noscere Deum, factis autem negant.' Verum fortassis, quia multi ita faciunt, frequens usus confert audaciam. Verum, quod dolens enuntio, fallitur, plane fallitur, audacia monachorum, quia multitudo peccantium non facit impunitatem scelerum. Unde non impediendi sed protegendum sunt qui regulam professionis suæ cupiunt observare, neque reprehendendi qui idcirco festinant locum mutare; neque enim Deus ex loco sed locus eligitur ex Deo. Beatus quoque Benedictus liquido contestatur, quod in omni loco uni Domino Deo servitur, uni regi militatur. In collationibus patrum, Joseph heremita sufficienter edisserit, quod ille fidem suæ professionis rectius servat, qui se ad eum locum contulerit quo dominica fidei præcepta plenius adimplere potuerit. Et quidam, Juvat nos sanctam opportunitatem appetere qui adjutor est in importunitatibus, in tribulatione. Illi verò (ni fallor) Pharisei vel hæretici judicandi sunt qui nec timent nec alios timere sinunt, quod veritas ait, 'Nisi abundaverit justitia vestra plus quam Scribarum aut Phariseorum non intrabitis in regnum cælorum: si enim angelus de cælo evangelizaverit aliter quam evangelizatum est, anathema sit.' Aliter enim evangelizat quam Christus evangelizavit, qui angelicam pacem et regulam suæ professionis observare cupientes impedire festinat. Quicumque vero ille sit refellendus vero summopere est, cum veritas dicat, 'Si oculus tuus dexter scandalizat, erue eum et proice abs te.' Nil quippe molestius læditur vel cautius observatur in corpore quam oculus. Attamen cum impedit, spiritualiter est erueundus, hoc est enim prudentem esse sicut serpentem, caput totum id est mentem subducere ab omni fallacia quæ lædit animam. Verumtamen propter scandalum infirmorum qui minus sapiunt veritatem, rogamus sanctitatem vestram et omnium qui audire voluerint hanc petitionem nostram, quatenus inter abbatem Eboracensem et sæpeditos fratres studeatis restituere pacem. Postremo meminisse debemus, quod Molismensium monachorum similis egressus Cisterciensis vitæ perfectissimam normam (quam tota pene miratur ecclesia) imprimis instituit ac fundavit, quorum puritatis ingenium venerabilis memoriæ dominus Hugo, Lugdunensis archiepiscopus Christiana pietate laudavit, sanctæ regulæ renovatione, in probatissimam integritatem fideliter adaptavit. Atque demum cum ad apostolicam notitiam æmulatorum quærimonia perveniret, domino Urbano papa secundo præserte, mandatum decretale porrigitur, quatenus solo abbate reportato ad regimen abbatiæ suæ qui pariter exierat, nemo cæterorum qui in plena observatione regulæ perseverare voluisset, impedimentum aut molestiam aliquam patere. Luce vero clarius est, quantum in eorum excellentissima conversatione totius evangelii veritas elucescit. Prolixo et pene fastidioso sermone uti sumus, quia status monachorum cæterorum fortassis haud placebit iudicio sane designandus esse videatur, ne secus quam contigit æmulatorum devulgaretur iudicio. Valeat in Christo sanctitas vestra.

Instabat adhuc abbas sollicitare servos Dei, agens per internuncios, nunc minis, nunc monitis, si quo modo vocaret abeuntes et monasterio restitueret. Manent illi omnino immobiles, surdi ad incantationem, et volubiliū instar rotarum non revertentur cum ambulant. Obfirmant faciem suam sicut euntes Jerusalem, fœdus ineunt, firmant propositum, et ambulantes coram facie sua obturant aures ne audiant sibilos incantantis. Morabantur interim cum sancto episcopo in episcopio suo feriat ab opere sed minimè otiosi in sua feriatiōe, vigiliis siquidem et orationibus vacantes, jejunia solitudinis prælibantes in civitate. Sed heu nil tutum à temptatione quamdiu vivitur in hac vita.

NUM. VIII.

De duobus Monachis retro respicientibus.

ADEST temptator qui eorum profectibus invidebat, et expetita licentia duos ex fratribus, Gervasium scilicet, et Radulphum aggreditur ad temptandum; instillat eis consilia venenosa, cogitationes infideles, horrorem solitudinis, corporis austeritatem ordinis, consuetudinem vitæ prioris. Proponit eis ascensum difficilem, lapsum gravem, statum periculis obnoxium, nova semper fore suspecta. Suadet eis ad priora reverti, reconciliari fratribus, sufficere mediocritatem pristinam, tutum semper esse in medio, 'Nec,' inquit, 'meliores estis quam patres vestri,' res profecto ardua in eremo victitare, assueta relinquere, urgere hominem ultra humanam naturam et carnis suæ cruciatibus non moveri. Quid plura? Succumbunt in temptatione, redeunt ad ollas pristinas, et abeuntes retrorsum facti sunt amicis in scandalum, æmulis in derisum. Sed Gervasius reumptis viribus redit ad castra, associatur fratribus, et apostaciæ maculam morum conversione detegit. Radulphus in remissionem se vitam recepit, non adiciens ut resurgat, inquit fœdus cum carne, et agglutinator est in terra venter ejus.

NUM. IX.

De Monasterii Assignmente et Abbatis Electione.

INTEREA instat dies Natalis Domini, et venerabilis archiepiscopus tantæ solempnitatis festa celebraturus cum suo conventu Ripponam ascendit. Ibi inter ipsa solempnia in patrimonio beati Petri habitationis ejus sedem assignat locum a cunctis retro seculis non habitatum, spinis consitum, et inter convexa montium et scopulos hinc inde prominentes, ferarum latebris quam humanis usibus magis accommodatum, et nomen loci Skeldale, hoc est, vallis rivuli ibidem defluentis. Adjecit etiam vir beatus archiepiscopus vicum unum cum agris adjacens, Butona nomine: et hoc initium matris quæ nunc Fontes nominatur. Loco igitur, ut decebat, solempniter confirmato, tractant secum de eligendo sibi abbate qui possit ingredi coram Domino quasi pater et pastor animarum suarum. Adest sanctus archiepiscopus et electioni regulariter præsertens, pari omnium voto et voluntate, Richardum priorem sibi eligunt in abbatem. Archiepiscopus in electum consentit, electionem confirmat, benedicit hominem, et hic primus abbas de Fontibus.^a Sed quid facturus est homo Dei? Monachos habet sed mansionem non habet, non est ubi se recipiat, non est ubi caput reclinet, non est ubi aeris declinet inclementiam, imbrium injuriam, et hiems erat. Agit tamen pro officio inuncto quod potest, et jactans super Dominum curam suam, contra paupertatis incommodum plenitudine fidei se armat, confidit de adjutorio Domini, et accepta benedictione pontificis cum sacro suo collegio ad solitudinis secreta secedit. Erat autem plenum pietatis spectaculum videre homines tantæ fidei tantique fervoris, ut non hiemis asperitas, non solitudinis horror, non bonorum omnium indigentia, eos a proposito deflecteret, tardaret ab inceptis. Non est pecunia in sacculis, non annona in horreis, nihil iis ad victum quotidianum, nisi quod episcopalis liberalitas interim eis procurabat, non est domus ad habitandum, non umbraculum ad declinandum, nullum sibi solatium contra hiemis inclementiam, nisi quantum prominentes hinc inde rupes præstiterint.

Quomodo sub Ulmo dormiebant et manducabant.

ULMUS erat vallis in medio, lignum frondosum, sicut est illud arboris genus, quæ cubantibus subter bestiis algorem in hyeme, in æstate fervorem frondium beneficio temperabat. Huic se conferunt viri sancti, sub umbra ejus hospitium quæsituri. Stat arbor in medio, ipsi circum excubantes, stramentis et stipulis superjectis, maliciam hyemis utcumque declinant. Erat adhuc ulmus illæsa virens foliis et fronde condensa, factura fidem posteris illa mater nostra Fontanensis ecclesia quanta ex humilitate fundationis suæ habuit originem. Nulla ibi ligna dolata, nulla saxa complanata, sed inops tugurium et pastorum quasi tabernaculum humili desuper cespite contextum. Res profecto digna memoria, videre Christi milites tirocinii sui tempore tam fiducialiter se habentes, hiemem agentes sub pellibus, in ipsum mundum mundique principem fidei constantia triumphantes. Omnes una sub ulmo decumbunt, pauper conventus sed potens in Domino, sacerdotes duodecim et unus levita. Panem illis sanctus episcopus, potum vero præterfluens rivulus pro tempore ministrabat. Nocte de more surgitur ad vigiliam, psallitur secundum regulæ institutionem, orationi intentius incumbunt, et divinis se laudibus advocant invicem exhortantes. Per diem se operi accingunt, alii multas plectentes, alii de vicina silva virgas cedentes unde oratorium construatur; quidam verò qui prudentiores fuerunt excolendis hortulis intendunt. Nec erat ibi panem sumere otiosum, nec quieti indulgere nisi labore fatigatum. Famelici accedunt ad mensam, fatigati ad lectum, satiati nunquam, sine murmure tamen. Non erat ibi videre signum tristitiæ, non murmuris audire vocem, sed cum omni alacritate benedicebant Dominum, rebus pauperes, sed fide potentes.

HIEME jam acta sub pellibus, tractant de statu suo, de modo vivendi, de observatione regulæ et forma disciplinæ. Neque enim integrum arbitrantur suum sequi spiritum, suo se committere sensui, ne fortè eis a spiritu erroris illudatur. Placet omnibus Cisterciensis ordinis sancta simplicitas et salutaris vitæ perfectio. Igitur de communi consilio dirigit nuncios ad sanctum abbatem Bernardum, significantes se Claramvallem in matrem, ipsum vero in patrem elegisse, suis in omnibus monitis obsequi, præceptis parituros. Tamen ut ab eo accipiant vivendi formam et sanctæ religionis disciplinam scribunt ei de cœnobio Eboracensi egrediendi modum, et causam, conscientiæ stimulum, conversandi propositum, persecutionem abbatis, episcopi liberalitatem. Scribit etiam pro eissanctus episcopus causam declarans et personas commendans. Suscipit nuncios vir beatus cum devotione multa, et audito plenius negotio gavisus est, gratias agit Deo. Præsentit siquidem in spiritu vir altioris consilii opus Dei esse non hominis quod tanto non potuit conamine dissipari. Petitioni igitur eorum nihil cunctatus assentit, commendans propositum et exhortans ad bravium, scribens eis epistolam consolatoriam in verba hæc.

Epistola Sancti Bernardi ad Abbatem Ricardum Fontanensem et Socios ejus.

FRATRIBUS charissimis et desideratissimis Ricardo abbatem et his qui cum eo sunt, frater Bernardus abbas Clarevallis salutem.

Quanta audivimus et cognovimus lætitia ea quæ fratres nostri G. et W. narraverunt nobis, quemadmodum noverit recaluistis igne Dei, convaluistis ab infirmitate, refluistis in novitate sancta! Digitus Dei est iste, subtiliter operans, salubriter immutans, non quidem ex malis bonos, sed ex bonis faciens meliores. Quis dabit mihi ut transeam et visionem videam hanc maximam. Neque enim minus mira minusque jucunda ista promotio est, quam illa mutatio, nisi quod facilius reperies multos seculares converti ad bonum quàm quempiam è religiosis transire ad melius. Rarissima avis in terris, ut quis de gradu quem forte in religione semel attigerit, vel parum ascendit. Vestrum proinde, dilectissimi, tam insigne quam salubre factum, non solum nos qui servi vestræ sanctitatis esse percipimus, sed et universam lætificat civitatem Dei, quippe quo rarius eo et charius. Erat autem ad cautelam vel necessarium, proximam defectui transcendere mediocritatem, et declinare teporem qui vomitum Dei provocat. Sed et sic oportebat propter conscientiam; professi siquidem sanctam regulam, an citra puritatem ejus sistere gradum tutum sit ipsi sensistis. Dolens doleo quod urgente diei malitia et nuncio festinante plenum affectum exili cogor designare stylo, et brevi carta comprehendere. Sed quod deest frater G. viva voce supplebit.

NUM. XIII.

Scribit Beatus Bernardus Epistolam Turstino Eboracensi Archiepiscopo, more suo mellifluam, commendans et justitiæ zelum, vigorem sacerdotalem, religionis amorem, pauperum defensionem, officium charitatis. Et hic tenor epistolæ.

PATRI charissimo et domino reverendo Turstino Dei gratia Eboracensi archiepiscopo, frater Bernardus abbas Clarevallis salutem plurimam dicit.

Splendor operis et opinionis odor bonæ, ut comperi, in gloria vestra convenerunt. Opinionem opus probat nec falsam fuisse nec vanam, cum quod ante sparserat ubique volans fama, ubique res ipsa facit manifestum, quomodo nunc maximè claruit zelus justitiæ, vivit et invaluit sacerdotalis vigor in defensione pauperum, et pauperum quibus non erat adjutor. Olim quidem opera misericordiæ et elemosinas vestras enarrabat omnis ecclesia sanctorum, sed hoc vobis commune cum pluribus, quippe quod a cunctis substantiam hujus mundi habentibus exigitur; verum hoc opus episcopale hoc paternæ pietatis tam egregium specimen, hic vero divinus fervor quo pro tuendis suis pauperibus ille proculdubio zelus vestrum accendit qui facit angelos suos spiritus, et ministros suos ignem urentem, hoc totum, inquam, accessit vestræ dignitatis decus insigne, officii ornamentum, corona. Aliud est reficere ventrem esurientis, et aliud sanctam zelare paupertatem, ibi enim servitur naturæ, hic gratiæ. Visitabis, inquit, speciem tuam et non peccabis. Ergo qui alienam carnem fovet, facit ne peccet: qui alienam sanctitatem honorat, fructificat sibi. Ideo ait: Detine elemosinam in manu tua donec invenias justum cui des. Quo fructu? Quoniam qui recipit justum in nomine justici mercedem justici accipiet. Solvamus proinde naturæ debitum ne peccemus: simus gratiæ coadjutores, ut et participes fieri mereamur. Sane utrumque ita in vobis admiratur, ut utrumque datum vobis desuper fateamur, quatinus divinis laudibus æternaliter misceatur quicquid a vobis temporaliter in necessitatibus nostris impenditur, merito reverende et omni amoris sinceritate colende atque amplectende pater.

NUM. XIV.

VIRO venerabili domino G. abbati ecclesiæ sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci, frater Bernardus dictus abbas Clarevallis salutem in Domino.

Placuit reverentiæ vestræ literas parvitati meæ dirigere, in quibus me super rebus dubiis consulere voluistis. Verum de his et his similibus certum quid respondere pertimescimus, quanto minus divinæ voluntatis beneplacitum tenemus. Sicut homines propius aliorum animos intuentes, si quidquam aliud quam volunt edicimus offendere dubitamus. Quod sane illis potissimum accidit quorum conscientia quasi fastidiosæ mentis angore confunditur, difficiles et angulosas impuritatis suæ contumacias affectare conatur: sed ipsa cum cæcitatibus suæ vindex est, quia dum quasi sibi adulari nititur in eo quod egit, illico recurrenti veritatis aculeo repungitur et remordetur in eo quod meminit. Cujus nimirum difficultatis ærurnam psalmista deplorans orat et dicit, 'Educa Domine de carcere animam meam ad confitendum nomini tuo.' Non me igitur (vir bone) quasi simulatæ calliditatis arguas, si minus quam velis inquisitionibus tuis respondere sufficiam, vel si quid valeam, totum tamen explicare non audeam. Literarum siquidem tuarum prima series a quæramonibus sumpsit exordium, quod videlicet senectuti tuæ grave infortunium sit, quod monachorum tuorum aliqua pars ad arctiorem et severiorem conversionis modum transire præsumsit, quia jure potius reformidare habes quod tristitia hujus seculi mortem operatur nempe si in humanis opinionibus ratio vigeat, dolendum non est, si homo creatoris sui legibus quandoque rectius inhærere præsumat. Nempe et nos quidem non satis pie paternis sollicitudinibus invigilamus si filiorum profectibus invidemus. Quocirca si consiliarium unum ex mille habere me vis, immò (ni fallor) maximè vis, consulto opus est, quatenus filiis tuis in mediocritate tecum remanentibus ne deficient attendas, cæteris vero citra professionis suæ puritatem remanere metuentibus propter conscientiam, ac de bono quod aggressi sunt semel religionis proposito ad altiore gradum transire nitentibus, juxta prophetiam cum panibus accurras, illis, maximam curam impendas ne insolescant ad ruinam, et cæteris ante benevolentiam auferas ne proficiant ad coronam. Nempe qui ascensiones in corde suo disponunt, qui de virtute eunt, Deum Deorum in Sion eo felicius videre merentur in retributione, quo summo bono familiariter adhærere studuerunt purioris conversationis ordine. Denique de duobus monachis Gervasio scilicet atque Radulpho, qui simul cum aliis domino Turstino archiepiscopo paterne et episcopaliter satagente egressi sunt, et sicut ipse testaris, te absolvente. Quando sunt dimissi certus sum si infra puritatis gradum quam ascenderunt permansissent, non perperam sed laudabiliter peregrissent. Certus quoque nihilominus sum, si velint resumere puritatis gradum, a quo tamen corruerunt, ex virtutis gratia laudabiliores erunt quam solent milites fieri post fugam ignavia, qui tanto sunt gloriosiores quanto post ignominiam in spem victoriæ ad pugnam redeunt alacriores. Et credo (ni fallor) quod absolutio quæ facta est potest interim obediri, sed apud omnipotentis Dei judicium nequit evacuari. Postremo vitam istam confiteris quidem esse sanctiorem, illos tamen propter carnis fragilitatem vel propinquitatis affectionem non posse (dicis) sustinere hujus angustiarum difficultatem. Ad hæc vero addis, eorum præsentiam tibi fore necessariam, et ideo vehementius inquiris, utrum sine culpa queant remanere in loco unde non sine scandalo sunt egressi. De qualitate inquam scandalorum discernenda, de carnis affectione propter Christum penitus amputanda, de commodis temporalibus propter animæ salutem summopere fugiendis tonat evangelium, clamat ubique tota scripturarum series, adeo ut ignorare non tam malum quam pene hæreticum sit: at verò non certus sum an eorum talis redditus absque pœnali culpa debeat æstimari. Periculosum quippe valde et gravi ruinæ proximum, præsumere de Dei misericordia contra Dei justitiam et illam velle defendere contra istam. Denique scriptura ait 'Ne adicias peccatum super peccatum et dicas, miseratio Dei magna est.' Nam et in aliis discretionis modus est cum præponderant minora majoribus sive deteriora melioribus comparantur.

fessionem. Ego (inquam) eos damnare non debeo, novit Dominus qui sunt ejus, et unusquisque onus suum portabit, quem enim tenebræ non comprehendunt cognoscetur Domino judicia faciente, in operibus manuum suarum comprehendatur peccator. De se quippe quod sibi bonum est unusquisque sentiat, ego de me dicam quod sentio. Ego Bernardus si de bonis ad meliora, vel de periculosos ad securiora voto et opere liberè pertransissem, et illicita voluntate ad ea quæ mutavi denuo redire præsumpsissem, non solum apostata, verum etiam non idoneus fieri pertimescerem. Hoc et beatus Gregorius ait. Quisquis (inquit) majus bonum subire proposuit, minus bonum quod licitum fuit sibi illicitum fecit, scriptum est enim, nemo mittens manum ad aratrum, &c. qui igitur fortiori studio intenderat, retrospicere convincitur si relictis bonis amplioribus ad minora retorqueatur.

Quod autem de excommunicatione interserere voluisti, ut mihi videtur, nec tua interfuit investigare, nec mea quicquam interest judicare, nec enim lex quemquam judicat nisi prius audiatur, nec in absentem judicium temerè pronunciat. Vale.

NUM. XV.

De Galfrido monacho quem misit sanctus Bernardus ad abbatem Richardum et conventum ut eos formam ordinis doceret.

HIS ita peractis, reversi sunt nuncii, qui Claramvallem missi fuerant, habentes in comitatu monachum quendam de monasterio Clarevallensi, Galfridum nomine, virum sanctum et religiosum; nec dubitamus de ejus perfectione qui tanti habitus est apud beatum Bernardum, destinatus a latere ejus ut primos patres doceret modum videndi secundum Cisterciensis ordinis disciplinam. Vidi hominem ætate grandævum, gravitatis modestæ, virum industrium in divinis et humanis rebus, multorum siquidem monasteriorum ordinatorem et institutor fuerat, et qui consilio sancti Bernardi perfectioris vitæ causa mutato habitu Clarevallensi se monasterio subdiderat. De quo licet digressionem faciam, quod subit interim non silebo. Erat monasterium (cujus nomen excidit) ordinandum de novo et instituendum; fratres siquidem mutato habitu pro majore puritate ad sanctæ Clarevallensis se contulerant disciplinam, et directis nunciis mitti sibi postulatum monachum ad salutaris vitæ informationem. Annuit sanctus abbas, et vocato domino Galfrido, Vade (inquit) cum viris istis et doce eos uti scis. Suscipit homo jubentis imperium, molestè tamen, asserens se annis jam gravem et ætate confectum, instare tempus resolutionis suæ, optare apud Claramvallem sortiri sepulturam. At sanctus, Vade, inquit, secure, ne metuas, ego te sepeliā hoc in loco, et factum est ita; consummato negotio Claramvallem revertitur, reversus infirmatur, et ingravescente morbo, omnibus circa eum rite peractis, sub manu sancti abbatis appositus est ad patres suos. Hic Galfridus, ut diximus, Fontes veniens susceptus est a fratribus honore condigno, et consolati sunt, ad mandatum sancti abbatis disciplinæ Cisterciensi se submittentes. Audiunt verbum ex ore senis et custodiunt illud, ad ejus consilium casas erigunt, ordinant officinas, cantantes et psallentes sicut senior eos docebat. Amplectuntur cum reverentia sanctum mandatum, et quasi cera sigillo impressa calidior suscipiunt formam institutionis sanctæ. Miratur homo Burgundiensis tantam in Anglis parcimoniam, tam celerem obedientiam, frugalitatem in victu, in moribus gravitatem. Invenit eos fortes in fide, fundatos in charitate, spe longanimes, patientissimos in paupertate. Auctus est interim numerus eorum et adjuncti sunt eis clerici et laici x. recepti in novitios secundum ordinis disciplinam. Nulla tamen adhuc aucta est possessio et nulli agri collati, nullum fuit sustentationis solatium nisi quod à sancto episcopo acceperunt.

NUM. XVI.

De inopia quam passi sunt et quomodo folia arborum et herbas agrestes coxerunt pro pulmento.

ET factum est post dies aliquot ut invaluit fames in finibus illis, et coarctati sunt viri sancti vehementer. Non sunt panes ad vescendum, not sunt sumptus ad emendum, nulla in horreis annona, et confluebat ad eos turba pauperum copiosa. Circuit abbas per loca vicina querens fratribus victum, et non fuit qui daret eis, nec ipse quippiam habuit unde compararet. Angustiae sunt undique et consilium in incerto. Loco cedere triste nimis: sedere in solitudine sine alimentis omnino impossibile. Ad extremam tandem adacti inopiam, de arboribus avellunt folia, herbas colligunt agrestes, et injecto salis modico coquunt pulmenta filiis prophetarum ulnus sub mentum, mors in olla erat, sed farina injecta amaritudinem coctionis utcumque temperabat. Sic victitabant viri sancti, olim deliciis assueti, edentes panem in pondere, et pulmentum in mensura, ipsumque amarum valde. Hi sunt patres nostri primitivi qui in sudore vultus sui plantaverunt vineam nostram, et in sanguine suo hanc hodiernam nobis sufficientiam consignaverunt. Se siquidem non sibi sed posteris vivere arbitantes, omnem illam indigentiam sobolis nascituræ solatio compensabant, certum nobis facturi documentum quanta sunt paupertatis merita quæ sic meruit exaltari.

NUM. XVII.

De pane pauperi dato et de recompensatione.

PER idem tempus die quadam peregrinus pulsabat ad januam, clamitans et petens pro Christi nomine benedictionem. Portarius verò panem se non habere respondet. Instat pauper importune prætendens et victus inopiam et vitæ discrimen. Egenus, ut videbatur, et fame confectus, negat abscedere nisi accepta benedictione, contestatus et supplicans pro Christi nomine panem sibi dari. Adjuratus portarius adit sanctum abbatem, dicens peregrinum stare præ foribus et fame confectum, petentem elemosinam, non habere se quod porrigat postulanti. Motus abbas ad clamorem pauperis, vocat fratrem qui panibus præerat ut petenti tribuat benedictionem. Ille se ad totius familiæ victum nihil habere respondet nisi tantum duos panes et dimidium, et hos carpentariis apponendos qui in instanti erant commessuri. Et tu (ait abbas) panem unum da pauperi, quod reliquum est operariis reserva, nobis autem provideat Dominus sicut vult. Tulit ille panem et abiit. Et ecce duo viri de castro vicino (cui nomen Knaresborough) astiterunt præ foribus trahentes redam onustam panibus ex similia munda. Audierat enim nobilis vir Eustachius filius Johannis, de fratribus, quod laborarent inopia, et misit eis de mensa sua benedictionem. Vere bonus Dominus et munificus in retribuendo, qui panem cibarium tot similaginibus compensavit. Nunciatum est abbati et fratribus, agnitum est Dei donum et benedixerunt Domino qui dat escam timentibus se. Sic Deo procurante et vicinis ministrantibus, ætatem transigunt in paupertate multa et patientia, tempore novorum instante fruges colligunt et comportant in horreum: modicum nimis ad monasterii sustentationem, neque enim multum erat metere ubi modicum seminabatur.

NUM. XVIII.

De solatio eis facto per Hugonem decanum Eboracensem.

LABORABANT fratres per biennium sub gravi paupertate, nec jam spes ulla solatii, nisi quod Dominus deficere nescit sperantibus in se. Abbas jam pene desperans dominum Clarevallensem adit, paupertatis prætendens discrimen et loci incommoditatem, postulans se cum suis recipi in partibus illis qui in sede propria fructificandi jam spem nullam haberent. Movetur super his sanctus Bernardus ad compassionem, et consilio cum suis inito, grangiam quandam domus suæ cum agris adjacentibus eis assignare disposuit, ubi se interim reciperent donec eis commodiùs provideret. Dominus autem meliùs procuravit, dispensans pietate mirabili ut summum Clarevalli servaretur prædium, et Clarevallensibus compassio cederet ad meritum, et indigentibus solatium aliunde proveniret. Abbate siquidem in transmarinis agente, contigit infirmari virum nobilem Hugonem, decanum Eboraci, hominem magnarum rerum et multis opibus ampliatus. Et misit Dominus in cor ejus consilium bonum, ut se cum suis omnibus monasterio de Fontibus conferret. Et factum est ita; erat autem homo dives non solum in pecunia numerata et possessione mobilium, sed et in libris scripturarum sanctarum quos Domino procurante multis sibi sumptibus et studio comparaverat, et hic primus qui armariolum de Fontibus felici auspicio suscitavit. Confortati sunt fratres in his quæ acciderant, et donum Dei intelligentes, apportatam pecuniam prudenter dispensabant. Pauperum usibus pars prima dedicatur, et pars altera fabricæ deputatur, residuum monasterio in sanctorum usibus reservatur. Revertens abbas invenit rem meliuscule se habentem, fratres pro tempore commodiùs agentes, et universum domus statum in melius commutatum.

NUM. XIX.

De Serlone Canonico Eboracensi.

ET addidit Dominus ut benediceret eis. Clericus quidam, Serlo nomine, Eboracensis ecclesiæ canonicus infirmatus est usque ad mortem: erat autem dives in possessione auri et argenti. Non multo post concanonicus ejus, Tosti nomine, se cum omni substantia sua sacro illi conventui sociavit. Receptus in numerum, secundum ordinis disciplinam vixit ibi per annos aliquot, homo jucundus et sociabilis in conversatione, et cursu consummato quievit in senectute bona.

NUM. XX.

Quis contulit eis grangiam de Mortar et forestariam quæ dicitur Warkesale.

Post dies aliquot miles quidam ex vicinia, Robertus nomine, cognomento de Sartis, mulierem quandam, Rachevillam nomine, in uxorem sibi desponsavit cum quibusdam terris quæ ei de jure contingebant. Ambo pariter divinitus inspirati, villam suam, Harleshows nomine, cum agris adjacentibus, et forestariam quæ Warkesale dicitur, donatione solenni monasterio de Fontibus contulerunt. Sepulti sunt inibi sepultura justorum; et memoria eorum apud nos in benedictione.

NUM. XXI.

Quis dedit grangiam de Caiton.

FUIT in tempore illo juvenis quidam ex domo regis, dictus Serlo de Pembroke, habens in vicinia nostra villam quandam Caiton nomine, quam ex dono regis habebat. Infirmatus vocat dominum abbatem de Fontibus, et in extremis agens, villam quam ex dono regis tenuit monasterio de Fontibus contulit inperpetuum possidendam. Confirmat rex donationem, et redacta est villa in grangiam perutilem usque hodie ad monasterii sustentationem. Mortuus est idem Serlo apud Fontes, et inter sanctos sortitus est sepulturam. Non multo post tempore adeptus est abbas Aldebroughe cum pertinentiis suis grangiam utilem et frugibus valde accommodam. A die illo et deinceps benedixit Deus vallibus nostris benedictione cæli desuper et abyssi subjacentis, multiplicans fratres, adjiciens possessiones, dilatans vineam et dans ei pluvias benedictionis. Misit igitur, secundum prophetam, radicem deorsum, et fecit fructum sursum, consurgens indies et ex seipsa semper robustior facta, brevi in vineam grandem, et Dominus erat illi pro muro à dextris et à sinistris, non permisit hominem nocere eis, et jumenta eorum non moriuntur, operibus manuum earum benedixit, possessio eorum crevit in terra, et confluerunt ad eos viri quorum tetigerat corda Deus, et veterem deponentes hominem in novam renascuntur creaturam. Et aucta est domus exterius in possessione, interiùs vero personis. Per idem tempus ego Serlo valedicens seculo Fontes me contuli sanctæ religionis habitum suscepturus. Deus bone, quanta tunc apud Fontes vitæ perfectio! Quanta virtutis æmulatio! Quis fervor ordinis! Quæ forma disciplinæ! Egressi enim patres nostri primitivi de domo opulenta, omnem temporalium affluentiam virtutis plenitudine adæquarunt. Spectaculum siquidem facti angelis et hominibus, illam sanctæ religionis formam suis posteris impresserunt quæ auctore Domino usque hodiè in modernis illæsa perdurat.

NUM. XXII.

De foundatione Novi Monasterii.

ANNO quinto foundationis monasterii de Fontibus, vir nobilis Ranulphus de Merlay Fontes visurus accessit. Videns fratrum conversationem compungitur homo, et inspirante Domino, pro redemptione animæ suæ locum quandam in patrimonio suo ad monasterium construendum assignat. Suscipit oblationem sanctus abbas, et ædificiis inibi de more dispositis abbatiam construxit, quam Novum monasterium nominavit. Et hæc prima filia Fontanensis ecclesiæ, unica adhuc matri suæ. Anno quinto foundationis suæ, mense primo, quinto nonas Januarii, emittitur conventus de domo Fontium ad Novum monasterium, cum abbate Roberto, viro sancto et religioso, monacho quondam de Witheby, qui de cœnobio Eboracensi egredientibus se sociavit. Multa de hoc viro audivimus digna relatu proprium de se habitura tractatum, erat autem modestus in gestu, mitis in convictu, misericors in judiciis, singularis in sancta conversatione, multis annis præfuit et profuit pater pius et pastor egregius, et conversationem sanctam sanctiori fine complevit. Beatus Godricus (sicut in vita ipsius legitur) nocte quadam inter orandum hujus sancti animam carne solutam angelorum manibus in cœlestia videt deferri. Sic se habuit Novi monasterii initium. Et hic primus palmes qui de vinea nostra processit. Semen sanctum solo coaluit, et quasi fertilis terræ gremio susceptum, continuo excrevit in culmum, et de granis paucis surrexit seges copiosa. Matris enim suæ fecunditatem æmulata concepit et peperit tres filias, Pipewellam, Saleiam, et Rupem. Et adjicit Dominus dilatare vineam in territorio Lincolnensi. Homo quidam nobilis, Hugo nomine, filius Eudonis cœnobium ordinis Cisterciensium se voverat constructurum. Vocat abbatem de Fontibus, et ejus consilio hæreditatem suam cum Domino dividens locum quandam opportunum cui nomen Kirkesteade divinis usibus consecravat.

NUM. XXIII.

De Parco-lude.

EODEM tempore Alexander bonæ memoriæ Lincolnensis episcopus locum quandam Haverholme nomine, ad abbatiam nostri ordinis construendam in manus ejusdem abbatis de Fontibus consignavit. Suscipit abbas offerentium munera, et de divino præsumens adjutorio, missis fratribus ad utrumque locum, ædificia construxit, erigit officinas anno vij. foundationis domus de Fontibus. Rebus pro tempore convenienter dispositis, una die quarto scilicet nonas Februarii, emissi sunt duo monachorum conventus, alter sub abbate Roberto de Snella, ad monasterium de Kirkesteade, alter apud Haverholme sub abbate Gervasio, et hi ambo de primis patribus erant, qui de cœnobio Eboracensi egressi in sudore vultus sui hanc vineam plantaverunt. Displicuit fratribus qui apud Haverholme missi fuerant de sede habitationis suæ, et commutatione facta locum alterum quem Parco-lude nominant, de manu episcopi receperunt. Cecidit semen in terram bonam, et surrexit in messem copiosam, et facti sunt in gentem magnam.

NUM. XXIV.

De Alberico Hostiensi episcopo, apostolicæ sedis legato.

ET factum est in diebus illis ut Albericus, Hostiensis episcopus, à latere domini papæ ad Anglicanas partes legatus accederet. Occurritur ei a rege et regno, et inter ceteros abbas Fontanensis vocatus accedit. Suscepit eum legatus cum honore condigno, et advertens hominem literatum et prudentem, familiarem admodum habuit, et injuncti officii adiutorem, invenit hominem in consiliis providum, in judiciis discretum, sollicitum in his quæ Dei sunt, et in scripturis sacris non mediocriter eruditum. Et visum est Romanis tantum virum innotescere, assistere domino papæ, non debere lucernam talem sub modio latere. Denique peracta legatione renitentem trahit ad curiam, volens eum ad majoris administrationis officium promoveri. Sed Dominus melius providit ei, et fidelis servi sudores remunerans, transtulit eum ex peregrinatione ad patriam, à Romanorum obsequio ad requiem diu desideratam. Romam veniens febre corripitur, et in via obedientiæ votum terminans peracto cursu in pace consummatur.

Hæc sunt quæ ex ore senis accepi de origine Fontanensis ecclesiæ, annotatis ex ordine rebus gestis usque ad dormitionem venerabilis Richardi primi abbatis. Quæ sequuntur sequens libellus explicabit.

Nunciatum est, quod venerabilis abbas Richardus in Domino quievit, contristati sunt fratres de tanti patris casu, sed molestiam mœstitudinis majoris fide moderantur. Solvunt homini humanitatis debitum et revertentem ad patriam pietatis obsequiis prosequuntur. Tractant exhinc de successionem et de successore substituendo qui secundum legem suscitaret semen fratris defuncti. Dirigunt nuncios ad abbatem Clarevallensem, et de ejus consilio et assensu, invocato Spiritu Sancto, communi omnium voto virum venerabilem Richardum priorem eligunt in abbatem. Hic est ille Richardus, Eboracensis cœnobii quondam sacrificus, homo simplex et rectus et timens Deum, cujus exhortatione sacer ille conventus, relictis ollis pristinis, ad solitudinis secreta conscendit. Erat autem graciosus coram hominibus, spiritu fervens, et totius religionis ardentissimus æmulator. Virtus animi in vultu radiabat, et ipse homo exterior interioris imaginem præ se ferebat.

NUM. XXV.

De gratia quam habuit in confessionibus recipiendis.

INTER cætera dona quæ à Deo acceperat homo sanctus, singularem habuit gratiam in confessionibus recipiendis conscientiarum scrutator mirabilis et spiritualium vulnerum curator. Et hæc erat causa quædam præcipua quæ omnium in se trahebat affectus, devotionem excitabat; nihil ita occultum quod non ipse suadendo eliceret; nihil ita induratum quod non ipso loquente liquesceret. Nemo tam frigidus qui non ad ejus incalesceret exhortationem. Deum testor, non inveni tantam in quovis gratiam, ad mœstum consolandum, ad lapsum relevandum, et ad læsæ conscientie latentes causas cognoscendum. Sæpe dum ad pedes ejus de conscientia loquuturus accessi, prævenit me in his quæ dicturus eram, et quasi mentis meæ faciem descriptam videret, sic animi mei statum me stupente ad liquidum depinxit. Electus in abbatem onus illud invitus accepit, spiritualibus siquidem deliciis deditus occupationes molestè admisit, ægrè ferens post delicatas Rachel amplexus lippientis fœminæ faciem intueri. Durum illi valde videtur in exteriora descendi, et in cordis sanctuarium suscipere curas alienas. Agit tamen pro adjuncto officio, et inter duo divisus in alteram partem propensius cedebat. Partes Marthæ pro necessitate exequitur, ad Mariæ otium ex animo suspirabat. Vacabat interiùs quantum licuit, et Dominus exterius pro eo vigilabat, dirigens virum in omnibus viis suis. Et aucta est domus in diebus suis numero fratrum et incrementis possessionum. Sæpe suam causabatur hebitudinem et imperitiam accusabat, minus se sufficientem judicans et propter meritorum inopiam et quia minus sibi eloquens videretur, erat enim linguæ impeditioris quoties in concione loquebatur; sed hanc illi tarditatem non sermonis imperitia sed verecundia naturalis effecit. Quatuor annos agebat in officio pastoralis gemens sub sarcina quam invitus gestabat, et cœpit eum tædere occupationum suarum, statuens secum et deliberans ne ulterius villicaret. Adit sanctum patrem Bernardum semel secundò et tertiò, rogans dimitti in pace, absolvi ab administratione, licere sibi in Clarevalli suæ vocationis diem præstolari. Monet eum sanctus ab incœptis desistere, non se sui juris esse, tenere gradum vocationis suæ et commissis ovibus pastorem sollicitudinem exhibere. Instat ille attentius, supplicans se ab hoc onere relaxari, non posse ulterius in hoc gradu ministrare. Victus tandem petentis importunitate pater sanctus annuit eum absolvi, si tamen cum assensu fratrum id fieri possit. Scribitur itaque sub certa forma se ad petentis instantiam, si tamen conventus concederet abbatem ab officio pastoralis relaxare, alioqui nil in conventus præjudicium, nil præter monachorum consensum super hoc statui vel concedi. Redit cum his literis abbas Ricardus, sperans de facili fratrum animos pro voto inclinare, et insperantibus nobis in vigilia Pentecostis monasterium de Fontibus ingressus est. Gavisus sumus ex adventu ipsius, et Spiritus Sancti solennia cum spirituali transeamus jucunditate. Ipse cuncta dissimulat, cuncta suppressit, usque in quartum diem, veritus ne audito negotio, illa tanta festivitas minus festivè ageretur. Post quartum, literas profert in medium, ostendit desiderium, requirit assensum. Contristatus sumus super hoc mandato, et mutata facie tota hæc nostra exultatio clauditur in mœrore. Tunc vox omnium unà clamantium, nunquam se præbituros assensum, gratias agentes sancto abbati Bernardo super adjecta in literis conditione. Unus autem ex fratribus Hugo de Marthon surgit in medium, et petita venia dominum abbatem his verbis appellavit: 'Domus ista quam donante Deo regendam suscepistis, à fundatione sua ea semper pace floruisse dignoscitur, ut internam ejus tranquillitatem nulla unquam turbaret tempestas, nulla hostis antiqui invidia fascinaret. Nescit scismatum incommoda, nescit dissensionis zizania; terra sancta est et scandalorum spineta non gignit. Sic sibi hactenus in unitate Spiritus caput et corpus cohæserunt, ut divisionis gladium non sentiant quæ tantæ necessitudinis nodo copulantur. Miramur proinde super hac novitate profana, quæ caput à membris molitur disjungere, et nostræ si quæ est religionis lucernam conatur extinguere. Denique quis non scandalizetur audiens abbatem de Fontibus suos deseruisse professos, patrem filios, pastorem oves sibi commissas; alius in nos culpam inobedientiæ refundet, alius levitatis et inconstantie notam impinget. Præterea, si paupertatis urgeret incommodum possit fors hanc nota deleri. Nunc verò quod negari non potest, aucta est domus in diebus tuis et numero fratrum et incrementis possessionum. Viget intus fervor ordinis, et forma disciplinæ, foris pax et securitas à Domino ministratur, res autem periculi est ad tantam gratiam ingraturum inveniri. Quod si te occupationis cura molestat, nos quieti tuæ providebimus; vaca tibi interiùs prout placet, nos, authore Deo, de exterioribus curam geremus. Sile, sile, et sanctifica Sabatha tua, tamen ne nos deseras quos sine scandalo deserere non potes. Monachi tui sumus, alium nescimus abbatem, alium quoad tu vixeris non admittemus. Stat immota sententia, propositum immutabile, nullâ te à nobis ratione patiemur avelli.' His dictis, abbas modicum secum deliberans, 'Putavi,' inquit 'aliam apud vos gratiam invenisse; jam verò ulterius super hæc negotia vos non conveniam; sed hoc vobis fidenter denuncio, quod hoc anno ab hac ministratione absolvar.' Et ita factum est ipso anno. Redeunte tempore, ad caput generale iturus, ascendit, Claramvallem veniens, infirmatur, et ingravescente morbo, sub manu sancti abbatis Bernardi exuens hominem appositus est ad patres suos, et adimpletus est sermo quem dixit. Quoniam oportet hoc anno Ricardum absolvi.

MORTUO rege Henrico filio Willielmi cognomento Bastard, anno incarnationis Dominicæ mccccvj. turbatum est regnum, commota est terra, et surgentibus aliis in alios facta est confusio magna in populo, nec fuit qui cohiberet. Et serrexit Stephanus Blesensis, comes Moretoniæ, nepos regis Henrici ex sorore sua, et multo stipatus milite imposuit sibi diadema. Adjuvabat partes illius frater ejus Henricus, Wintoniensis episcopus, apostolicæ sedis legatus, homo magni nominis juxta nomen eorum qui sunt in terra. Pars magna populi Stephanum sequebatur, pars autem altera Matildem imperatricem filiam regis Henrici, et facta est grandis concertatio propter regnum. Mortuus est in tempore illo piæ recordationis dominus Turstinus, Eboracensis archiepiscopus, et dissidente clero facta est contentio non modica de alio substituendo. Convenientibus siquidem clericis ad electionem faciendam, pars major numero Willielmum thesaurarium in archiepiscopum elegit, pars verò sanior appellatione interposita reclamavit. Fuerunt autem qui reclamaverunt viri graves et religiosi abbates, priores, archidiaconi, et decani, quorum unus erat Ricardus abbas Fontanensis. Ipse tamen Willielmus ad tempus obtinuit, amicitia functus potentum, fretus regia potestate, favente episcopo Wintoniensi Henrico, qui ei manus imposuit et in episcopum consecravit, pallium tamen, procurante adversa parte, impetrare non potuit. Erat autem homo alti sanguinis, multis virtutibus adornatus, dignus omnino qui cathedra præsideret, si magis canonica fuisset ipsius electio. Scripsit contra eum beatus Bernardus ad papam Innocentium, qui tunc rerum summam regebat, cujus adhuc extant epistolæ. Et facta est dissensio magna in ecclesia Eboracensi diebus multis.

De Abbate Henrico Clarevallensi.

DEFUNCTO interim apud Clarevallem abbate de Fontibus, Ricardo secundo, tractat secum sanctus abbas Bernardus de pastore substituendo qui præsit ovibus destitutis. Inito consilio cum suis Clarevallensibus, virum venerabilem dominum Henricum de Valleclare, abbatem ad Anglicanas partes transmittit, vices suas tam in ordinatione quam in exequenda visitatione illi committens. Scribit etiam domino Alexandro priori, et conventui de Fontibus consolatoriam epistolam sub his verbis.

NUM. XXVIII.

Epistola consolatoria ad Conventum de Fontibus.

DILECTISSIMIS in Christo fratribus, Alexandro priori, et conventui de Fontibus, frater Bernardus, Clarevallis abbas salutem et matris qualiscumque orationes.

Venerabilis pater vester cursum consummavit et obdormivit in Domino. Ego verò licet omni tempore paterna pro vobis charitate tanquam pro visceribus sollicitus, nunc tanto pro vobis majorem sollicitudinem gero, quanto major incumbit necessitas. Unde et jamdudum misissem ad vos, nisi quod expectabam donec id opportuniùs commodiùsque facere possem, eo quod venerabilis abbas Henricus citiùs ad vos venire non potest, quibusdam negotiis occupatus, quem præcipuè destinare proposueram ab initio, eo quod ipse utilior et huic negotio magis idoneus videretur. Hunc igitur fratres dilectissimi cum eo honore et amore suscipite quo dignus est, et sic eum audite in omnibus sicut meipsum; immò tanto amplius quanto ille meritis et prudentia antecellit. Ei siquidem et in facienda electione et in omnibus quæcumque in monasterio illo, vel in cæteris quæ ex eo exierunt, ordinanda fuerunt, omnino vicem nostram commisi. Misi autem cum eo fratrem nostrum Gualterum, qui est filius noster dilectissimus. Et nunc obsecro vos tanquam filios charissimos ut in electione vestra id ipsum sapiatis, et non sint in vobis scismata, sed unanimes uno ore glorificetis Dominum qui non est dissensionis Dominus sed pacis, et in pace factus est locus ejus. Et dicit, qui non diligit dispergit. Absit enim ab his qui in schola Christi degunt sub magisterio Spiritus Sancti, ut gaudeat inimicus de eis et eorum dissensione gloriatur, quod et ipsorum animæ periclitentur, et frustra depereat tantus pœnitentiæ labor et fœtere faciat odorem bonum ordinis boni, et per eos nomen Christi blasphemetur per quos maximè fuerat glorificandus. Imò verò sic bene de vobis confidimus sicut decet sanctos, sicut oportet servos Christi: unanimiter obsecro eligit idoneum pastorem animarum vestrarum una cum abbatibus de Rievallie et de Valleclare, quorum consilio volo vos in omnibus acquiescere tanquam nostro.

DILECTISSIMO fratri et coabbati suo Henrico frater Bernardus abbas Clarevallis salutem et orationes. Præcipio tibi frater Henrice, ut si in te convenerit electio fratrum nostrorum de Fontibus, cum consilio venerabilis abbatis Rievallis non refutes sed obedias in charitate, quod quidem invitatus facio, sciens mihi ex tua absentia magnum consilium deperire; sed convenientibus in unum contradicere timeo, credens à divino exiisse sermone istum in quo tota religiosorum vota concordant, cum legerim in evangelio, 'Ubi duo vel tres congregati sunt in nomine meo, in medio eorum sum dicit Dominus.' Age igitur charissime, et suscipe professiones eorum, et de cætero curam eorum habe tanquam pastor animarum, et ne timeas pro ea domo quam regendam suscepisti, ego enim Deo volente utilem ei providebo dispensatorem, illa mihi namque vicinior est; sed neque pro episcopo dubites obedire, super me illud dimitte.

VENIENTES igitur qui missi fuerunt à sancto abbate Bernardo apud Fontes, suscepti sunt honore condigno. Literæ domini Clarevallensis proferuntur in medium, conventus reverenter obedit, et invocato Spiritu Sancto prædictum Henricum de communi omnium assensu sibi eligunt in abbatem. Hic est ille Henricus qui de abbate in archiepiscopum postmodum electus Eboracensi metropoli non minus utiliter quam laudabiliter præsidebat. Homo magnanimus et in causa injustitiæ omnino invincibilis, eligens magis pro justitia periclitari, quam ut justitia se præsentī periclitetur. Curam igitur suscepti regiminis magnificè administravit, evellens et destruens quicquid in agro dominico inventum est alienæ plantationis, succidit lucos, excelsa destruit, fodet parietes, et scrutatus Jerusalem est in lucernis. Erant siquidem adhuc ipso veniente, levitatis quædam idola in tabernaculo Jacob de domo Laban latenter asportata. Et inventæ sunt res quædam peculiares præter licitum penes quosdam ex fratribus secundum consuetudinem quam à prima matre traxissent. Sed ubi sanctus veritatis domum, investigat abscondita, et conflavit in unum quicquid manus avaritiæ contra formam ordinis in partes distraxerat. Hic primus Fontanenses nostros ad perfectam ordinis puritatem redegit, et erasa rubigine vitæ prioris, secundum Clarevallis consuetudines salutare instituit formam disciplinæ. Ab illo die deinceps æmulata est filia matris perfectionem in regularibus exercitiis et religiosa conversatione. Et aucta est domus in diebus illis intus et extra. Et adjectæ sunt grangiæ tres Catona, Kilnesaia, et Martona.

NUM. XXXI.

Quando et per quem fundata sit Domus de Woburne.

Er adjecti Dominus ampliare gentem suam et dilatare terminos possessionis ejus. Erat vir quidam, dictus Hugo de Bolebecke, homo potens et magnarum rerum, inspiratus à Domino ut monasterium construeret ordinis Cirterciensis. Venit Fontes, et consilio domini Henrici abbatis viculum quendam, Woburniam nomine, in Lincolnienſi diœcesi cum agris adjacentibus divinis usibus consecravit. Suscepit abbas munus de manu divitis, et ædificiis de more constructis ad locum ipsum fratres regulares destinavit. Anno mxcxlv. Incarnationis Domini, foundationis monasterii Fontanensis xiii. divisus est monachorum conventus sub abbate Alano ad locum qui nunc Woburne nominatur.

NUM. XXXII.

Quando et per quem fundata est Domus de Lisa.

Et factum est post dies alios ut episcopus Bergensis de Norwagia ad Anglicanas partes accederet, venit Fontes, et ignota religionis forma permotus, magna precum instantia supplicans, ad eum monachorum conventum transmitti postulavit. Annuit abbas, et inito consilio conventum monachorum sub abbate Ranulpho cum episcopo Norwagiæ transmittit. Annus ab Incarnatione Domini mxcxlvj. hic erat, foundationis vero monasterii de Fontibus xiii. quando conventus Norwagiam ad monasterium cui nomen Lisa, vi. idus Julii directus est. Hic Ranulphus ex primis patribus fuit, homo verendus et plenus dilectione. Monasterium illud per dies multos regebat, et gentem barbaram docuit mansuescere sub jugo Christi. Dimissus tamen per licentiam domini Fontanensis revertitur ad suos, et consummato feliciter cursu vitæ, grandævus et plenus dierum quievit in pace. Multa de eo dicuntur digna memoria, quod fuerat sanctitatis eximiæ, consolationis immensæ, habens gratiam revelationis et spiritum prophetiæ. Angelum etiam dicitur habuisse sibi deputatum, cujus visitationibus crebro consolatus, etiam si somno forsitan per noctem diutius indulgeret, excitari solebat.

ANNO mxcxlvj. Incarnationis Dominicæ, homo quidam nobilis, Henricus de Laceio nomine, in territorio Eboracensi monasterium ordinis nostri suscipit construendum, assignat locum, erigit officinas, et mittitur ad eum monachorum conventus sub abbate Alexandro. Iste Alexander unus erat ex primis patribus nostris, frater uterinus domini Richardi abbatis de Fontibus, qui apud Clarevallem ut dictum est, quievit in pace. Inter hos monachos ego Serlo emissus sum, homo jam decrepatus, ut ipse vides, et ætate confectus. Locum habitationis nostræ primo Barnolswet dicebatur, quem nos mutato nomine Montem Sanctæ Mariæ fecimus nominari. Mansimus ibi per aliquot annos, multa perpersi incommoda famis et frigoris, tum quia turbato regno bona nostra multoties diriperent grassatores, tum propter aeris inclementiam et imbrium importunitatem, quæ in finibus illis (ut nosti) et fruges destruunt et habitatores reddunt egenos. Displicuit proinde nobis locus habitationis nostræ, et abbatia in grangia redacta, ex assensu et consilio Henrici fundatoris nostri, ad alterum locum migravimus qui nunc Kirkestall nominatur. Anno xv. foundationis monasterii de Fontibus, xiv. cal. Junii emissi sumus sub abbate Alexandro, xii. monachi et x. conversi.

De Valle Dei.

ANNO Incarnationis Dominicæ mclxvij. in territorio Lincolnensi fundata est Bitham, quæ mutato in melius nomine nunc Vallis Dei vocatur. Domus inclyta et secundum nomen suum plena benedictione. Fundator ejus fuit Willielmus, comes Albemariæ, qui postmodum Melsam fundavit: vir magni nominis et clarissimus in generatione sua. Anno xv. foundationis monasterii de Fontibus missus est conventus monachorum sub abbate Warino ad locum qui nunc Vallis Dei nominatur x. cal. Junii ipso anno foundationis nostræ.

NUM. XXXV.

De Foundatione Domus Melsæ.

ANNO Incarnationis Domini mcl. in territorio Eboracensi fundata est abbatia quæ Melsa vocatur. Domus opulenta frugibus, et exuberans in his quæ nascuntur aquis, in omnibus accommoda nisi quod in hyeme difficilis est accessus. Fundator ejus erat Willielmus, comes Albemariæ. Anno xix. foundationis monasterii Fontanensis, quinto cal. Januarii missus est Melsam conventus monachorum sub abbate Ada. Et hæc novissima filiarum quas genuit mater nostra, et cessavit iterum parere. Hæc sunt cognationes papæ nostri, hæc soboles sanctæ matris nostræ. Septem genuit filias, quinque nepotes suscepit ex eis, videns filias filiarum suarum quartam usque generationem.

NUM. XXXVI.

De Electione Archiepiscopi Willielmi et contradictione.

LABORABAT per idem tempus Eboracensis ecclesia disensione gravi, nec erat qui finem rebus imponeret: pars magna cleri archiepiscopum Willielmum sequebatur, pars altera nitebatur in contrarium. Ipse tamen cathedræ præsidebat usus regia potestate in eos qui resistebant. Innocentius papa rebus intermin humanis exiit, et substitutus est pro eo papa Celestinus; quo brevi è medio sublato, Eugenius, Claravallensis cœnobii quondam monachus, summus pontifex creatus est. Eugenio igitur rerum summa tenente, insurrexerunt in archiepiscopum qui eum accusabant abbates priores et viri religiosi cum archidiaconis et clero, quorum unus erat abbas Fontium, Henricus, præsumentes in favore summi pontificis, trahunt hominem ad curiam. Ubi etiam auditis hinc inde propositis, judicante papa Eugenio, è cathedra Eboracensi amotus est. Indignati sunt super dejectione sua qui Willielmi partes fovebant, et confusionem suam ferre non valentes, nefandos sibi ausus assumunt. Conglobati siquidem milites qui de ipsius cognatione erant in manu copiosa, in abbatem de Fontibus, Henricum, quasi in suæ dejectionis authorem, conjuratione facta, strictis gladiis insurgunt. Et invaluit eo usque scelerosa præsumptio, quod in ipsius odium monasterium cui præfuit evertere non reverentur. Veniunt Fontes in manu armata, et effractis foribus ingrediuntur sanctuarium cum superbia, irruunt per officinas, diripiunt spolia, et non invento quem quærebant abbate, sancta illa ædificia grandi labore constructa subjectis ignibus redigunt in favillam. Non defertur altari. Stat prope sacer ille conventus, et ædificia sudore suo constructa, non sine cordis dolore videt flammis involvi, cineres mox futura. Solum illis in tanto discrimine oratorium cum officinis contiguus, orationis, ut creditur, usibus reservatur, ipsumque semiustum sicut torris raptus ex incendio. Abbas sanctus ante basim altaris prostratus orationi incumbit. Non videtur ab aliquo, non læditur ab aliquo, manus enim Domini protexit eum. Cedunt milites scelere peracto, portantes secum spolia; parum quidem pecuniæ sed plurimum damnationis. Sed, ne diu super impietate sua gauderent facinorosi, aggravata est manus Domini super eos, plaga namque inimici percussit illos, castigatione crudeli, et mortui sunt in peccatis suis, alii tabe consumpti, alii aquis suffocati, alii versi in amentiam, alii cladibus diversis extincti, omnes ferè irreconciliati. Abbas vero et monachi confortati in Domino quasi resumptis viribus post naufragium navigationem instaurant, lapsa reparant, ruinosam reformat, et sicut scriptum est, 'lateres ceciderunt, sed quadris lapidibus reædificabant.' Adjuvabant eos ex vicinia viri fideles. Et consurgit fabrica longè festivior quam ante fuit.

NUM. XXXVII.

De Creatione Henrici Murdacke in Archiepiscopum Eboracensem.

AMOTO (ut dictum est) a sede Eboracensi Willielmo, venerabilis abbas de Fontibus, Henricus, ex assensu sanioris partis in archiepiscopum electus est. Claramvallem ascendit visurus sanctum abbatem Bernardum, è cujus consilio totus ipse pendebat. Inde profectus papam Eugenium Treveris invenit, a quo et honorificè susceptus est. Consentit dominus papa in electum, cujus manu consecratur in archiepiscopum, et accepto pallio, cum favore sedis Romanæ infultus ad propria redit. Multas tamen molestias et difficultates passus in initio pontificatus sui; regis indignationem, bonorum distractionem, adversantium insidias, civium contradictionem. Cives enim Eboraci, vulgus semper ignobile, oderunt eum, et conjuratione facta, interdixerunt ei ingressum civitatis. Venit ad suos, et sicut de Judæis scriptum est, sui domum non recipiunt. Divertit ergo Rippon, dans locum iræ donec deferviret regis indignatio. Vicit itaque sapientia maliciam, mansuetudine furorem, et indignationem regiam patientia fregit.

NUM. XXXVIII.

De Abbate Mauricio.

VACABAT interim domus Fontanensis. Sed venerabilis archiepiscopus accedens, monachus quandam Rievallensem, Mauricium nomine, creavit in abbatem. Hic Mauricius non tres pene menses apud Fontes moram faciens resignata cura in manus archiepiscopi, redit ad locum unde assumptus est.

NUM. XXXIX.

De Abbate Thoroldo.

SUCCESSIT Mauricio abbas Thoroldus, de monasterio Rievallensi æquè assumptus. Homo in scripturis sacris non mediocriter eruditus et in liberalibus artibus sufficienter edoctus, duobus annis præfuit monasterio Fontanensi, multa pro potestate agens, quædam etiam contra consilium et voluntatem archiepiscopi venerabilis præsumens, unde etiam orta inter eos simultate, de mandato sancti patris Bernardi, resignato officio, Rievallensem reversus est.

NUM. XL.

De creatione Abbatis Richardi.

CEDENTE itaque ab administratione abbate Thoroldo, vacabat iterum ecclesia Fontanensis destituta pastore. Convenientes igitur in unum quorum interfuit de electione tractare, de communi consilio dirigunt nuncios ad sanctum patrem Bernardum, omnem curam ordinationis projicientes in eum, ut quem ipse, authore Deo, ordinare decreverit, sit eis in patrem et pastorem animarum suarum. Erat autem tunc temporis in monasterio Clarevallensi præcentor, Richardus nomine, abbas quondam Vallis-claræ, natione Anglicus, in civitate Eboracensi oriundus, vir vitæ venerabilis et consummatæ religionis, familiaris admodum sancto abbati Bernardo et archiepiscopo Henrico. Hic Richardus, procurante archiepiscopo, creatus est in abbatem, et Fontes veniens susceptus est cum honore condigno. Curam igitur subiens pastorem pastoris officium operibus adimplevit. Studiosè vigilans super gregem sibi commissum, semper habens præ oculis futuram discussionem pecoris et pastoris, omnis ejus sollicitudo de salute animarum, de boni gregis augmento, de observantia regulari et ordinis disciplina. Multa strenuè gessit in administratione suscepta, æmulator ordinis, et severissimus castigator corporis sui, exemplis potius quam verbere agens, ad salutaris vitæ informationem; formator siquidem factus gregis, viam vivendo monstravit, operam adhibens ut doctrinam facta præcederent, et opus verbo conveniret. Assistebat ei per omnia sanctus episcopus, procurans pacem ecclesiæ et ordinis puritatem. Et aucta est domus in diebus ejus et possessionibus et pietate religionis.

NUM. XLI.

De morte Eugenii Papæ, Abbatis Bernardi, et Archiepiscopi Henrici.

EA tempestate contigit papam Eugenium, vocante Domino, carne resolvi. Et beatus Bernardus abbas Clarevallensis sub his diebus migravit ad Dominum. Archiepiscopus etiam Henricus hominem exuens sequutus est quos amavit. Dilexerunt se invicem in vita sua, in morte quoque non separati, duces gregis Dominici, columnæ domus Dei, luminaria mundi.

NUM. XLII.

De restitutione Archiepiscopi Willielmi.

DEFUNCTO Eboracensi archiepiscopo Henrico, succedit ei venerabilis archiepiscopus Willielmus restitutus in cathedram unde prius fuerat amotus; in ipsa tamen restitutione, (jubente papa Anastasio qui Eugenio successit) spopondit se ecclesiæ Fontanensi per omnia satisfactorum de injuriis et damnis quæ per se vel sui causa monachis fuerant illata, et quod locum ipsum et habitaturos ejus pastoralis sollicitudine protegeret, et paterna pietate confoveret. Fecissetque satis nisi eum mors immatura sustulisset. Fontes siquidem humiliter veniens satisfactionem promisit, suscipiens in osculo pacis omnes, omnes eis ad integrum possessiones confirmans quæ à suis prædecessoribus fuerant collatæ. Inde Eboracum divertens, prima sessione dum sacris altaribus astaret, inter offerendum (hausto ut dicitur, in calice veneno) extinctus est.

NUM. XLIII.

De scismate inter Abbatem et Monachos de Fontibus.

FLORUIT per idem tempus domus Fontanensis foris et intus, spiritualibus pariter ac temporalibus bonis aucta; nec erat qui pacem illius turbaret. Videntis hoc inimicus pacis, hostis noster antiquus, invidet tantæ paci, tanto iratoque fratrum profectu, et expetita permissione, aggressus est eos ad tentandum. Protulit subito vasa iræ suæ, tollit pacem, castra turbavit, effundens inter cives contentionem, discordiam inter fratres, superseminans zizania tritico, dissensionem in conventu sacro. Et ecce subito cœperunt spinæ quædam scandalorum succrescere, amaritudinis germina pullulare, murmurationis venena diffundi, volitare passim jacula detractiois. Mutuo sese impetunt, mutuo sese concidunt, Ephraim Manassem, et Manasses Ephraim simul et ipsi contra Judam. In abbatem tota conflatur indignatio, seditio concitatur, et insurgunt filii in patrem, oves in pastorem, ecclesiæ in scandalum, adversariis in derisum. Advertit abbas difficultatem eventus, diaboli machinationem, et attendens multitudinis insolentiam suis viribus comprimere non posse, elegit ad tempus cedere donec procella deferveat et sileatur fluctus ejus. Cedit igitur ab injuncto sibi officio rogans Deum pro grege inquieto; et Dominus exaudivit eum. Reversi enim in se, confunduntur super temeritate præsumpta, et pœnitentiam agentes, mutato consilio abbatem Richardum in gradum pristinum sua restituunt autoritate. Sed non defuit tantæ præsumptioni condigna coercitio, temerarios ausus severiori censura castigans; emissis siquidem qui authores schismatis erant, reddita est autoritas ordini, reverentia patri, pax domui, peccantibus disciplina. Ab illa die et deinceps nil tale præsumitur, nil à conventu sacro contra formam ordinis temerè attentatur. Vixit posthæc annis pluribus Richardus, erudiens plebem suam in timore Dei, et benedixit Dominus novissimis ejus magis quam principio. Rebus siquidem pacificatis pro voto foris et intus, videt filios suos fructificantes in gratia, ambulantes in dilectione. Ipse verò in senectute bona, sanctorum vallatus frequentia, plenus dierum et dives meritis migravit ad Dominum.

NUM. XLIV.

De Abbate Roberto.

DEFUNCTO abbate Richardo, successit venerabilis Robertus abbas de Pipwella, translatus de sinu filiæ ut matrem gubernaret. Assumptus ad officium rem officii strenuè administravit: vir omnium virtutum probatissimus, dignus omnino qui ad tanti regiminis apicem eligeretur. Nec memini me vidisse hominem quem suum magis deceret officium, qui subditorem curam commodius exequeretur, adeo illi cum injuncta administratione convenit. Magna illi cura in pauperibus confovendis, in peregrinis suscipiendis, congruis hospitibus exhibere honorem, infirmis solatia, fratribus etiam secundum formam ordinis solitò diligentius necessaria procurare. Multa strenue gessit dispensator fidelis et prudens, providus in consiliis, in judiciis discretus, misericors in pauperes, liberalis ad omnes; liberalitate enim et honore præcedebat omnes qui fuerunt ante illum, civilitate multa regens subjectos, memor semper illius sententiæ, Qui sequitur avaritiam conturbat domum suam. Approbatas consuetudines servari præcepit, minùs aptas mutando correxit, et totius statum monasterii apud Deum et homines in melius reformavit. Honoravit ministerium suum vir sanctus, instaurans ecclesiæ fabricam et ædificia constituens sumptuosa. Non causatur de minori substantia, nec majorem sumptum metuit sumptuum defectu, jactat super Dominum curam suam, et non defuit manus confortans eum in omnibus operibus suis. Benedixit ei, multiplicans fratres, et adjiciens possessiones, et facta est pax et veritas in diebus suis. Annis ix. præfuit monasterio Fontium, humanum se et communem omnibus exhibens, dilectus ab omnibus et ipse diligens universos. Anno nono à generali capitulo revertens infirmatus est in itinere, et ingravescente morbo, apud Woburniam sortis munus implevit. Corpus ejus Fontes delatum, cum honore condigno reconditum est in sepulchris patrum suorum.

De Abbate Willielmo.

VACABAT interim Fontanensis ecclesia destituta pastore, sed Dominus providebat ei. Convenientes in unum quorum interfuit elegerunt dominum Willielmum, Novi-monasterii abbatem, virum approbatum et sanctum qui curæ suæ domum pastoralis vigilantia diligenter gubernaret. Hic Willielmus canonicus primò fuit militans sub regula sancti patris Augustini inter clericos regulares apud Gisburne, regularem vitam et ipse professus. Inde vero præ amore majoris perfectionis Novum-monasterium setransferens, habitum ordinis de manu sancti abbatis Roberti suscepit. Novam igitur professus militiam, novitate sancti studuit innovari. Indixit bellum vitiis, voluptatibus conflictum, et membra mortificans carnem spiritui servire coegit, et hoc solo forsitan excedens, et quod rem virtutis nimietate fecit esse minus laudabilem. Vigiliis siquidem et abstinentiis immoderatis corpus attenuans, semetipsum reddidit minus validum minusque potentem. Annis multis præfuit Novo-monasterio et prosperata est domus in manibus ipsius. Inde translatus Fontanensis ecclesiæ causam suscepit vir grandævus admodum et ætate confectus, nihil tamen omissum est pro ætate majori de observantia ordinis vel exteriorum administratione. Erat autem homo consilii, consiliarios habens fideles, officiales strenuos, filios obedientes, qui charitate filiali senectutem patris humeris suis sustentabant. In mansuetudine gubernabat subjectos, quærens bona genti suæ, et aucta est domus in manu ipsius in prædiis et pascuis et possessione copiosa. Annis x. Fontanensem rexit ecclesiam. Et consummato cursu vitæ, in senectute bona quievit in pace, relinquens posteris gratam sui memoriam in gratia et benedictione.

Huc usque senior. Narra tu (inquit) quæ de abbate Radulpho dicenda sunt, diligenter evolve. Debes illi hanc dicendi vicissitudinem, qui te et familiarem habuit, et sanctæ religionis saporem tibi infudit. Nosti hominem, quanta in divinis et humanis gratiâ enituit, quam prudenter dispensationem sibi creditam administravit.

Tum ego.

Non me debitorem diffiteor, si dicendi peritia subesset. Totum me illi debeo semperque debebo, per quem mihi, mediante gratia, et salutis datur occasio et salutaris forma disciplinæ. Nulla mihi materia gratior, nulla jucundior oratio quam quæ sancti patris nostri memoriam ingerit et mores repræsentat. Libens igitur et gratanter evolvam quæ de viro sancto dicenda occurrunt.

NUM. XLVI.

De abbate Radulpho.

DEFUNCTO abbate Willielmo successit ei sanctæ recordationis abbas Radulphus, vir omni laude dignus. Religionis speculum, flos ordinis, forma disciplinæ. Memoria illius in compositione odoris, opus pigmentarii, illius utique qui in vase fragili tot virtutum aromata congegit. Miles ante in seculo, militiæ cingulum non solvit sed mutavit in melius, et adjunxit se castris Hebreorum, princeps postmodum futurus in populo Dei. Prognatus parentibus secundum carnem gloria præclaris, sed natalium nobilitatem vitæ merito et virtutum gratia transcendit. Religionis habitum de manu sancti abbatis Roberti accepit, annorum tunc ut putabatur xxx. viribus corporis strenuus sed virtute animi longe præstantior. Novam igitur professus militiam quantæ perfectionis puritati studuerit norunt ipsi qui probationis suæ tempore socii fuerunt. Nullus eo maturior, nullus humilior, nullus magis anxius, et sollicitus in salutaris observantia disciplinæ. Omnia ordinis instituta summa alacritate percurrit, fervens in opere, frequens in oratione, patiens ad opprobria, obedientissimus ad injuncta, hilaris semper et impiger ad officia charitatis. Morabatur intus in domo conscientiæ vacans sibi quantum licuit, et à sensualibus secedens illecebris ad expertas semper recurrebat delicias, æmulans charismata meliora et se semper in uberiores urgens profectus. Intermiserat literarum studia tempore quo in armis agebat, sed lectionis assiduitate intermissi temporis damna redimebat, legens in libro experientiæ quod alii in codice actitabant. Fuerunt ei in his diebus in monasterio Fontanensi viri graves et religiosi, opinione celebres, sanctitate præcipui, contemplatione suspensi, inter quos conversus quidam singularis gratiæ et puritatis enituit, Sinulphus nomine; homo simplex et illiteratus. Sed Dominus eruditum eum. Habebat conscientiam pro codice, Spiritum Sanctum pro eruditore, et legens in libro experientiæ crescebat quotidie in scientia sanctorum, habens etiam spiritum revelationis. Huic servo Dei familiaris admodum fuit sanctus abbas Radulphus, etiam dum adhuc in armis agebat, et multoties Fontes accessit gratia eum visitandi ut se orationibus ejus commendaret. Multa nobis narrare consuevit de hoc Sinulpho digna relatu, de sobrietate et silentio, de maturitate in gestu et morum disciplina, quam alacer in exhortando, quam efficax in consolando, quam dulcis in collatione, quanto semper cavebat studio ne otiosum unquam verbum ex illius ore proflueret. Veni (inquit) aliquando ad hominem Dei, in seculari adhuc habitu, consulens eum super his quæ me movebant de statu scilicet meo, qui mihi valde displicebat. Tædebat enim me vitæ, et conversationem pristinam abhorrens, fluctuabam in corde meo nedum spem habens quam videndi formam assumerem. Et erat grandis concertatio in animo meo. Deliberavi quandoque abjecto mundi onere sanctæ religionis habitum suscipere, sed consuetudinis catena constrictus salutis iter arripere formidabam. Effudi itaque æstus cordis mei coram viro Dei, rogans attentius ut oraret pro me sic affecto. At ille. Ego pro te libenter orabo sed et tu similiter ora, et cave ne opera tua nostras impendant orationes. Recessi petita benedictione. Ille autem orabat et Dominus exaudivit eum. Videbatur mihi orationis ejus sentire virtutem; adeo laxabantur vincula cordis mei et computrescebat^a jugum a facie olei. Morabar in his diebus in vico quodam ubi erat basilica in honore beatæ Mariæ virginis constructa, vicina domui in qua dormiebam. Nocte quadam surrexi temporis,^b et visum est capellam ingredi, gratia orationis. Stans ante crucem effudi animam meam in conspectu Domini Dei mei, et cum lachrimis oravi ut dirigeret vias meas, sibi ad laudem et gloriam, mihi ad salutem æternam. Et ecce inter orandum vox de cruce in hæc verba emissa est, Et quare non venis? quare tam diu tardas? Corruí protinus ad hanc vocem in terram, et cum magno cordis affectu et voce lachrimosa respondi, Ecce Domine, ecce venio.

Fœdere igitur inito firmavi propositum non ulterius in seculo commorari. Necdum statueram cui me religioni subdere debuissim: ascendi igitur ad virum Dei indicans quid de nocte audieram, et quale mihi esset propositum, paratum me illius acquiescere monitis, consiliis obedire. Consedimus soli seorsum, cum ecce, inter loquendum subito conticuit, et erumpentibus ubertim lachrimis serenata me facie intuens, Modò (inquit) revelavit mihi Dominus quid te futurum esse disponit. In monasterio de Fontibus habitum religionis accipies, et consummato vitæ cursu diem inibi claudes supremum. Quo audito, nil cunctatus accessi, et mutato habitu ad senis consilium, suavi jugo Christi collum submisi. Hæc mihi de sene Sinulpho sanctus abbas retulit, fida satis relatione, sicut rerum postea probavit eventus. Sed jam ad narrationis nostræ seriem redeamus.

NUM. XLVII.

De gratia Dei inter communicandum indulta.

ERAT dies solennis quo de more fratres communicare solebant. Inter alios ipse adhuc novitius communicaturus accessit. Cumque de manu sacerdotis salutaris hostiæ munus acciperet, tanta et tam admirabili perfusus est suavitatis dulcedine, ut pene alienatus sensibus excederet, et oblitus sui vix se ipse teneret. Quæsi de dulcedine cujusmodi speciem saporis præ se ferret? si quid mellis haberet simile vel cibi corporalis? At ille, Nihil in omni vita mea expertus sum quod hujusmodi dulcedini possem adaptare; nihil habebat molli simile vel cibo materiali, cum illa tantum in gutture sapiatur, hæc verò dulcedo non tam cordis penetralia perfudit, quàm interiora animæ mira quadam et ineffabili, ut mihi videtur, suavitate replevit.

NUM. XLVIII.

De visione timoris Dei.

ALIUD quiddam dicturus sum quod ex ore ejus accepi, licet nonnulli forsitan huic nostræ narrationi fidem non adhibeant; nec mirum si spiritualibus viri visionibus minimè credant, qui temporalibus ejus virtutibus invidebant. Stabam (inquit) ad orationem, et ecce luce quadam interius perfusus (mirabile dictu) vidi timorem Domini, et ipse non timebam. Sed quis timor aut qualis ille timor? nihil hoc timore terribilius nihil horribilius audiri excogitare potest. Vidi tamen timorem sine timore, et timoris pondus adverti, quod reprobis imminet, de quo scriptum est, videntes turbabuntur timore horribili et subitatione desperatæ salutis.

NUM. XLIX.

De Revelatione illi facta.

REM dicturus sum quam ipsum sæpius audiavi referentem, quod quidem non sine timore refero, sed suppressendum nequaquam existimo. Die quadam dominica cùm laudibus sacer ille conventus insisteret, et ipse erat unus ex eis, psalmus qui tunc cantabatur hic erat, Confitemini Domino quoniam bonus. Cumque vir Dei in titulum psalmi diligenter attenderet, facta est manus Domini super eum, et videt visionem magnam, visionem gloriosam, ipsam scilicet Trinitatem in iii. personis apparentem. Quæsi ab eo sub qua forma vel schemate facta fuit illa revelatio? At ille inquit, Nihil ibi formatum nihil figuratum apparuit, et tamen vidi in visione beata tres personas in unitate, vidi (inquit) et cognovi Patrem ingenitum, Filium unigenitum, Spiritum Sanctum ab utroque processum. Et duravit visio illa donec duo versus prædicti psalmi ex integro complerentur. Ab illa die et deinceps nihil triste nihil unquam tantæ adversitatis mihi advenit quod non hujus felicitis visionis recordatio temperaret. Hæc recordatio mihi et in dolore solatium, et in adversitate subsidium, gaudium meum et exultatio cordis mei, robur fidei, et spei firmamentum. Denique tanta mihi ex hac revelatione infusa est fiducia, ut nunquam de salute mea potui dubitare cui tam beatæ visionis facta est manifestatio.

Anno igitur xij. conversionis suæ apud Kirkestall in abbatem creatus novem annos ibi moram fecit, multa perpessus incommoda, foras pugnas, intus timores, domesticorum insidias, rei familiaris inopiam, bonorum distractionem. Semper tamen viam regiam incedens, eodem vultu eademque constantia casus ferebat adversos, et objectu fidei novercantis fortunæ biformes conatus elusit. Anno tertio creationis ejus in abbatem, ego valedicens seculo, de sacra manu illius hunc nostrum institutionis habitum recepi. Septem annos sub disciplinatu ejus vixi, felix si usque hodie sic perstissem. Magna siquidem proficiendi materia fuit, mores viri et modum vivendi inspexisse familiaris sermo ejus semper sale conditus in gratia, tum omnis gestus ejus et habitus perfectionis quandam disciplinæ formam præ se ferebat. Nullus eo in opulentia frugalior, in paupertate liberalior, in judiciis æquior, in amicitia constantior fuit. Novem annis apud Kirkestall peractis, Fontanensis ecclesiæ curam suscepit. Suscepta igitur tanti cura regiminis, cœpit pro officio satis agere, puritatem ordinis zelare propensius, et offensas castigare severius, habita tamen moderata discretionem. Domos suæ subjectionis visitabat in veritate, nil indiscussum relinquens quod sua potuit prudentiâ perscrutari. Circuibat per singula et scrutatus est Jerusalem in lucernis, succidit lucos, excelsa destruxit, infodit idola subtus terebinthum, et immolantes in hortis acrius insequabatur. In hospitibus suscipiendis et pauperibus recreandis qualis fuerat, subjecta declarabunt. Invaluit fames sub his diebus, et erat concursus pauperum multus ad januam Fontanensem. Non fuit domus quæ eos capere possit, sed cæsis frondibus ex silva vicina fecerunt eis casas parvulas quasi tabernacula pastorum, ubi se receperunt pauperes expectantes de domo Dei refectionem. Procurabat etiam eis viros industrios hujus negotii dispensatores idoneos qui pauperibus alimoniam distribuerunt. Sacerdotes etiam instituit, qui languentes et ægrotos quotidie visitarent, confessiones reciperent, viaticum præberent, et defunctis Christiano more sepulturam exhiberent. Accidit aliquando ut de capitulo generali reversus Claramvallem devenisset, infirmatus inibi multis diebus jacuit desperatus. Erat tunc temporis cum eo monachus quidam Radulphus nomine de Novo-Castello, abbas postmodum factus de Kirkestall, qui continuo assistebat ei tristis nimis et sollicitus pro patre suo quem timebat in proximo moriturum. Quem sanctus abbas consolans, ego inquit apud Claramvallem mori non habeo, apud Fontes depositionis meæ diem expecto. Frater enim Sunulphus mihi prædixit quod apud Fontes viverem et ibidem vitam finirem. Et factum est ita, convaluit ab infirmitate, et Fontes reversus ibidem per aliquot annos optata sanitate gavisus est. Ægrotavit per idem tempus vir nobilis Galfridus Hageth, frater germanus abbatis Radulphi. Vocatus est abbas ad ægrotum, è cuius consilio ipse totus pendebat; et de rebus suis disponens, villam quandam, Thorpe nomine cum pertinentiis contulit ecclesiæ de Fontibus in puram elemosinam, cum corpore suo ad sepulturam, quæ (amotis postmodum accolis) redacta est in grangiam uberem frugibus et utilem usibus monasterii. Infirmatus est postmodum sanctus abbas et ingravescente morbo resolutionis suæ diem instare perpendit; omnibus igitur circa eum ritè peractis, completis diebus peregrinationis suæ dives meritis migravit ad Dominum. Aucta est domus in diebus ejus possessionibus et prædiis exterius, intus vero virtutibus et viris religiosis. Et hac possessione quæ adjecta fuit in tempore illius, ecclesiæ Fontium, grangia de Thorpe ex dono Galfridi Hageth.

Anno xij. villicationis suæ apud Fontes abbas Radulphus, sicut frater Sunulphus prædixerat, quievit in pace.

NUM. L.

De Abbate Johanne.

SUBLATO è medio abbate Radulpho, cognomento Hagath, successit ei venerabilis abbas Johannes, vir liberalis et omni laude dignus, Eboracensi natione; sed de civitate sua et civium moribus nihil secum traxit nisi nomen et nascitum; natales siquidem suos animi ingenuitate transcendens, fastidiebat inveteratas plebis ineptias, et honestatis æmulator mediocritatem civium morum probitate compensat. Adolescens bonæ indolis in novitium apud Fontes receptus, postmodum cellerarius effectus, inde abbas de Parco Lude creatus, tandem Fontanensis ecclesiæ matris suæ curam suscepit. Nec defuit homini gratia Dei quæ ubique astitit illi quasi mater honorificata, quæ omnia opera ejus dirigebat, per quam fuit sicut de Joseph legitur, vir in cunctis prosperè agens, providus in rebus agendis, prudens in responsis, in consiliis sapiens, in judiciis discretus. Incedebat vestigiis prædecessoris sui abbatis Radulphi, illius attentius sequens exemplum in ordinis observantia et autoritate regendi, in visitationibus agendis et rebus ordinandis, in causis discutiendis et culpis corrigendis formam sequens per omnia quæ ab ipso acceperat, mites et humiles formans et diligens: inquietos et dissolutos corripuens et castigans, semper tamen exaltans misericordiam super judicium. Erat autem dulci moralitate naturaliter præditus, communem se omnibus exhibens et humanum, liberalitate et munificentia præcedebat omnes qui ante eum Fontanensi ecclesiæ præfuerant. Dapsilis in mensa, communis in convictu, communicabilis ad hospites, beneficus in egentes, amabilis inter fratres, honoratus inter potentes. In beneficiis conferendis nullus eo liberalior, nullus præstantior fuit, nullus qui aptius aut commodius beneficia conferebat. Non differebat quod dare disposuit, sed benignitatem animi muneris celeritate monstrabat, et vultus hilaritate donum gratificabat. Nec tamen defuerunt aliqui qui ejus actus à latere diligenter observabant, et sumptuosas ejus expensas sinistrè interpretabantur, asserentes, effusorem eum quam decebat captare favorem populi, potentium amicitias, regis etiam affectare gratiam et familiaritatem, et privatis obsequiis sub prætextu religionis ad infulas aspirare. Ille vero nequaquam ad hæc motus naturalem animi liberalitatem liberè prosequabatur, pius ad pauperes, beneficus ad petentes, officiosus ad omnes. Et benedixit Dominus hominem in omnibus operibus suis, dans ei pacem intus et foris, inter fratres charitatem et concordiam, in temporalibus bonorum omnium affluentiam, et sicut in Job legitur, 'bos concipit et non abortivit, vacca peperit et non est privata fœtu suo; greges egrediuntur per turmas, omnes gemelli fœtibus, et non est sterilis inter eos.' Sed ne deesset viro fideli tentatio ad probationem, factum est sub his diebus ut rex Johannes qui tunc regni summam tenebat, consiliis depravatus iniquis, filios ordinis exosos haberet et universas suæ potestatis domos nostri ordinis importabili exactionis onere violenter opprimeret. Nec pepercit Fontanensi ecclesiæ licet multa et magna ab ea donaria accepisset, sed mille et ducentas marcas argenti cum importuna celeritate solvendas ab ea extorsit, etiam et reliquas domus ordinis sub potestate sua adeo violenter oppressit, ut distractis ovibus et armentis, etiam vasa sacra divinis usibus consecrata et vestimenta sacerdotalia vendere cogerentur. Et erat videre miserum. Nam monachi qui sub claustralibus latebris lectioni et orationi et spiritualibus studiis antea inserviebant, jam necessitate cogente, per villas et civitates dispersi, alii apud milites, alii apud monachos, alii in castris, alii in viculis apud seculares utcumque sustentabantur. Hujusmodi mali fomes et incensor erat Richardus de Marisco, homo excepte actionis, de quo multa dicenda sunt tempore suo, cujus memoria non delebitur quamdiu ecclesia Cisterciensis durabit in seculo. Videns igitur abbas Johannes malitiam temporis, regis sævitiam, ordinis oppressionem, deliberavit quid ageret, vel quomodo pro tempore oppressis subveniret. Et inito cum suis consilio, faciens de necessitate virtutem, projecit pecuniam ut emeret sibi pacem, dissimulans pro tempore quod non potuit evitare. Et conciliata sibi gratia regis aperuit horrea et apothecas, et dona Dei dispensator fidelis in populum Dei diligenter distribuebat. Sed non defecit manus Domini confortans eum, nam sicut legitur de Sareptina, quod non defecit in hydria aqua nec oleum in lychno: sic Domino benedicente et abbate dispensante, non defecit annona in horreis nec abundantia in cellariis, non est panis imminutus, nec potus alteratus, nullus ibi defectus apparuit in victu, vel in vestitu, vel in his quæ secundum ordinem competeabant ad pauperum recreationem, ad hospitum susceptionem, ad totius domus Fontanensis sustentationem. Et floruit per idem tempus ecclesia illa sicut vinea quam plantaverat manus Domini, dans odorem suavitatis et sanctitatis, et confluebant ad eam multi à finibus terræ, et facta est congregatio monachorum numerosior quam solebat, nam et altaria pauciora ad celebrandum, et chorus humilior et obscurior et minus capax tantæ multitudinis. Et visum est homini Dei contra hujusmodi incommoda providere. Et aggressus est pro magnitudine animi opus magnum inchoare, novam scilicet ecclesiæ fabricam Fontanensis, opus inusitatum et admirandum, feliciter inchoatum, sed felicius consummatum. Mirabantur multi ausus hominis et animositatem, quod tali tempore tale opus aggredi præsumeret tam insolitum et tam sumptuosum. Ille vero confidens in adiutorio Dei, et ponens in Domino spem suam, fundamentum fabricæ posuit, columnas quasdam erexit, fecissetque voto satis nisi fati conditio intervenisset; anno siquidem octavo post creationem suam in abbatem de Fontibus, gravi ægritudine correptus, vocationis suæ tempus imminere præsentit, et disponens domui suæ, omnibus circa eum ritè peractis, in spe bona constitutus, feliciter migravit ad Dominum. Nec defuit qui opus inchoatum instantè exequeretur. Surrexerunt enim post eum viri strenui successores sui qui defuncto fratri semen suscitaverunt, et factum est inusitatum quiddam in hac parte quod tres sibi Johannes successivè Fontanensi ecclesiæ præfuerunt, quorum unus fabricam inchoavit, secundus inchoatam viriliter provexit, tercius provectam gloriosè consummavit. Primus erat Johannes natione Eboracensis; secundus Johannes episcopus; tercius, qui adhuc superest et præest Johannes de Cancia oriundus.

OMNIBUS has litteras legentibus et audientibus, notum sit et manifestum hanc esse pactionem et confirmationem pacis inter monachos de Fontibus et monachos Jorevallenses; scilicet quod infra metas monachorum de Fontibus apud grangiam suam Aldeburg, ab orientali parte aquæ Jor, erunt Tyrnum Watlous, et Cliftun. Ab occidentali parte aquæ sicut Prosbec protenditur et cadit in Brunne, et ultra Brunne sicut Aigrif et Ring simul veniunt; et sic ultra, donec perveniatur ad Suttun, et de Suttun usque ad Jor, cum omnibus appenditiis locorum horum et prædictarum villarum. De Prosbec usque Grimesdalebec, et per Grimesdalebec usque ad Potsbec, et inde usque dum cadit in Brunne habebunt monachi Jorevallenses grossam materiem tantum ad ædificia communiter cum monachis de Fontibus et nichil aliud, nec prata nec pasturam nec pactionem infra has divisas vel cæteras divisas prædictas aliquid aliquo modo accipient vel habebunt, nec procedent supra vel infra metas in aliquo nisi per licentiam monachorum de Fontibus, nec ipsi supra has divisas se extendent nisi per licentiam fratrum Jorevallensium, nisi secundum ordinem et usus Cistercienses.

Hæc concessit capitulum Jorevallense monachis de Fontibus; et capitulum de Fontibus, hac compositione, concessit, ut abbatiam suam removerent usque ad locum ex utraque parte provisum, juxta grangiam de Kelegrunh. Hujus compositionis testes sunt hii quorum sigilla hic apposita sunt. Philippus de Elemosina abbas. Abbas Johannes de Fornes, abbas Gillebertus de Hoyle, abbas Ricardus de Beeland, Radulphus abbas de Parco.

Sciatis me dedisse et præsentem carta confirmasse, in perpetuam elemosinam; Deo et ecclesiæ sanctæ Mariæ de Fontibus et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus, omnes donationes quas pater meus Rogerus de Mubrai fecit eis et cartis suis confirmavit in perpetuam elemosinam; scilicet Aldeburgam in grangiam solutam et quietam ab omnibus serviciis, et quicquid ad illam pertinet ex illa parte Jori fluminis, in bosco, et plano, et campis, et pratis, et aquis, sicut avus meus Nigellus de Albenio dedit eam antiquitus monachis Pontiniacensibus, et communem pasturam ex altera parte aquæ, et ex ipsa eadem parte firmamentum stagni ad molendinum faciendum.

Confirmavi etiam illis illam donationem quam Turgisius filius Malgeri fecit eis in puram et perpetuam elemosinam. Et confirmationem quam Gualterus de Butri de eadem terra monachis fecit, scilicet de Smithuswat usque ad Gretgata, et sicut Gretgata tenditur usque in Elrebec, et exinde inferiùs sicut Elrebec cadit in Jor. Confirmavi etiam monachis mortuum boscum in foresta mea de stante et jacente quicquid folium non portat ubicumque capere voluerint, ad carbonem faciendum ad forgiam suam de Aldeburg. Item confirmavi eis quicquid patris mei fuit inter terram de Suttuna et quendam rivulum meantem infra Redleiam juxta fontem quem adaquandis pecoribus suis illis dedit, et ab eodem rivulo recta linea præcedente in flexionem ejusdem rivuli, versus aquilonem usque ad tres spinas sitas in quodam monte petroso, et inde usque ad quendam magnum salicem sub margine silvæ quæ vocatur Littlehage, et inde usque ad quandam viam quæ jacet in fundo vicinæ vallis, et per eandem viam quantum terra illorum durat.

Et præterea confirmo donationem quam Aaliz de Gant mater mea illis dedit per medium Littlehage à Barra usque ad viam petrosam sicut divisio facta est. Et post ultra viam petrosam usque ad Walescroft, et de Walescroft ultra Cumbedene usque ad siccum salicem juxta Pirwintes, et sic rectè usque ad fontem. Item confirmavi eis ad grangiam suam de Suttuna communem pasturam de Aserlagh et de Wincheslai per totum, præter de blado et de prato omnibus bobus illius grangiæ et xxv. vaccis, et quando non sunt in labore in foresta mea ibunt ad pascendum diebus et noctibus, et ad utendum his pasturis villarum, scilicet et forestæ, habebunt vias ubi eis opportunum fuerit in cujuscumque manus prædictæ villæ devenerint. Et ut deficient et estupent unam viam quæ vadit per mediam culturam de Suttuna quia eis nocebat. Dedi etiam eis et confirmavi in perpetuam elemosinam xx. carucatas fœni in prato de Wacaldesheng solutè et quietè de omnibus serviciis. Et quando prædictum fœnum falcare voluerint monstrabunt ballivo de Malesart, et ipse ballivus de Malesart monstrabit eis ubi falcare debeant. Hanc donationem et confirmationem per prædictas divisas feci monachis in perpetuam elemosinam, et ita in liberam et propriam possessionem, et ad sartandum, et ad donandum et vendendum, ita quod terra ubi nemus est cum tota alia terra de Birnebem in perpetuum ecclesiæ de Fontibus remanebit, et quod nihil ibi mihi retineam præter cervum et cervam, aprum, et capreolam, et aves quæ alias capiunt. Præterea dedi eis et confirmavi ad incrementum sicut rivus in Beverlai cadit in Nid, ubi vetus capella fuit, et inde sicut Nid venit usque Hiherfeldebec, et inde sicut Hiherfeldebec pertingit usque ad divisas de Cravena. Hanc donationem per plenarias prædictas divisas feci monachis de Fontibus solutam et quietam in puram et perpetuam elemosinam, et ita in liberam et propriam possessionem quod nihil mihi vel hæredibus meis ibi retineam præter cervum et cervam aprum et capreolam et aves quæ alias capiunt. Abbey of Quarr, Quarrera, or Quarrería,
IN THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

THE Abbey of Quarr, says Sir Richard Worsley, called in some of the oldest grants Quarraria, probably obtained its name from the neighbouring stone quarries. It was among the first monasteries of the Cistercian order founded in England, and was begun by Baldwin earl of Devon, who, in the thirty-second year of Henry the First, gave the manor of Arreton to Geoffrey abbat of Savigny in Normandy for the building of this monastery, which was dedicated to St. Mary. The earliest charter to it, he adds, now remaining, is that of Engler de Bohun,^a who bestowed Hasely upon the monks, probably soon after the donation of Baldwin abovementioned. The deed appears to have been executed in Normandy, from the circumstance of its being witnessed by Serlo abbat of Savigny, successor to Geoffrey, and divers other Norman bishops and abbats. This, with many other benefactions to Quarr abbey, is confirmed by Richard the son of Baldwin, whose deed, though without date, must have been in the reign of Henry the Second;^b and from this may be collected, that the chapel of St. Nicholas, with its endowments, had been given to Quarr by the chief men of the island, who are there styled his barons. Most of the lands with which the abbey was then endowed, appear to have been given in the reign of Stephen. There is likewise a grant from Henry duke of Normandy, afterwards Henry the Second king of England, of a place called Locwelle in Normandy, for the monks of Quarr to build an abbey there;^a and a grant of confirmation from the same Henry as king of England to the Abbey.^b This liberality, Sir Richard Worsley conjectures to have been an act of gratitude in Henry to Earl Baldwin, for espousing the cause of his mother, the Empress Maud.

The Charters and other Instruments given in the Appendix to the present Account will more fully explain the endowments of Quarr.

The Annals of St. Werburg Chester call this Abbey "filia Savigniaci," the daughter of Savigny; not certainly from any absolute dependence upon that monastery, but because the first monks of Quarr were brought from the Norman abbey.

The following are the Entries relating to the possessions of Quarr abbey in the Taxation of Pope Nicholas the Fourth :

In the 36th Hen. VIII. this monastery was granted, according to Tanner, to John and George Mills.^o Sir Richard Worsley says it was purchased by George Mills, a merchant of Southampton, and that the buildings were destroyed for the sake of the materials, without respect to the sepulchres of the many illustrious persons buried in its chapel.^p The son of George Mills sold it to the lord chief justice, Sir Thomas Fleming, in whose family it remained when Sir Richard Worsley wrote his History of the Isle of Wight.

In the Augmentation Office are many Deeds relating to this abbey, beside those already given from Madox.

Among the Records in the Chapter-house at Westminster, also, are,

1. Pleadings in trespass anno 7 Edw. I. between the abbat of Quarrer and Adam de Stratton, for tearing and cutting a charter of liberties granted to the abbey by Isabella de Fortibus.^a

2. A Paper Roll, intitled "the value of certain lands and manors belonging unto the abbey of Quarre in the Isle of Wight."

3. Auditors' valuations of the manor of Comeley, belonging to the said abbey, temp. Hen. VIII.

The COMMON SEAL of this abbey, as used in the reigns of Edward III. and Richard II. was round, and very small: it represented the Virgin, seated, with the child in her lap. Two impressions remain in the Augmentation Office to Deeds of this date. They are neither of them perfect as to the legend; of which no more can be distinguished than two words; the inscription commencing, MARIA . VIRGO.

The Site of this magnificent Abbey contained upwards of thirty acres of ground within the walls. The only part which now remains entire is the Refectory, or common hall, used as a barn: to the east of which stood the Church or Chapel. The foundations of several of the offices may be traced. Part of the site is occupied by a modern farmhouse, built with materials taken from the ruins of the abbey.

Sua nobis dilecti filii abbas et conventus monasterii de Quarraria, Cisterciensis ordinis, Wintoniensis diocesis, petitione monstrarunt, quod nonnulli iniquitatis filii, quos prorsus ignorant, decimas, census, redditus, et alia jura, quæ ipsi monasterio præstare tenentur, necnon possessiones, terras, prata, pascua, et quædam alia bona, ad monasterium ipsum spectantia, occultarunt maliciose, et occultè detinere præsumunt, non curantes ea dictis abbati et conventui exhibere; super quo provideri sibi et eidem monasterio humiliter postularunt. Conventiones inter Monachos de Lyra et de Quarrara.

NOTUM sit omnibus hoc præsens scriptum visuris, vel audituris, quod cum inter religiosos viros abbatem et conventum de Lyra actores ex parte una, et abbatem et conventum de Quarrara reos ex altera, super decimis de dominico suo de Arretone, Hasely, Titelingham, Lovecumbe, et Sandecumbe provenientibus, quas dicti religiosi de Lyra asserebant de jure speciali ad se pertinere; ac etiam super decimis de Cosham et circa castellum de Caresbroke, Richerigg, Richeburg infra limites parochiæ de Caresbrok, ad dictos religiosos de Lyra, ad prædictam ecclesiam de Caresbroke de jure communi spectantes, coram diversis iudiciis, ordinariis, delegatis, et eorum commissariis, lis mota fuisset, tandem omnes lites prædictæ et controversiæ super dictis decimis motæ, communibus amicis intervenientibus de consensu partium per amicabilem compositionem conquieverunt in hunc modum. Videlicet quod renuntiatis prius hinc inde processibus, actis judicialibus, instrumentis, appellationibus, rescriptis, literis, et omnibus aliis in dictis litibus in prædictis habitis, et factis, quæ et quas partes antedictæ voluerunt de cætero vacuas esse et viribus carere.

Volunt et concedunt dicti religiosi de Lyra quod dicti religiosi de Quarrara retineant decimas omnimodas, tam majores, quam minores, undecunque provenientes maneriorum suorum et terrarum de Arretone, Hasely, Titelingham, Lovecumbe, et Sandecumbe, et decimas ad capellam sancti Nicholai in castro de Caresbroke pertinentes, et percipient prout hactenus percipere consueverunt; solvent insuper et se solvituros constituunt dicti religiosi de Quarrara prædictis religiosi de Lyra quadraginta solidos sterlingorum annuos apud Caresbroke in festo Paschali juxta formam compositionis super eisdem inter eos factam ab antiquo, pro omnibus decimis dictorum locorum. De decimis vero maneriorum suorum et terrarum de Richerigg et Richeburg, post ultimum concilium Lateranense acquisitis et sitis infra limites ecclesiæ parochialis de Caresbroke dictis religiosi de Lyra appropriatæ, quas quidem decimas iidem religiosi de Lyra dicebant nomine dictæ ecclesiæ de Caresbroke ad se pertinere debere jure communi, sic est provisum, concessum, et ordinatum, per amicabilem et realem compositionem infrascriptam; videlicet quod dicti religiosi de Quarr. volunt et concedunt nomine suo et ecclesiæ suæ quod præfati religiosi de Lira percipiant de prædictis maneriis de Richerigg et Richeburg omnimodas decimas majores de terris maneriorum prædictorum jam in culturam redactis, necnon de culturis imposterum redigendis et aliis undecunque et qualitercunque inibi provenientes, seu futuris temporibus proventuras, pacificè, integrè, sine diminutione qualibet atque fraude, sicut dicti religiosi de Lira pleniùs et meliùs in retroactis temporibus perceperunt. Et dicti religiosi de Lira concedunt nomine suo et ecclesiæ suæ de Caresbroke quod dicti religiosi de Quarrara retineant et habeant, prout etiam hactenus retinere, percipere et habere consueverunt, liberè, pacificè, et integraliter decimas minutas omnimodas de dictis terris, à tempore præsentis compositionis factæ, incultis, et etiam de terris quæ ratione meliorationis incultæ jacebunt, ita quod dictæ ecclesiæ de Carisbroke, occasione ipsius terræ incultæ, nullum damnum generetur, seu compositioni præsentis in aliquo præjudicetur. Unde pro bono pacis compositionis prædictæ de dictis decimis Richerigge et Richeburg in forma superius expressa, et ut a litibus hinc inde discedatur in futurum, dabunt et se daturos constituunt dicti religiosi de Quarrara dictis religiosi de Lyra decem solidos annuos in festo sancti Michaelis in perpetuum percipiendos. In cujus rei testimonium partes antedictæ præsentibus sigilla sua alternatim apposuerunt. Datum et actum anno Domini m.cclxxxix. in festo Gregorii papæ, videlicet quarto idus Mastii.

Abbey of Combermere, in Cheshire.

The original donations of the founder consisted of adjacent demesne lands, the manor of Wilkesley, free pasture in the moors and woods near Wich Malbank, the fourth part of that town, and Acton and Sandon churches, with their dependent chapels, beside certain privileges.^a These were confirmed by William de Maubanc in a charter which added other privileges, and the donation of lands in Dycheley, and the mill of Checkley.^f

Next after these, in point of consequence, is the confirmation already mentioned of Randle Gernons, who ratified the donations and privileges granted to the monks by their founder and his son, adding an acquittance from toll for the monks, their successors, and their tenants, through the city and county of Chester, with similar acquittance from puture, suit to shires and hundreds, murage, pavage, passage, pontage, scutage, and works in parks or castles, and all kinds of liberties and exemptions whatsoever. He granted further to the monks and their successors an exemption from pleading before any one besides the earl or his chief-justice, and a prohibition of his escheator entering their manor of Wivelscle, or other lands of the same, or making distress therein, without a special warrant from the earl or his chief-justice, and being in that case accompanied by the bailiff of the monks, under a forfeiture of ten pounds.^g

Various other charters of gifts and confirmation will be found in the Appendix.^h Others will be referred to presently.

ABBATS of COMBERMERE.

WILLIAM, the first abbat, was surviving at the foundation of the abbey of Pelton, in Cheshire, in 1153, being made trustee of the lands given by Robert Pincerna for that purpose, and witnessing his donation charter along with Gemmanus, a monk of his convent. Pelton, says Mr. Ormerod, appears, in consequence, to have been peopled with monks from Combermere; and the new foundation of Dieulacres, in Staffordshire, to which the abbacy of Pelton was removed, was hence subsequently reputed a filial dependency of Combermere, as was also the abbey of Hilton in the same county, and that of Stanlaw, in Cheshire, afterwards removed to Whalley, in Lancashire.ⁱ

ROBERT was abbat in the time of John Scot, earl of Chester, and Walter abbat of St. Werburgh in that city.^k

In the 26th of Henry the Eighth the gross income of this monastery was valued at 258*l*. 6s. 6*d*.; the net receipts at 225*l*. 9s. 7*d*.^b In the Ministers' Accompts, in the 32d of Henry the Eighth, the value was computed at 275*l*. 17s. 11½*d*.^c

In the 31st and 32d, and again in the 34th Hen. VIII. the site of this monastery was granted to George Cotton, Esq. and Mary his wife. The abstracts of the Originalia relating to the two first grants will be found in a note below.^d Mr. Ormerod, speaking of the last, says that the site included the church, bell-tower, lake of Combermere, and cemetery; and that in the grant the following lands were likewise comprised, viz. Dodcote, in the parish of Chilesarcoll, in com. Salop.; Cliffe, in Drayton; Hales, in the same county; Erdly Grange, in Staffordshire; Wincell Grange, co. Chester; Newton Grange, in Ashburne; and Cotes Grange, or Cote Field, in Hartinton, in Derbyshire: the value of the whole amounting to 64*l*. 18s. 7*d*.; to be held by them and their heirs male from the crown by the service of the tenth part of a knight's fee, and the payment of 19*l*. 6s. 7*d*. to the Court of Augmentation of the King's Revenue.^e

The descendants of George Cotton, Esq. afterwards Sir George Cotton, are still the owners of the site. It at present belongs to Sir Stapleton Cotton, of Combermere, Bart. created Lord Combermere in 1814.^f

Tanner, in his Notitia Monastica, referring to materials relating to the history of this house, says, "Vide cartas originales, rentalia, computos, &c. ad hanc abbatiam spectantia, penes dom. Rob. Sal. Cotton de Cumbermere bar."

The Harleian manuscript 1967 contains various ancient rentals of the Nantwich estates of this abbey, and other particulars of like nature.

Mr. Ormerod, in his Hist. of Cheshire, has given a wood-cut of a mutilated impression from the SEAL of Combermere abbey appended to the Surrender, still remaining in the Augmentation Office. It is of a small size, round, and indistinct, as there given; but, on referring to the impression on red wax, the subject appears to be an abbat with his crozier, having on each side of him three heads couped at the neck, together with two fleurs de lis, one on each side, and over the sinister one a mullet pierced. The legend is, SIG. CO'E. S. MAR. DE. COMB'EMERE.

The ARMS of the abbey, given in the initial letter to the present Account, were those of the founder, Hugh de Malbanc, (quarterly, Or and Gules, a bendlet Sa.) debased by a crozier in pale Or, the head turned sinisterways.

The situation of this abbey was in one of the most romantic spots which the Cheshire domains of its founder could offer, on the banks of a natural lake.

After the Dissolution, a part of the conventual buildings are said to have been perceived in the mansion which the Cottons erected here; among which was the refectory, supposed to exist in the present library, and which was probably approached by a large flight of external steps, as at Vale Royal and Norton.^a

NUM. I.

Carta Foundationis.

[Ab exemplari quodam in Biblioth. Cottoniana, Faustina B. viii.]

In nomine sanctæ et individue Trinitatis, Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti, ego Hugo Malbanc ex una parte Domini applaudens promissionem qua dicit electis suis, 'Quod uni ex minimis meis fecistis mihi fecistis, intrate in regnum celorum vobis à mundi primordio paratum:' ex altera ejusdem expavescens comminationem qua reprobis dicit, 'Quod uni ex minimis meis non fecistis nec mihi fecistis, propterea discedite à me maledicti in ignem æternum.' Propterea revolvens in mente mea frequenter illud Domini præceptum in quo dicit, 'Facite vobis amicos de mamona iniquitatis, ut et ipsi vos recipiant in æterna tabernacula. Hæc alia verba Domini Salvatoris sæpius in animo meo pertractans, mutabilitatem rerum temporalium, miseriam, atque brevitatē vitæ humanæ considerans, disposui in corde meo firmiter pro cœlestibus bonis mutare seu cambire terrestria atque caduca, pro veris umbracula, et hominibus illis, qui propter Dei amorem omnia mundana et vanitates hujus seculi contempserunt, et propter æternæ vitæ desiderium divino servicio seipsos totaliter mancipaverunt, hanc donationem facere decrevi. In principio igitur conditori meo maximo bonæ voluntatis affectu, et ex consilio et assensu domini mei Ranulfi comitis Cestrensis, et domini Rogeri Cestrensis episcopi viri sanctissimi, et Willielmi filii mei et hæredis, do et concedo pro salute et incolumitate mea, et Petronillæ uxoris meæ et liberorum meorum, et omnium amicorum meorum et omnino pro redemptione animarum nostrarum; do inquam humiliter et devotè Domino Deo nostro omnipotenti locum et situm qui vocatur Cumbermere, ad fundandum et construendum quandam abbatiam monachorum secundum regulam sancti Benedicti in honore beatissimæ et gloriosissimæ Virginis Mariæ, et genetricis ipsius Dei et Domini nostri Jesu Christi, et sancti Michaelis archangeli, et boscum, et planum, et aquas, et aquarum cursus, et piscarias, et prata, et pascua, cum omnibus aliis pertinentiis suis et cum omnibus aliis commoditatibus et rebus quæ ibi sunt vel quæ ibi fieri poterint tam subtus terram quam super imperpetuum, infra has divisas videlicet ab exitu de Haremos qui est inter Marburium, et Bromkelawann, et sic sequendo et descendendo per rivulum usque ad boscum de Ruhale, et medietatem dicti bosci, et sic ascendendo de dicto rivulo per orientem bosci versus aquam de Cumbermere usque ad verticem montis, et sic sequendo verticem montis per medium bosci de Ruhale versus austrum usque ad inferiorem partem dicti montis, et sic à dicta inferiorem parte dicti montis directè ex transverso usque ad quandam sichetum versus austrum juxta inferius caput de le Nonepolle; et inde usque ad inferius caput cujusdam terræ quæ vocatur Sycheleya, et sic usque ad quandam viam quæ ducit versus villam de Wyke, et sic sequendo dictam viam versus occidentem directè usque ad boscum qui vocatur Greenefordeley, et sic sequendo semper Grenefordeley et dimittendo dictum boscum à manu sinistra, usque ad bundas et divisas inter terram Willielmi de Warrenna et terram meam, et semper sequendo dictas bundas et divisas usque ad antedictum exitum de le Haremos.

et moris, mariscis, brueriis, et campis dictæ villæ pertinentibus, et per totum Ravenesmore, et boscum de Creche, sine impedimento alicujus. Et si contingat quod aliquis de burgensibus tenentibus vel hominibus eorum implacitetur in curia mea de aliqua transgressione, volo et concedo pro me et hæredibus meis vel meis assignatis quod prædicti monachi mei habeant amerciamenta, et emendas sine contradictione vel impedimento mei vel hæredum seu assignatorum meorum quorumcunque. Do etiam eisdem monachis unam carucatam terræ in villa de Acton cum ecclesia ejusdem villæ, et capellam de Wyche-Malbanc cum omnibus pertinentiis suis, et unam carucatam terræ in Sandon et medietatem villæ de Alstanesfeld cum ecclesia ibidem, et ecclesiam de Sandon et communem pasturam cum omnibus averiis meis in foresta mea de Sandon. Concedo etiam eisdem monachis, et eorum successoribus liberum chinum per omnes terras meas ubique, cum libero introitu et exitu ad capiendum omnia necessaria sua quendocunque et quotiescunque voluerint. Et habeant omnia et singula supradicta in liberam, et puram, et perpetuam elemosinam, ita liberè, et absolutè ab omni seculari exactione et terreno servicio sicut aliqua elemosina liberius et quietius habere potest, et nihil vendere vel exigere poterimus imperpetuum nisi beneficia spiritualia et orationum suffragia tantum. Propterea, ex bona voluntate mea, concedo liberaliter quod dominus meus Ranulfus comes Cestrensis sit principalis fundator et defensor dictæ ecclesiæ et monachorum ibidem Deo servientium, et hæredes ipsius post ipsum sint participes omnium bonorum quæ ibi fient in æternum. Et ego Rogerus episcopus Cestrensis ad piam supplicationem domini Hugonis de Maubanc, et aliorum nobilium, ad perpetuam rei memoriam, et ut præsens donatio et concessio robor obtineat imperpetuum, in præsentia Ranulphi comitis Cestrensis et aliorum nobilium apud Cestriam sigillum episcopatus apponi fecimus. Et ideo si quis elemosinam istam, donationem et concessionem in aliquo violaverit vel diminuerit, aut scienter impederit, maledictionem Dei et beatæ Virginis, et sancti Michaelis archangeli quibus hæc omnia specialiter donantur et meam finaliter incurrat, nisi ad emendationem congruam venerit. Fiat, Fiat. Amen.

Abbey of Garendon, in Leicestershire.

ARENDRON, says Mr. Nichols, called also in old deeds Gerondon, Gerouldon, Gerwedon, Geraldon, Garradon, and Garendedon, is two miles distant from Loughborough; and, in the ecclesiastical division of Leicestershire, is within the deanry of Akeley.

At this place Robert de Bossu, the good earl of Leicester, who became a monk here, and gave the town of Stockton as his admission "pro sustentatione sua," 5 kal. Nov. 1133,^a founded an abbey, under the patronage of the Virgin Mary, for Cistercian monks. This monastery was a daughter, or derivative from the abbey of Waverley.^b

The founder of Garendon abbey gave the monks there five carucates and three yardlands in Garendon, two carucates in Ringlethorp, certain lands in Dishley and Ravenston, and the wood of Shepeshed, containing a mile and a half in length, and a mile in breadth; and Michelholm, in the lordship of Lockington, for a fishery in the Trent. He gave them also a burgess in the town of Leicester.^c

Nearly cœval with the founder's gift was the benefaction of Ernald de Bosco, his steward, who, with the full consent of Earl Robert de Bossu, gave the whole vill of Bittlesdon, in Buckinghamshire, to the monks of Garendon, to the intent that an abbey of the same Order might be there founded. He gave them also the manor of Staunton under Bardon.^d

For the purpose of further benefitting the monks of Garendon, the earl of Leicester obtained from Ranulph earl of Chester a perpetual grant of the castle and vill of Mountsorell, and also the lordship of Charley, a considerable portion of Charnwood Forest, with Aldermanhawe and Haliwell hawe, all which were formally conveyed to King Henry the Third, and by him reconveyed to Earl Robert de Bossu. This Ranulph gave them also common of pasture for all their cattle in Barrow.^e

Among their other early benefactors were John de Lacy, earl of Lincoln and constable of Chester;^f with Robert de Ferrariis, earl of Derby, and his son William.^g William de Ferrariis, the grandson, also, not only confirmed the inclosed ground at Hethcote, and pasture for three hundred sheep there, five cows, one bull, and six oxen, given by his father, but added another piece of inclosure thereto, with pasturage for three hundred more, at six score to the hundred, and for seven more cows. The first William confirmed the grant of Harald de Lecha and Alan his son;^h and Margaret de Ferrariis, countess of Derby, his widow, gave fifteen shillings yearly rent in Anstey.ⁱ

Roger earl of Warwick, who died in 1153, gave to Garendon the town of Badsley Endor, in the county of Warwick, which was afterwards given up by the monks to Earl William, the son and successor of Earl Roger; in consideration whereof he gave them ten marks of silver, and released to them the service of a knight's fee due from Geoffrey de Clinton and Robert de Burton for a part of Ibstock.^k

Margaret de Quency, countess of Winchester, gave to the monks all Henley, three yardlands in Weston, and a mill there; and her son, Roger de Quency, earl of Winchester, gave five yardlands in Belgrave, and five virgates and a mill in Weston, Hathern, and Thorpe.^l

Hawise countess of Albemarle, in 1212, during her widowhood, after the death of Baldwin de Betun, her third husband, gave four ploughlands in Eastwell.^m William de Fortibus, earl of Albemarle, her son, confirmed this grant,ⁿ as did afterwards William de Mandeville, earl of Essex, who had married an heiress of the Albemarles.^o

Gundreda de Moubray and Roger her son gave the monks of Garendon Ringlethorpe Grange and lands at Burton.^p

Robert Pakeman, of Kirby by Glenfield, bestowed divers lands upon them in 1235;^q and, about the same time, Robert de Tateshall gave them a grant of thirty acres of land in the wold of Holwell, and of free passage for their carts there.^r

Henry Lord Beaumont, earl of Boughan and constable of Scotland, and Alice his countess, daughter of Alexander Comyn, earl of Boughan, were also benefactors to this abbey.^s

In 1283 the abbat and convent were allowed to possess ten messuages and a virgate of land with the appurtenances in Worthington.^t

In 1286 Henry le Waleis was permitted to give two messuages and two virgates of land at Ravenston.^u

In 1305, it appeared that Ralph Boson had enfeoffed the abbat of Garendon of one messuage in Worthington in pure alms; and that the abbat had purchased a messuage and half a virgate of land in Swanington.^v

In 1339 William de Herle and Robert his son were allowed to exchange with the abbat and convent of Garendon five messuages, eight acres and one virgate of land, and one halfpenny rent, with the appurtenances, in Alton and Ravenston, in lieu of forty shillings rent in Kereby and four virgates of land in Alton.^w

An exemplification of the numerous possessions of the abbey, as they stood in 1340, will be found in the Appendix.^x

By indenture, dated on the Nativity, 1347, the Lady Mary de St. Pol, countess of Pembroke, granted to the abbat and convent two tenements which she possessed; one in the suburbs of London, in Fleet-Street, of the gift of William de Hales, Esq.; the other within the city, in Sherebourne-lane, which she had from Gilbert de Palmer. In return, the abbat and convent were to maintain one monk in a hermitage near Cripplegate, to pray for the soul of Aymer de Valence, late earl of Pembroke, for the good estate of the said countess so long as she should live, and for her soul after death; the said monk to be presented for approbation to the countess during her life, and afterwards to the mayor of London for ever; and the rents of the said tenements to be applied solely to the maintenance of the monk and upholding the hermitage.^y

Sir Ralph Shirley, Knight, by his last will, dated in 1513, was a liberal benefactor to this abbey.^z

A legacy was received by the abbat and convent in 1296 from the executors of Hugh de Vienna, rector of Raundes, in Northamptonshire, amounting, in money and in divers useful articles of provision, to the sum of 120*l.* 13*s.* 10½*d.*:^a and from Hugh Bayley and Alice his wife they had a legacy of a murrhine cup.^b

Of the advowson of Garendon abbey a few particulars are recorded, which will be best placed together:

In 1220 the earl of Winton was patron of Garendon.^b Roger de Quency, earl of Winton, subsequently, by a deed without date, assigned all his right to the advowson of this abbey to Simon de Montfort, earl of Leicester.^c The earl of Winton, however, who died in 1270, is said to have been then seised of this advowson; which, under him, was held by Ernald de Bois. The inquisition adds, that his heirs, Margaret, wife of William de Ferrariis, earl of Derby, Elizabeth, wife of Alexander Comyn, earl of Boughan, and Ela, relict of Alan de la Zouch, were owners of the advowson.^d In 1297, Edmund earl of Lancaster, the king's brother, was, at his death, patron of the advowson.^e In 1313 Alan la Zouch was possessed of the advowson, then worth 20*l.*^f In 1328 it was held by Sir Robert Holland, at his death, as of the right and inheritance of Maud his wife, one of the daughters and coheirs of Alan la Zouch.^g From the "Comperta Compertorum" of Doctors Legh and Layton, the visitors of this abbey appointed in 1535, we learn that at that time Elizabeth countess of Oxford, wife of John de Vere, the fifteenth earl, was the patroness for life by grant from the crown.^h

THOMAS SYESTON, alias SHEPYSHED, was abbat in 1510, and held that office till the dissolution of the monastery in 1536.

In the 26th of Henry the Eighth the abbey of Garendon was valued, in the gross receipts, at 186*l.* 15*s.* 2½*d.*; in clear income, at 159*l.* 19*s.* 10½*d.*^l

The site, with the demesne lands, valued at 21*l.* 2*s.* 5*d.* were passed under lease, dated 1534, to Richard Hall and Margaret his wife.^m In the 32d of Henry the Eighth, both, with various other lands and possessions in the counties of Leicester, Nottingham, and Derby, were granted in fee to Thomas earl of Rutland.ⁿ

The descent of the property of the site of Garendon abbey will be found in Mr. Nichols's History, whose indefatigable researches, wherever he directs them, leave but little new matter to be gleaned by others. On the death of Francis earl of Rutland, in 1632, the lordship and site of the monastery of Garendon became the property of Catherine duchess dowager of Buckingham, by whose son, in 1683, they were sold to Ambrose Philipps, Esq. an eminent barrister of the Middle Temple, in whose lineal descendant they are still vested.

There is a REGISTER of the CHARTERS of this monastery among the Lansdown manuscripts in the British Museum, Num. 415, in folio. The following occurs in the handwriting of Dr. Ducarel upon two leaves of writing-paper at the beginning:

"Chartulary of the Abbey of Gerondon, in the county of Leicester.

Mr. Nichols has given a copy of the whole of this Chartulary in his History of Leicestershire; partly in the Appendix to his account of Garendon abbey, and partly under other places where particular lands were concerned.^a

There is another Chartulary of Garendon in the possession of Craven Ord, Esq. of Greenstead Hall, in Essex, which, it is conjectured, must have been compiled for the use of the abbey granges at Alton, Swinfen, Ravenston, Staunton, and Swanington; but as Mr. Nichols has been equally copious in his abstract and analysis of this Register also,^b no further account of it will be needed here.

Several charters relating to this abbey occur in the Harleian collection in the British Museum, Cart. Harl. antiq. 84 H. 18, 44 H. 47, 53 A. 23, 44 A. 31, and 44 F. 19; but Mr. Nichols has printed them all, together with several other deeds of donation from Carte's manuscripts.^c

The ARMS of this abbey were the same as those of its founder; viz. Gu. a cinquefoil erm. pierced of the field; with a crozier added, to distinguish them from St. Mary de Pratis at Leicester.

The CHURCH was demolished soon after the suppression of the abbey, but part of the ruins remained at the time of the purchase by Sir Ambrose Phillipps, under whose direction the foundation was dug up, when several stone coffins were discovered.^a

The present mansion-house of Garendon was built on the site of the monastery, and, when Mr. Nichols wrote, was in the possession of Thomas March Phillipps, Esq.

Abbey of Swineshed, in Lincolnshire.

SWINESHED abbey was founded by Robert de Greslei,^a according to the Annals of Peterborough and Parco Lude, in 1134. The Book of Furnes places the foundation in 1148. Gervase Holles, in one of his MS. volumes, says, from a MS. of Leland, "Swinished cœnobium Bernardinorum a Latimerio temporibus Stephani regis inchoatum."^b King Henry the Second's confirmation charter enumerates the different donations which formed the endowment of this house;^c to which, from another instrument, it appears, not only that he, but that his son, Richard the First, were also benefactors.^d

According to the Taxation of Pope Nicholas the Fourth, in 1291, the revenues of this monastery amounted

No SEAL of Swineshed abbey has yet been met with.

Swineshed is rendered famous for having been the first resting-place of King John, after he lost the whole of his baggage and narrowly escaped with his life, when crossing the marshes in his military progress from Lynn to Sleaford. It has been asserted that the king's death, which followed soon after, was caused by poison, administered to him by a monk of Swineshed; but for this there seems to have been no foundation.^c

No vestiges of the BUILDINGS of this abbey are left, a mansion having been erected out of its ruins by one of the family of Lockton, the former possessors of its site, one of whom, Sir John Lockton, has a monument in the spacious parish-church; he died in the year 1610.

^c The following is Matthew Paris's account of the king's death.

"Rex tamen cum exercitu suo vix elapsus, nocte sequenti apud ABBATIAM quæ SWYNESHEVED dicitur, pernoctavit. Ubi, ut putabatur, de rebus à fluctibus devoratis tantam mentis incurrit tristitiam, quòd acutis correptus febribus, cepit graviter infirmari. Auxit autem aegritudinis molestiam pernicioosa ejus ingluvies, qui nocte illa de fructu persicorum et novi ciceris potatione nimis repletus, febrilem in se calorem acuit fortiter et accendit. Veruntamen summo inde diluculo licet cum labore recedens; ad castellum de Lafort hospitaturus perrexit. Ubi maxima corporis prævagatus molestia, in crastino vix ad castellum de Newere equo vchente pervenit. Quo in loco invalescente morbo, ab abbate de Croestuna consilium confessionis et Eucharistiam suscepit. Et his ita gestis, sciscitatus est ab eo abbas de Croestuna, si ipsum mori contingeret, ubi vellet eligere sepulturam. Cui rex respondens, dixit: Deo et sancto Vlstano corpus et animam meam commendo. Qui postea in nocte quæ diem sancti Lucæ Evangelistæ proxime sequuta est, ex hac vita migravit. Cujus corpus regis schemate ornatum, ad Wigorniam delatum est; et in ecclesia cathedrali ab episcopo loci honorifice tumulatum." Mat. Par. Hist. edit. 1684, p. 242.

Calder Abbey, in Cumberland.

ALDER Abbey, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is situated in the parish of St. Bride or St. Bridget in Cumberland, about ten miles from Whitehaven, in the vale and upon the banks of the Calder. It was founded by Ranulph de Meschines, second earl of Chester and Cumberland, in 1134.^a

Dugdale, in the former edition of this Work, has ascribed the first charter in the Appendix to this monastery to King Henry the Second; but, from the names of the witnesses, the charter must have been granted by King Henry the Third. The following are the endowments of Calder abbey which it confirms: from Ranulph de Meschines, the ground on which the abbey was placed, Bemerton and Holgate, with their appurtenances, a house in Egremont, two salt-works at Wigham, a fishery in Derwent, another in Eyre, pasture for the cattle of the monks in Ranulph's forest, with all necessities for their salt-works, and fisheries, and building of their houses, and liberty of feeding for their hogs without the payment of pannage: from John the son of Adam, and Matthew his brother, the land of Stevenage, with its appurtenances: from Robert Bonekill, various lands in Gilcruce: from Roger son of William, lands in Ikelinton and Brachampton, with part of the mill of Brachampton: from Richard de Lucy, a moiety of the mill of Ikelinton, with its appurtenances: from Beatrice de Molle, five bovates of land in Lesser Gilcruce, and a fourth part of the mill of Greater Gilcruce: from Thomas son of Gospatric, a toft in Wirkin-ton: and from Thomas de Multon, a moiety of the vill of Dereham, and the advowson of the church there.^b

From two Instruments which follow the charter of confirmation, dated in 1262, it appears that the monks of Calder were also possessed of the advowsons of the churches of Bechermet and St. Michael of Arlokedene in Coupland.^c

^a So the Annals of St. Werburgh and of Parcolude. Dugdale, in his Baronage, vol. i. p. 38, speaks of it as founded by Ranulph the first earl; but he died in 1129.

^b See the charter, Num. I.

^c Compare Numm. II. III.

According to Pope Nicholas the Fourth's Taxation, the temporalities of Calder abbey were rated in 1291 at 32*l.* per annum: by a re-assessment, however, in the 8th Edw. II. they were returned at 5*l.* only.^a ABBATS of CALDER.

RALPH, and NICHOLAS, are both mentioned as having professed obedience, as abbats of Calder, to Walter archbishop of York, but without date.^b

JOLLANUS is mentioned as occurring in the 26th Hen. III. A.D. 1241.^c

JOHN in the 30th Hen. III.^d and

WALTER in the 40th Hen. III.^e

ELIAS became abbat 3 id. Dec. 1298.^f

RICHARD, 2 id. Dec. 1322.^g

NICHOLAS DE BRETTEBY became abbat about 1367.^h

ROBERT DE WILUGHBY is probably entitled, as abbat, to a place here.ⁱ

JOHN received benediction as abbat in the month of September, 1462.^k

JOHN WHALLEY professed obedience June 17th, 1464.^l

JOHN BETHOM, or BOTHOME, received benediction May 13th, 1501.^m

LAURENCE MARRE received the benediction as abbat Feb. 3d, 1503.ⁿ

JOHN PARKE received the benediction April 12th, 1516.^o

RICHARD PONSONBY received the benediction Sept. 23, 1525.^p

In the 26th of Henry VIII. Calder abbey was valued in gross revenue at 64*l.* 3*s.* 9*d.* Its clear income was no more than 50*l.* 9*s.* 3½*d.*^q

In the 30th Henry VIII. the site, with the manor of Calder, &c. was granted to Thomas Leigh, LL.D. whose grandson, Ferdinando, sold this estate to Sir Richard Fletcher, Bart. Barbara, daughter of Sir Richard, brought it in marriage to Mr. John Patrickson, whose son sold it to Mr. John Tiffin of Cockermouth. John Senhouse, Esq. grandson of Mr. Tiffin, became possessed of it by gift. In 1816 it was the property of Mrs. Mary Senhouse, his elder grand-daughter.^r It is now the residence and property of H. Senhouse, Esq.

Tanner says,

Vide "Cartas quasdam originales penes Ric. Patrickson de eadem arm." These, it is probable, are still remaining at Calder. He likewise gives the following references to Public Records: "Plac. in com. Cumbr. 6 Edw. I. rot. 2, pro meremio ex bosco de Rutholm. Pat. 28 Edw. I. m. 2. Pat. 37 Edw. III. p. 2, m. 29. Pat. 16 Ric. II. p. 2, m. 24, pro sex mess. cxlviii. acr. terræ, cclx. acr. pasturæ in Gilhous, Seton, Bolton, Gosford, &c."

See also Cal. Inquis. post mortem, vol. iii. p. 169. Plac. de Quo War. pp. 116, 606.

The Common Seal of this abbey has not yet been met with; but the Privy Seal of the abbat has been found attached to an ancient Deed, without date, in the Office of the Duchy of Lancaster. The impression is of red wax, representing the front figure of an abbat, having a book in his right hand, and a crosier in his left. Legend, SIGILL. ABBATIS . DE . CALDRA.

The ruins of the church of Calder abbey form all that is now remaining of the monastery: they consist of a great portion of the tower, resting upon four pillars, with the pillars and pointed arches of the nave and transepts. Various fragments of sepulchral monuments are also to be seen against the walls. Close to the ruins is the mansion of the Senhouses.

Buck has given a view of this abbey as it stood in 1739.

SELLA Park, in this neighbourhood, is said to have been formerly a Cell belonging to Calder abbey, where the monks had a deer-park. That it was really so, however, may be doubted. This place was granted by the crown to the Curwen family. Lysons says, it was purchased of Mr. and Mrs. Curwen by the late Mr. Stanley of Ponsonby Hall, whose son, Edward Stanley, Esq. still possesses it.^s

[Ibid. part. 3, fol. 1.]

UNIVERSIS præsentēs literas inspecturis G. Dei gratia Eboracensis archiepiscopus, Angliæ primas, salutem in Domino sempiternam. Dilecti filii abbas de Caldra, et ejusdem loci conventus Cisterciensis ordinis, ecclesias sancti Johannis Baptistæ de Bechirmet, et sancti Michaelis de Arlokedene in Coupland archidiaconatu Richemundiæ, nostra diœcesi, commiserunt nostræ ordinationi perpetuo duraturæ, in quibus licet jus obtineant patronatus, rarus tamen, vel modicus eis exinde fructus pervenit, cum eis non suppetat præsentandi libera facultas, propter preces potentum, provisiones, et alia varia quæ obsistunt. Nos igitur eorum votis annuentes, de prædictis ecclesiis taliter ordinamus; videlicet quod ecclesia sancti Johannis de Bechirmet, quæ domui de Caldra propinqua et parochiæ sanctæ Bridgittæ quam habent contigua, ipsis assignavimus post decessum vel cessionem Willielmi nunc rectoris, in usus proprios convertendam, et perpetuo retinendam, ut per hoc elemosina domus augeatur, et conventus sustentatio ampliatur. Et quia per hoc in sequestris, institutionibus, et collationibus, quæ variis accidere possent, non detrahatur juri archidiaconi Richemundiæ: in recompensationem horum, ecclesiam de Arlokedene, post decessum, vel cessionem Alani, qui eam

Abbey of Byland, de Bella-landa, Begclanda, or Bechland,

In the Deanry of Bulmer and Archdeaconry of Cleveland,

IN YORKSHIRE.

BYLAND Abbey was founded by Roger de Mowbray at the instance of his mother Gundreda, A.D. 1143. The History of the Foundation is here abridged from the Account of it drawn up by Philip the third abbat.^a Gerold the abbat, with twelve monks, from Furnes in Lancashire,^b having been disturbed by the incursions of the Scots, fled to York, where they were graciously received, and charitably entertained for some time, by Archbishop Thurstan, who afterwards recommended them to Roger de Mowbray, son of Nigel de Albini; but he being a minor in King Stephen's custody, his mother Gundreda entertained them at her castle of Thresk for a little time, and then sent them, A.D. 1138, 3 Steph. to Robert de Alneto, a native of Normandy, her near relation, who had been a monk at Whitby, but then lived an eremetical life at Hode; where she supplied them with necessaries till her son came to age. But the sending them provisions to Hode being attended with many inconveniences, Roger de Mowbray, at the request of Gundreda his mother and Thurstan archbishop of York, A.D. 1140, 5 Steph. gave them his vaccary or cow-pasture of Cambe, and all the land of Wildon, and Scakilden, and Erghum, for their support.

Being thus in some way of subsisting, the abbat went to Savigny in Normandy, to procure an exemption from their former subjection to Furness;^c and having obtained this at a general chapter of the Order, held at that place A.D. 1142, 7 Steph. he returned to York; where dying on the 25th of February, he was buried at Hode, and Roger the sub-cellarer, who had left Furness, was chosen abbat in his place.

The new abbat and monks remained at Hode till A.D. 1143, increasing in number as well as in possessions: but finding that place was too much confined for founding an abbey there, Roger the abbat applied again to their original benefactress, to solicit her son Roger de Mowbray to give them a larger space of ground, which he readily complied with; assigning them the church and town of Biland, or Bellalanda super Moram, called Old Byland, near the river Rie, almost opposite to the abbey of Rieval, part of the said Gundreda's dower.

But this place being so near the abbey of Rieval that each abbey could hear the sound of the bells of the other; and being, on many other accounts, inconvenient for the habitation of these religious, in A.D. 1147, 12 Steph. they removed to Stocking, near Cukewald, under Blakhow-hill, where Roger de Mowbray gave them two carucates of waste land to build their monastery upon. The town of Byland being reduced to a grange the preceding year, the monks had built a chapel at Scalton, within the parish of Byland, by the consent of Henry Murdo carchbishop of York.

At this new place the monks repaired and built a small stone church, a cloister, and other houses, where they remained thirty years; during which time many donations were made to them. But yet they did not enjoy an uninterrupted peace; for even during that era they were involved in lawsuits:^d for in A.D. 1150, 15 Steph. the abbats of Calder and Furness again renewed their claim to the jurisdiction over the abbey, notwithstanding the exemption these monks had obtained in 1142: but it was determined in favour of Byland by Aldred abbat of Rieval, appointed judge by the abbat of Savigni; and in A.D. 1155, 1 Hen. II. Roger of Bishopbridge, archbishop of York, took this abbey into his immediate protection.^e

The monks having cleared a large tract of woodland, and drained the marshes, removed again on the eve of All Saints, A.D. 1177, 23 Hen. II. a little more to the eastward, near to Burtoft and Bersclive, between Whitaker and the foot of Cambe-hill;^f where this abbey, dedicated to the blessed Virgin Mary, at length was settled, having a noble church and monastery, which continued in a flourishing state till the Dissolution.

This abbey had privileges granted to it by Pope Adrian the Fourth, in the time of Henry II. confirming all the grants they then had, as described by the boundaries;^g and his successor did the same.

Pope Alexander the Third, A.D. 1163, 9 Hen. II. confirmed what the king of England and others had granted; and exempted the monks from paying tithes for such lands as they occupied, or paid for; as also tithe for feeding their cattle. He also, by another bull, confirmed this, and the agreement between these monks and the canons of Newburg; and also between these and Thomas de Colville, forbidding any persons from collecting tithes or first-fruits from them, dated A.D. 1171. The same pope, also, by another bull, dated in 1175, in the 17th year of his pontificate, confirmed, beside the abovementioned, the convention between them and Walter Fitz-William, concerning lands in Ampleford.^h

Pope Innocent the Third, Pope Honorius the Third, and Pope Alexander the Fourth, granted other bulls of confirmation and exemption.ⁱ

Pope Gregory the Ninth exempted them from payment of tithes for their mines or turbaries when in their own hands.^k

Other bulls of confirmation were also granted by other popes.^l

King Henry the Second took this abbey into his protection, and granted the monks and their men the privilege of being free in all cities, boroughs, markets, fairs, bridges, and ports, throughout England and Normandy, and exempted them from tolls, pontage, &c. and from paying any sort of gelds, scutage, hidage, or any other duty of the county, wapentake, or riding, or belonging to the high-sheriff or his bailiffs; and from all aids or rewards, and secular service: he also granted them liberty of holding courts for their own tenants, with soc, sac, thol, theam, infangen-theof and utfangentheof; and all forfeitures from themselves, their lands, or men, wheresoever indicted, either in his own or any other court; strictly forbidding any person from suing them, except before himself or his chief justice; and if they sued them elsewhere, they were exempt from answering. And no person was to molest them under the king's forfeiture.^a

^a Given in the Appendix of Instrum. Num. VII. Tanner says, the Chronicle of Crokesden makes Byland abbey to have been founded A.D. 1134; which must refer to the time the convent went out of Furnes. Other historians and chronicles date the foundation in the year 1138; by which can only be meant the time of this convent's coming and settling in Yorkshire.

King Henry the Third, in the 31st year of his reign, A.D. 1246, granted the abbats and monks of this abbey free-warren in all their demesne lands, out of the boundaries of the king's forests, forbidding every person from entering into their premises without their consent, under the penalty of ten pounds.^b And by another charter, dated Feb. 20th, in the 31st year of his reign, he confirmed all the above privileges; and also granted that the monks should be free from payment of ward-penny, over-penny, thething-penny, hengwith, flemwith, blodewite, leirwith, flemefrith, grith-breth, forestal, hamsokne, heinfare, and all service or secular exaction: he also gave them liberty of trying causes at their manors of Sutton and Clifton in Yorkshire, and at their manor of Wardecop in Westmoreland; and in the 56th year of his reign, A.D. 1271, he again confirmed the same.^c

By a charter granted in the 1st Hen. VI. A.D. 1423, the abbat of Byland had a grant of all waifs, strays, and forfeitures of felons, within his lands.^d roll in which it should occur being mutilated. Some valuable particulars, however, of the state and property of this monastery will be learnt from the Paper Survey, Append. Num. IX. and the Ministers' Accompts, 32 Hen. VIII. Num. X.

Burton has arranged the property of this abbey alphabetically. The following appear to have been the larger possessions:

The temporal revenues of Byland abbey, as they stood in 1291, are twice entered in the Taxation of Pope Nicholas the Fourth, foll. 305 b, 325 b. In one they are stated at 218*l.* 16*s.* 9½*d.*, in the other at 218*l.* 16*s.* 10½*d.*

Burton says, in the 15th and 16th Hen. VI. it appears that the duke of Norfolk had the advowson of this abbey.

a deed without date, but probably of the thirteenth century, remaining in the Office of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Mr. Moore, who visited Byland abbey in or about the year 1789, states it to be of a date and style of architecture nearly coeval with Rievall, and that it is about five miles distant from it, across a moor, from which, in descending a very steep hill, the prospect of a fine country and of this abbey opens itself, and presently leads to the village. The building has been miserably destroyed. The parts remaining are the west front and one end of the transept. Not a pillar of the nave is standing; but some parts of the lateral aisles may be seen. That this must have been a superb edifice is evident from these remains. The door is richly ornamented, and the lancet windows are of an elegant form; above which has been a large circular one, half still remaining, and it was perfect within the memory of several persons now living.^a

NUM. I.

Origo Bellelandæ.

[Hist. Will. Neubrigensis, lib. i. cap. 15.]

IN transmarinis partibus, sicut à majoribus accepi, tres memorabiles viri, uno tempore, fuere; scilicet Robertus cognominatus de Arbusculo, Bernardus, et Vitalis: hi non ignobilitate eruditi, et spiritu ferventes, circuibant per castella et vicos, seminantesque, secundum Esaiam super omnes aquas, de conversione multorum fructus uberes colligebant; pio inter se placito constituto: quod Robertus quidem feminarum, communi labore, ad meliora conversarum sollicitudinem gereret, Bernardus, et Vitalis, maribus propensius providerent. Robertus itaque famosissimum illud monasterium de Fonte-Ebraudi construxit, et regularibus disciplinis informavit: Bernardus verò apud Tyrocinum et Vitalis apud Saviniacum, monachis regulariter institutis, suos quisque ab aliis per quasdam præceptorum proprietates distinxit. Cumque ex his tribus, quasi radicibus, servorum, atque ancillarum Dei per diversas provincias religiosa germina pullularent; quidam Saviniacenses monachi Bellalandam nostram condiderunt. Qui cum essent numero pauci et pauperes, locumque aptum quærerent, ubi, Deo propicio, cum fructu aliquo habitarent; nobili viro Rogerio de Mulbray (qui et Newburgensem fundavit ecclesiam) donante, locum, prius angustum acceperunt: deinde ad locum alium, de illo ad tertium, et de tertio ad quartum sub eodem patrocínio, diversis ex causis migrantes, ibidem fixis radicibus tandem resederunt: benedixitque eis Dominus, et de rebus angustis ad magnam jam amplitudinem pervenerunt sub patre Rogerio, mirandæ sinceritatis viro, qui adhuc superstes est, in senecta uberi, administrationis suæ annis circiter quinquaginta et septem expletis. Fuit autem monasterii hujus initium post venerabilis Turstini decessum, memoratis duobus, scilicet Rievallis, et Fontium in bono jam statu agentibus. Et quoniam ante annos jam plurimos Saviniacenses per ejuſdam abbatis religiosam instantiam in ritus Clarevallenses transierunt, hæc tria monasteria, per unitatem disciplinæ regularis, arctiori quoque animorum nexu coherent, et tanquam tria nostræ provinciæ lumina, sacræ religionis prærogativa refulgent. Quid autem sentiendum est de his, et aliis locis religiosis, qui in diebus regis Stephani copiosius extrui, et florere cœperunt, nisi quod castra Dei sunt hæc, in quibus contra spiritualia nequitiae, regis Christi excubant milites et exercentur tyrones? &c.

[Ex vetusta Membrana in Turri Beatæ Mariæ Ebor.]

ROGERUS de Mowbray, qui fundavit abbatiam de Bellalanda, non tenuit cognomen patris sui Nigelli de Albaneio. Tempore regis Henrici filii Willielmi Bastard, cum Angliam obtinuisset, Roberto Curthose fratre suo in partibus Ierosolomitaniſ agente, fuerunt duo, videlicet, fratres de familia regis, strenui viri, quorum unus fuit comes de Clara, alter comes Arundell, et tertius frater eorum fuit Nigellus de Albaneio tunc adolescens, bonæ indolis, et magnæ spei, portans arcum regis; qui cum miles factus fuisset, propter sui probitatem feoffavit eum rex Henricus, in primis de Egmonton in foresta sua cum parcis, et pertinentiis suis; quam villam post modicum tempus, dedit Nigellus Roberto de Ayvile: quod cum rex audisset et inquisisset à Nigello, utrum sic esset; respondit quod sic, et quod rex tunc duos probos milites habuit, ubi antea habuit non præter unum. Approbavit rex factum, et feoffavit eum de vavaseria de Canvill et de vavaseria de Wivill. Præterea verò reverso Roberto Curthose de Syria, audiens quod Willielmus rex Rufus frater ejus, in fata decessisset, voluit coronari in regem, et invenit Henricum, fratrem suum coronatum, in processu temporis statuit cum eo pugnare apud Tenerchbray in Normannia, ubi Nigellus de Albaneio occidit dextrarium ipsius Roberti Curthose, et ita captum reddit regi Henrico. Tunc rex Henricus feoffavit ipsum Nigellum de tota terra Roberti de Frontebovis in Anglia, qui relicto rege, se convertit ad Robertum Curthose. Tunc temporis cepit Nigellus in uxorem filiam Hugonis de Gurnay in Normannia, nomine Gundredam; hæc fuit fundatrix abbatiae de Bellalanda. Postea obsedit idem rex Henricus castrum unum in transmarinis partibus, quod Nigellus de Albaneio, primò intrans cepit. Tunc proposuit rex ditare eum ampliùs; et dedit ei totam terram Rogeri de Molbray in Normania, qui Rogerus fuit comes de Northumbria; et statim fecit seisinam de castro de Molbray, et de castello de Baiocis, et de castro de Cun cum magnis possessionibus, et pertinentiis suis. Habuit autem tunc Nigellus sexies viginti milites feofatos in Normania, et septem viginti feofatos in Anglia. Et cum cepisset breve domini regis de capienda seisinâ in comitatu Northumbriæ, et incepisset proficisci, infirmabatur apud Rotomagum, post modicum tempus obiit, et sepultus est apud Rotomagum in Normania; cum verò Henricus rex dedisset dicto Nigello terram Rogeri de Molbray, præcepit ut filius et hæres ejus cognomen haberet del Moubray. Filius et hæres dicti Nigelli de Albaneio, fuit Rogerus de Molbray, qui fundavit abbatiam de Bellalanda, et plura alia loca sancta. Hic cruce signatus ivit in terram sanctam, et captus à Saracenis, redemptus fuit per militiam templi, et mortuus in terra sancta, sepultus est apud Sures. Filius Rogeri de Molbray primogenitus fuit Nigellus de Molbray qui ei successit. Hic Nigellus uxorem cepit Mabiliam, et genuit ex ea quatuor filios, Willielmum, Robertum, Philippum, et Rogerum, postea idem Nigellus, cruce signatus, obiit in mare Græco; in dolio, in mare projectus, continente, qualis vir fuêrit. Willielmus verò primogenitus, et hæres captus fuit apud Lincoln, et dedit pro redemptione sua quandam villam, nomine Benstede. Idem Willielmus de Molbray genuit Nigellum et Rogerum. Nigellus verò duxit in uxorem filiam Rogeri de Canevilla: obiit apud Nauntys, absque hærede, et sepultus est apud Novum-Burgum. Willielmus filius Nigelli obiit in insula de Haxeiholm, et sepultus est apud Novum-Burgum; cui successit Rogerus filius, qui duxit uxorem nomine Matildam, filiam Willielmi de Bello-campo, de qua genuit filias tres, et filium unum nomine Rogerum. Postea obiit, et sepultus est apud Pontemfractum, cui successit Rogerus filius ejus, qui duxit uxorem nomine Roysam, de qua genuit filium nomine Johannem.

HUMANA memoria per primi parentis inobedientiam in tantum obfuscatur et obnubilatur, quod quicquid in hac vita temporali agitur vel contingit, nisi literis expresse commendetur, brevi processu temporis acsi nunquam fuisset vitio oblivionis dominante totaliter elabatur et evanescit: ideo opportunum fore duximus successoribus nostris brevi scriptura innotescere causam formam et modum sive processum fundationis domus nostræ de Bellalanda, prout ab antiquioribus frequenter audivilimus qui à piæ recordationis viro domino Rogero prædecessore nostro et pluribus aliis qui de Caldra venerunt, sufficienter fuerunt instructi.

Primordium quidem hujus monasterii, ut asseritur, tale fuit. Quod tempore et anno regis Henrici tricesimo quinto, scilicet, millesimo centesimo tricesimo quarto, qui Henricus rex fuit filius Willielmi Bastardi, ducis Normanniæ, qui lege belli et sensus industria Angliam acquisivit, cum abbatia de Furnesio fundata fuisset de ordine Savigneii et antequam ordini Cistercii esset incorporata, contigit quod conventus quidam de Furnesio exiens sortitus est quendam locum qui vocatur Caldra in Coupland, ex pia collatione cujusdam magnatis illius patriæ ad abbaciam construendam, ordinato eidem conventui abbate nomine Geroldo. Nomina verò monachorum qui exierant de Furnesio usque Caldram, cum prædicto abbate sunt ista. Robertus de Insula, Tocka de Loncastro, Johannes de Kynstan, Theodoricus de Dalton, Hormi de eadem, Rogerus subcellerarius, Alanus de Wrewyk, Wydo de Bolton, Willielmus de eadem, Petrus de Pictaviis, Ulfus de Ricomonte, Bertrannus de London. Qui cum per quadriennium ibi mansissent et secundum ordinis Savygneiensis instituta in magno labore et defectu vixissent, hostili invasione David regis Scociæ, et populi terræ suæ ac Galewecciæ facta, qui versus terram Angliæ properabant more solito debacantes et sanguinem Anglorum sitientes, tempore et anno tertio regis Stephani, anno Domini millesimo centesimo tricesimo septimo impingebant tandem latenter et inopinatè in abbaciam illam de Caldra nuper inceptam, et tam de pecudibus suis quam aliis rebus quas apprehendere valebant, eandem domum penitus denucliarunt. Quo facto, iniit consilium prædictus abbas Geroldus cum conventu suo, ut ad maternam domum remearent, quod et fecerunt, quia aliud refugium in illis partibus non habuerunt: sed cum ad portam abbaciæ cito post fugiendum pervenissent, ab abbate et conventu Furnesii qui de eorum redditu erant præmuniti, ingressus ipsis totaliter fuit interdictus. Et hoc pro tali causa ut à quibusdam dicebatur, quia abbas G. ad rogatum et denunciationem abbatis Furnesii noluit ibidem cedere officio suo, nec monachos qui secum venerant absolvere à professione sibi facta, et inconveniens esset ut videbatur Furnesiensibus quod duo abbates cum conventibus suis in una morarentur abbacia. Cæterum secundum aliorum estimationem denegatus fuit eis ingressus, quia Furnesienses noluerunt relevare ipsos aliquantulum subveniundo pro bonis amissis, ut per eorum auxilium tale ad aliquem vivendi statum attingere post hujusmodi subitam dejectionem. Sed nec aliquamdiu ipsos secum ob reverentiam caritatis vel ordinis retinere vellent, aut exterius alibi saltem donec insolentia furoris nephandæ gentis prædictæ per virtutem Dei et exercitum Anglorum esset repressa, ne forte eorum status sive substantia per hujusmodi moram supra modum minueretur, immo miserrime et spiritu vehementi acerrime eos increpabant et viliter improperebant quasi desides et effeminatos qui locum suæ habitationis pro modico deseruerunt ut apud Furnesium in majori copia et quiete vivere possent. Quam quidem increpationem simul et repulsam abbas G. et ejus conventus ægre ferentes, statim sine mora inde recesserunt, ipsos Furnesienses pariter et locum de Caldra omnino relinquentes, nichil secum præter vestes et paucos libros in quodam plaustrum cum octo bobus prout melius poterant detulerunt. Cum itaque anno prædicto regis Stephani abbas G. cum conventu suo de porta abbatiæ Furnesii miserrime angustiatum recessisset et quasi desperatus, non longè ab abbacia illo die una cum suis prout melius potuit hospitio se suscepit. Et in crastinum surgens, per commune consilium properavit versus Eboracum ad dominum Thurstanum tunc temporis archiepiscopum, ut ejus consilium et auxilium de perquirendo sibi loco habitationis caritative flagitaret, spem bonam concipiens ex eo quod idem archiepiscopus nuper ante, sex annis elapsis contulerat locum opportunum cuidam conventui de Fontanis de terra et patrimonio ecclesiæ sancti Wlfridi de Rypon, qui puro fervore religionis et ordinis observandi secundum regulam sancti Benedicti, exierat de abbacia sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci. Et cum abbas G. cum monachis suis ad archiepiscopum pervenit, idem archiepiscopus audita causa adventus eorum, satis liberaliter suscepit eos, et per aliquot dies secum honorificè retinuit, eorum destitutioni et laboribus piè compatiendo. Tandem per consilium quorundam clericorum suorum misit eos cum literis suis ad nobilem virum tunc temporis dominum Rogerum de Molbray filium Nigelli de Albineio qui de novo cingulum suscepit militare, ut inter incia bonorum operum suorum talibus viris de patrimonio suo quod erat amplissimum, locum habitandi et sustentationem misericorditer provideret. Ad quem cum pervenissent, de eorum adventu et exhortatione domini archiepiscopi valde gavisus est, et eo amplius quod occasionem haberet aliquid præstandi. Erat enim valde frugalis animi, et quasi signifer liberalitatis inter omnes proceres terræ. Sed infra paucos dies post eorum adventum idem Rogerus dedit eis decimam omnium victualium quæ expendi debuerant in hospicio suo. Et misit eos ad dompnum Robertum de Alneto quondam monachum de Whiteby qui tunc temporis vitam ducebat heremiticam apud Hode, ut cum eo ibi moram traherent, quousque locum ipsis competentiore alibi assignaret. Dompnus vero Robertus de Alneto cum ipsos intuitus fuisset, et causam adventus eorum cognovisset, cum magna reverentia in suis domunculis suscepit eos. Et non diu post in tantum eorum conversatione sancta delectatus est, quod eorum habitum devotissimè recepit, et abbatem G. professionem fecit, et ipsum locum de Hode illorum contulit dispositioni. Quem quidem locum prænominatus Rogerus dedit abbati G. et suo conventui cum consensu et voluntate dicti domini Roberti de Alneto et monachorum de Whiteby anno gratiæ mccccxviiij.

Cæterum ut quorundam relationi aurem accommode- mus auscultando et scribendo, ita nobis dicebatur, quod quadam die cum prædictus abbas G. cum suis monachis, de Furnesio versus archiepiscopum Eboracensem ut prædictum est per viam incederet, et tantum haberet unum plaustrum cum suis libris et indumentis, quod octo boves cotidie secum trahebant, et appropinquaret villæ de Thresk, casualiter obvium habuit senescallum dominæ Gundræ relictæ quondam Nigelli de Albeney, et matris Rogeri de Molbray adolescentis qui tunc in custodia extitit regis Stephani ad terras suas cito venturi. Hic autem senescallus valde admirans incesum talium virorum, diligentissimè inquisivit ab abbate G. causam tam gravis laboris tam sui quam suorum. Qua sibi exposita, idem senescallus abbati supplicavit devotissimè, ut ipse cum monachis suis eodem die ad mensam comederet dominæ suæ tunc perhendentis in castro de Thresk, à qua villa non tunc multum fuerunt. Et abbas hujusmodi supplicationi consensit, necessitatem suam et suorum voluntati Dei fiducialiter committens. Dictus verò senescallus præcessit ad castrum, et dominam suam præmunivit de adventu talium virorum quos ad prandium pietatis obtentu invitaverat nomine ejusdem dominæ suæ. Ubi cum abbas G. et monachi sui pervenissent cum suo plaustro subsequente, et dicta domina in quadam camera excelsa per quandam fenestram secrecius respexisset paupertatem eorum, piæ compassionis affectu in lacrimis soluta est. Quæ tamen de eorum adventu jocunda, ac de eorum gestu et simplicitate edificata, apud se omnes retinuit, et rebus necessariis eisdem liberaliter ministrari fecit, et ne ab illa recederent omnino interdixit, ac fideliter promisit bonum auxilium infra breve tempus tam habitationis quam sustentationis. Et quia abbas cum suo conventu de manerio in manerium per varias provincias cum dicta domina incedere non potuit nec decuit, ipsa transmisit eos ad avunculum suum sive nepotem dominum Robertum de Alneto, de Normannia natum, quondam monachum de Whiteby qui tunc morabatur heremiticè apud Hode ut præmissum est, et ibi sufficienter ac honorificè eos sustentari fecit, quousque filius ejus Rogerus de Molbray venit ad terras suas de custodia regis Stephani.

Interim autem dum abbas G. cum suis monachis ibidem moraretur, secundum temporis opportunitatem adiit archiepiscopum Thurstanum auxilium quæsiturus. Et idem archiepiscopus scripsit Rogero de Molbray pro abbate G. et monachis suis sicut prænotatum est. Rogerus verò congaudens de exhortatione archiepiscopi et supplicatione assidua matris suæ, primò dedit eis totam decimam victualium hospicii sui. Et erat quidam conversus ad hoc deputatus Lyngulfus nomine ut curiam domini Rogeri sequeretur et annonam ipsis concessam cotidie recolligeret, ac per nuncium fidum abbati suo et monachis ejus transmisit usque Hode. Et quando dominus Rogerus in locis morabatur remotioribus, tunc conversus ille vendidit omnia quæ sibi competeabant et pecuniam abbati suo destinavit. Contigit autem multociens quod propter hospites advenientes, qui nunquam defuerant tanto viro in magna multitudine, oportebat necessario dapiferum et provisorem hospicii sui mutuari sæpissimè à dicto converso annonam illam, ne in hujusmodi casu contingente defectus eveniret in hospitio domini sui. Et cum perventum fuisset ad solutionem faciendam annonæ mutuatae, ultra modum provisor tedio afficiebatur. Nam utrobique molestum sibi fuit si vel defectus victualium inveniretur in hospitio domini, vel si tales viri tam sanctæ conversationis beneficio fraudarentur quod dominus suus illis contulerat, maximè cum adhuc sustentationem aliunde non haberent. Cogitavit igitur dapifer ejus, Georgius nomine, vir sapiens et prudens quali remedio huic incommodo posset commodè obviare. Et debito modo invento, cum dominus suus secretè tractavit de negotiis cum consilio suo, inter cætera demonstravit domino, qualiter decimam victualium de converso sæpius mutuavit, aliquando plus et aliquando minus, sanè consulendo ut aliquam terram daret ad valenciam decimæ victualium hospicii sui, unde abbas G. et monachi ejus sibi possent providere in necessariis. Cui suggestioni et consilio dominus Rogerus assensum præbuit, et non diu post dedit abbati G. et successoribus suis vaccariam suam de Cambe et totam terram de Wildon et Skakilden et Erghum ad petitionem domini Thurstani prædicti et Gundræ matris suæ anno Domini mxxl. per quæ possent ad tempus sustentari sicut patet per cartas.

Cum itaque abbas G. et monachi ejus morarentur apud Hode et aliquantulum in temporalibus bonis accrescere cœpissent, timentes et præcavescentes sibi ne abbas de Furnesio per potentiam et auctoritatem ordinis in ipsos vendicaret jurisdictionem paternitatis, ac sicut vulgariter dicitur

injustè ab eis petitur jurisdictio vel dominium quibus in necessitate positus denegatur subsidium, consilium inierunt unanimi voluntate ut idem abbas personaliter adiret dominum Serlonem abbatem Savygneii in Normannia, et totam veritatem recessus sui de Caldra plenè exponeret, ac qualiter Furnesienses noluerunt eos recipere vel adjuvare in sua persecutione, et quod instanter peteret ex parte conventus sui tanquam liberi sui et juris proprii à Furnesiensibus refutatus et abjectus et nulli adhuc subjectus, ut subiceretur immediatè ecclesiæ et abbati Savygneii imperpetuum. Abbas autem G. consilio adquevit et profectus est ad capitulum generale Savygneiense anno Domini mxxlij. circa festum sancti Johannis Baptistæ. Ubi cum seipsum præsentasset et causa sui adventus cum maturitate exposita, ejus petitio audita fuit et gratanter admissa auctoritate generalis capituli Savygneii quod tunc ibidem more solito per abbates ejusdem ordinis annuatim celebratur. Et sic licenciatus Angliam repetiit cum festinatione qua potuit. Et veniens apud Eboracum ibidem obiit in reditu de capitulo Savygneii vj. kal. Marci. Cujus corpus delatum fuit per monachos suos usque Hode et ibidem traditum sepulturæ. Ipsoque honorificè sepulto, eo anno successit ei dompnus Rogerus qui secum venerat de Furnesio qui postea fuit subcellarius apud Caldrum. Qui cum esset magister novitiorum nec haberet nisi unum novicium et cum eo de observationibus ordinis loqueretur, omnes monachi subito et inopinatè accesserunt et irruerunt in eum et manibus apposis traxerunt, et elevantes eum à terra processerunt solempniter ad altare in oratorium, voce excelsa clamantes ipsum esse abbatem in nomine sanctæ Trinitatis, et sic ipsum ordinaverunt in abbatem et sibi professi sunt secundum ritum ordinis sui qui adhuc fuit de Savygneio sicut prædictum est. Postea verò idem abbas Rogerus in octavis Paschæ suscepit benedictionem apud Schyrburne de domino Eboracensi archiepiscopo ad præsentationem domini Rogeri de Molbray tunc ibidem præsentis et negotium procurantis.

Post hæc siquidem gesta secundum Dei ordinationem Furnesiensibus et alibi vulgariter relata, abbas et monachi de Furnesio manifestè percipientes se esse frustratos abbate G. nuper defuncto, et monachi qui de Caldra et porta Furnesii recesserant et se et successores suos submiserant immediatè ecclesiæ et abbati Savygneii et quod certum locum habuerunt ac terram viriliter coluerunt, sine spe et proposito revertendi ad Caldrum, ordinaverunt in abbatem Hardredum monachum Furnesii et ipsum cum quodam alio conventu iterum usque ad Caldrum transmiserunt, qui ab illo tempore usque in præsentī successionē debita prout possunt regulariter ibidem conversantur, quasi in eodem statu temporalium, semper tabescentes.

Peractis itaque quatuor annis apud Hode, ubi plures personæ receptæ fuerunt ad conversionem, abbas Rogerus supplicavit dominæ Gundræ ut ipsa suggereret domino Rogero de Moubray filio suo, quod locus de Hode nimis arctus fuit ad abbaciam construendam et quod alium provideret in situm aptiorem ad monachos suos qui in sessionibus et personis cotidie multiplicabantur. Siquidem veterani et emeriti milites de curia et familia dicti domini Rogeri conversi fuerunt ad eos et de bonis temporalibus secum attulerunt non modica, quibus suffragantibus constructa fuit una grangia apud Wildon. Inter quos milites duo fuerunt magni nominis et prudentiæ, scilicet Landricus de Agys et Henricus de Wasprey, et tercius prudentia non inferior Henricus Bugge custos operis abbaciæ, qui processu temporis multa bona domui suæ perquisierunt. Nam statim post eorum ingressum divulgabatur ubique per provinciam, quod illa nova habitatio de nobilibus viris et personis generosis erat mirabiliter infra breve suffulta, unde devotio omnium audientium inclinavit ad dictum locum.

Domina vero Gundrea audiens et concipiens supplicationem abbatis Rogeri et diligenter advertens militum subitam et inopinatam conversionem, amplius convertit ad eos gratiam suam et favorem. Et sic supplicavit domino Rogero filio suo ut ipsa posset conferre monachis de dote sua villam de Bellalanda super moram. Quam supplicationem matrem idem Rogerus anno Domini mxxliij. circa Nativitatem beatæ Mariæ Virginis devotè et benignè concessit, et ipsemet dedit prædictis monachis prædictam villam de Bellalanda cum ecclesia ejusdem villæ et omnibus pertinentiis.

Ista donatione sic peracta, abbas Rogerus et monachi sui ad commonitionem et præceptum Rogeri de Moubray se transtulerunt de Hode usque ad quandam locum in territorio Bellalande super aquam quæ vocatur Rye, et ibi construxerunt sibi parvam cellulam ubi eorum tegularia nunc est constructa, non multum ab abbacia quam nobilis vir dominus Walterus le Spek dominus de Helmesleye paulo ante xiiij. annis elapsis devotissimè construxerat, quæ nunc denominatur Ryevall. Et sic abbas Rogerus et monachi ejus manserunt super Ryam quinque annis.

Intentio quidem et voluntas Rogeri de Moubray fuit si fieri posset competenter, ut abbatia ex parte meridionali aquæ de Rye construeretur, ad illud commodum et aisiamenta aquæ per omnia habenda quæ Ryevallenses percipiunt ex parte boreali. Sed situs loci ad hoc competere non potuit quoquam modo, similiter et domorum nimia propinquitas non sinebat, nam uterque conventus singulis horis diei et noctis campanas suas mutuo audire potuerunt, quod non decebat nec diu potuit aliquid sustineri.

Cum verò dictus abbas R. et monachi ejus dictam villam Bellelandæ habuissent, decreverunt illam in grangiam unam redigere. Hæc illis cogitantibus assignaverunt quandam partem terræ ejusdem villæ hominibus ibi manentibus, scilicet apud Stutekelde, ubi dicti homines de novo inceperunt unam villulam et ibi manserunt per plures annos, eidem nomen primum imponentes, et sic eadem villa redacta est in grangiam.

Postea verò abbas R. perpendens diversa pericula et fatigationes parochianorum suorum de Scaltan advenientium ad maternam ecclesiam suam de Bellalanda, tum propter divina servicia audienda, tum propter divina sacramenta ecclesiastica percipienda, adivit ad dominum Henricum Murdac, archiepiscopum Eboracensem, qui quondam fuerat abbas de Fontibus, anno pontificatus sui primo, scilicet mxcxlvj. humiliter sibi supplicans et requirens, ut sibi et suo conventui licentiam donaret ad unam capellam construendam in villam de Scaltan quæ est infra limites parochialis ecclesiæ suæ de Bellalanda, præcipuè propter pericula prædicta et propter aisiamenta devoti benefactoris sui domini Hugonis Malbys, hæredum, et hominum suorum, in qua homines dictæ villæ de Scaltan tantum ibidem audirent divina et ecclesiastica perciperent sacramenta, reservata matri ecclesiæ suæ de Bellalanda corporum parochianorum de Scaltan morientium imperpetuum sepultura, quod usque hodie reverenter observatur. Optenta itaque licentia, dictus abbas R. et monachi sui diligenter et devotè in media villa de Scaltan sumptibus suis unam capellam construxerunt. Qua peracta, consummata, et libris vestimentis baptisterio et aliis necessariis prout decet domum Dei decenter ornata, præce pitabbas R. Landrico de Agys cellerario suo, quod cum omni festinatione et reverentia ac sine mora minorem campanam dictæ matricis ecclesiæ Bellelandæ in plaustro portari faceret usque ad dictam filiam suam de Scaltan festinanter. Qui justum complens et omnibus decenter et honestè ut dictum est consummatis, idem abbas R. dictam capellam contulit cuidam clerico Ricardo nomine. Et ad præsentationem dicti R. abbatis institutus est canonicè per dictum dominum Henricum archiepiscopum curam illius habens et tenens per quinquaginta et quatuor annos sine aliqua interruptione temporum vel annorum, scilicet per octo annos in tempore regis Stephani et per totum tempus regis Henrici filii Matildis imperatricis, et per totum tempus regis Ricardi filii prædicti Henrici regis, qui Henricus et Ricardus reges confirmant per cartas suas Bellamlandam cum pertinentiis.

Audientes autem multi tam noti quam extranei famam supernæ benedictionis super novam plantationem descendisse, ac volentes orationum et beneficiorum dicti R. abbatis et monachorum ejus fieri participes, magis ac magis ad eos corda sua et animos devotissimè direxerunt, et diversas elemosinas voluntariè et affluenter, prout cuique Deus dederat, eidem contulerunt. Nam dominus Hugo Malbys contulit eis Mortoniam cum pertinentiis, Snyleswath cum pastura et bosco sicut patet per cartas suas.

Postea autem manentibus quod Bellamlandam abbatem R. et monachis, idem abbas et petitionem et instantiam domini Rogeri de Molbray et Sampsonis de Albaneio dedit locum de Hode ubi prius habitare inceperant, quibusdam canonicis qui venerant de Bridlington, qui nunc sunt de Novo-burgo, pro omnimodis decimis grangiæ de Wildon et

Præterea idem Sampson dedit in excambio illius loci prædicto abbati R. xx. sol. annuatim de molendino de Cukwald, quos ipse inde percipere solebat. Et dominus R. Moubray istam conventionem per cartam suam confirmavit.

Videns autem Rogerus de Moubray quod multi convenerant ad serviendum Deo, et quod locus ille ubi monachi manebant in territorio Bellelandæ, ut supradictum est, ad abbatiam construendam convenire non potuit, nec propter vicinitatem Rievallis omnino decuit, cum venisset de australibus partibus adjecit ut dilataret terminos eorum, et dedit eis anno mxcxlvj. ad situm abbatiae suæ per estimationem Hugonis Malbys dapiferi sui duas carucatas de terra vasta in territorio de Cukwald subtus collem de Blakhou. Insuper dominus Thomas de Colevyle quietum clamavit et dedit Deo et monachis totam terram et nemus quod est inter stagnum molendini ipsorum et Thorpe. Totam etiam Bersclyvam et Burttoft, et quicquid pertinebat ad villam de Cukwald ab aquilonali parte de Whiteker ad faciendum inde quicquid voluerint imperpetuum.

§ Optulit etiam idem Rogerus Molbray abbati R. et monachis jus patronatus ecclesiarum de Thresk, Honyngham, et Kyrkeby Morisheved, et plures alias possessiones quas dictus abbas R. accipere recusabat, homo scrupulosæ conscientiae pro cura animarum, protestans et dicens quod satis et sufficienter donaverat eis. Quæ quidem recusatio multum displicuit domino R. de Molbray. Fuit enim intentio ejus talis, quod si abbas et monachi jus patronatus ecclesiarum optinuissent, per processum temporis in proprios usus illas faciliter impetrassent. Et dicebatur quod occasione istius recusationis ad instantiam et petitionem prædicti Sampsonis de Albaneio consanguinei R. Molbray data fuerunt jura patronatus dictarum ecclesiarum prædictis canonicis de Hode qui nunc vocantur de Novo-burgo, ubi etiam idem Sampson seipsum Deo reddidit et habitum suscepit canonice regularis. Procuravit insuper ab archiepiscopo Eboracensi et episcopo Lincolnensi quod dicti canonici de Hode pacificè possiderent in tota vita ipsius Sampsonis omnes ecclesias quas idem S. occupavit ante suum ingressum. § Cum igitur prædicti monachi, sicut prædictum est, cum abbate suo Geroldo iij. annis resedissent apud Hode et quinque annis postea cum abbate Rogero super Ryam in territorio Bellelandæ, inceperunt assartare viriliter in occidentali parte citra et dejuxta Middelburgam et ædificare subtus moram in dicto territorio de Cukwald, et confestim se transtulerunt in dicto territorio de Cukwalde, ubi ipsimet diligenter construxerunt ibi et ædificaverunt unam parvam ecclesiam lapideam, claustrum, et cæteras domos et officinas sicut adhuc ibidem manifestissimè liquet, et extunc ibi manserunt in sancta religione per annos xxx. Infra quos annos multi magnates tam de partibus istis quam de Westmerlandia non modicas donationes eidem abbati R. et monachis suis in elemosinam devotè optulerunt, sicut inferius patebit.

Illo in tempore quo dominus R. Molbray dedit abbati R. et monachis suis prædictas duas carucatas vastæ terræ in territorio de Cokewald, advenit mandatum subitum de partibus Normanniæ ad dominum R. Molbray, quod placitum motum fuit contra eum de castello de Baicis, cum toto dominio per quandam baronem Franciæ. Quod quidem castellum rex sibi nuper dederat quando suscepit cingulum militare. Propter quod placitum defendendum celeriter in Normanniam transfretavit cum literis domini Stephani regis, qui scripsit se velle dictum castellum cum appenditiis eidem Rogero contra omnes homines warantizare. Verumtamen per illud placitum nihil amisit.

Post recessum autem dicti R. versus Normanniam diversæ perturbationes contra abbatem R. et monachos statim emergerunt, quas ipsi usque ad tempus patienter sustinuerunt. Nam dominus Robertus de Stutevilla et Willielmus frater ejus calumpniaverunt totam terram quam dominus R. de Molbray dederat monachis in territorio de Cokewald ubi monachi habitabant, et moverunt placitum in curia prædicti regis contra dominum R. Molbray, et fuit prosecutum secundum legem terræ per longum tempus. Nam vicini generaliter testabantur quod bonum jus habuerunt in sua calumpnia. § Præterea dominus Robertus de Davidvilla dominus de Kilburne labores monachorum multum impedivit et protestando dixit quod monachi includebant magnam partem de solo quod pertinebat ad villam suam de Kilburne, et hoc pati nec permittere voluit quoquo modo. Similiter dominus Hugo Malbys, dominus de Scalton, multa mala monachis intulit tam per se quam per homines suos de Scalton et de Dale, quorum terræ et pasturæ cum terris monachorum conterminant. Nam die in diem fecerunt injustas querimonias distractiones et alia nocumenta ne monachi juxta eos quietem haberent. Similiter fecit et Gwido de Boltby. Et quia hujusmodi gravamina sine remedio diu sustineri non potuerunt, habito consilio cum conventu idem abbas R. transfretavit in Normanniam anno mclxlvij. cum literis dominæ Gundræ matris domini R. Molbray, quæ ipsum certificavit de placito moto per Robertum et Willielmum de Stutevilla et de gravaminibus quæ idem abbas R. et ejus monachi sustinuerunt. Et primo venit ad Savygneium ad capitulum generale, et ibi exposuit patri abbati quod fundator suus terram sibi sufficienter donaverat si illam posset in quiete possidere sine impetitione quorundam militum vicinorum, quorum molestias minus formidaret si fundator suus in Anglia fuisset. Sed alia negotia ibi expedienda demonstravit, inter quæ unum fuit domini Petri monachi Savygneii qui metiri inceperat quandam plantationem abbatiæ in confinibus Richemundiæ quam comes Alanus filius Stephani nuper dederat abbati Savygneiensi, de qua inferius in fundatione Jorevallis dicitur. Verum quia abbas R. usque ad finem capituli bene expectare non potuit, ad dominum R. de Molbray in Normanniam festinavit.

Ad quem cum pervenisset et causam sui laboris demonstrasset, promissum sibi fuit bonum remedium et festinum, sed negotia varia nondum tunc expedita ipsum impediunt quod in Angliam illa vice non potuit remeare, et ideo scripsit specialiter amicis suis, scilicet comiti Marescallo et comiti de Warennæ, quod ipsi supplicarent domino regi de tali gratia, quod illud placitum quod Robertus et Willielmus de Stutevilla moverant contra eum in curia regis, remaneret in illo statu quo tunc fuit usque ad reditum suum in Angliam. Et ipsi comites sic fecerunt et rex eorum supplicationem concessit, jurans quod R. de Molbray non amitteret unum pedem terræ in Anglia per placitum in curia sua dum extra regnum fuisset. Similiter scripsit Roberto de Davidvilla Gwydoni de Boltby et domino de Scalton quod ipsi cessarent deinceps molestias facere monachis suis, et si quid factum fuisset injuste, ad reditum suum in Angliam per legales homines vicinos secundum legem terræ voluit emendari. Scripsit etiam matri suæ, et dapifero suo, et omnibus ballivis suis in comitatu Eboracensi quod ipsi manutenerent, protegerent, et defenderent abbatem R. de Bellalanda, et monachos suos fratres, et terram eorum sicut suam propriam terram.

Ad istud mandatum quod abbas R. secum portavit, dominus de Scalton aliquid gravare monachos cessavit et sic suis præcepit pro reverentia mandati domini sui. Robertus tamen de Davidvilla primò mandatum parvipendit, sed postea respectum et pacem concessit. Revera dominus R. de Molbray post reversionem suam in Angliam pacem fecit cum Roberto et Willielmo de Stutevilla, quorum primus quietum clamavit jus suum quod habuit in terra et situ abbatiæ cum quodam cultello quem optulit super magnum altare apud Stockyng: alter vero cum carta sua. Postquam vero dicti Robertus et Willielmus de Stutevilla ita quietum clamaverunt totum jus suum monachis quod ab eis primitus exigebant, dominus R. Molbray levare fecit per visum et considerationem vicinorum ex parte occidentali prædictæ abbatiæ unum magnum fossatum inter solum monachis datum et solum prædicti Roberti de Davidvilla.

Nunc de donis datis abbati R. et monachis suis in elemosinam dicamus. Nam idem dominus R. Molbray dedit eisdem monachis duas carucas terræ in Faldyngton, et dimidium in Cave, et unam carucatam in Ampilford, et quicquid habuit infra Stene et Hirfeldebeck, et quicquid habuit in Kirkbymalsard, et grangiam de Bagby. Item ex donatione domini Willielmi de Percy, aliquam terram in Depedale et Catton. Item ex dono Bertranni de Bulmer, Balschaw et tres tofts in Eboraco. Item ex dono Willielmi de Acculm, piscariam de Gayteryk cum terra. Item ex dono Hugonis Malbys, villam de Bagby cum pertinentiis.

Ex dono Roberti de Davidvilla, piscariam de Swale, et xv. acras in Calcotedale, et pasturam in territorio de Kilburne. Ex dono Torphini filii Roberti, et Walevi de Bereford, et Johannis Tailebois terram in Warcopp. Ex dono Thomæ filii Cospatrici, terram in Hardevysdale. Ex dono Willielmi de Lonceastro, terram in Fauside. Ex dono Gerardi et Alani Lacelys, terram in Askeby. Ex dono Thomæ de Colvyll, pasturam in bosco de Everesleye, et viam de Weldon. Evolutis itaque tribus annis post concilium prædictum abbas R. ordinavit quendam abbatem de conventu suo, scilicet Johannem de Kynstan et ipsum misit usque Joravalle quam abbas Savygniensis Serlo dedit Rogero abbati nostro et ecclesiæ nostræ de Bellalanda. Qui Johannes cum suo conventu egressus est de Bellalanda usque ad Jorevallem viij. idus Martii qui fuit feria quarta anno Domini mcl. habitante abbate R. cum suis monachis apud Stockyng, ubi et ipse Dominus Omnipotens eorum opera mirabiliter et gressus merito dirigebat. Ecce subito quibusdam annis transactis maliciose nova oritur perturbatio. Nam dominus Hardredus qui post abbatem nostrum Geroldum apud Caldrum successit in officio pastoralis, cum ipse et ejus monachi vidissent divinam gratiam in tantum super domum Bellelandæ descendisse quod usque Jorevallem pulchram propaginem de se emisisset, ac de die in diem substantia temporalis accrevisset, et quia abbas de Furnesio parum aut nihil de eorum curavit destitutione, statuerunt inter se movere querelam apud Cistercium in capitulo generali contra abbatem Savygneii super paternitate et jurisdictione abbatis et monasterii nostri; sperabant certissime quod si domum nostram possent recuperare in filiam, quod matris inopia per filiæ abundantiam infra breve tempus posset relevari. Unde prænominatus Hardredus abbas de Caldra venit ad Bellalandam, et ibi primo convenit amicabiliter abbatem R. et conventum ejus de proposito et intentione sua, asserendo filiationem et subjectionem monasterii nostri ad ipsum et suam ecclesiam de Caldra jure exitus et descensionis pertinere, et quod abbas Savygneii injustè illam possidebat, et quod voluit ad judicium capituli generalis in sua petitione stare. Cui sic respondit abbas noster Rogerus. 'Credo inquit dompne abba de Caldra, quod si abbas esset institutus in domo vestra quando locus de Hode datus fuit abbati Geroldo, nunquam alii quam sibi subjectionem fecisset. Sed quia ecclesia tunc vacavit et sine pastore fuit, et abbas Furnesii ipsum abbatem G. et monachos ejus miserrime repudiavit, nescio cujus filiationi vel subjectioni abbas G. potuit aut debuit justius se et ecclesiam suam committere quam abbati Savygneii qui tunc fuit caput ordinis universi. Igitur quod a prædecessore meo rite factum est et huc usque per me continuatum infirmare aut revocare non possum, sed volo si placet sub festinatione significare abbati Savygneii, qui subjectus sum ea quæ per vos mihi demonstrata sunt. Et quia res ipsum specialiter tangit in capite, in ejus absentia aliter nolo respondere.' Cum isto responso abbas de Caldra recessit et abbas R. celeriter præmunivit abbatem Savygneii de suggestionem prædictam. Anno autem sequente abbas Savygneii in Angliam visitaturus advenit. In cujus præsentia idem Hardredus abbas de Caldra constitutus totam calumpniam suam amicabiliter relaxavit.

Audientes autem abbas et conventus de Furnesio quod Caldrenses totum jus suum et calumpniam paternitatis prædictæ omnino remiserant in forma præscripta, indignabantur supra modum contra illos, et dixerunt quod bona actio et justa illis competeat de paternitate domus nostra vendicanda, et querelam suam deposuerunt apud capitulum generale contra Ricardum tunc abbatem Savygneii. Quæ quidem causa sententia diffinitiva tandem conquievit. Nam venerabilis vir et piæ recordationis dominus Aldredus tunc abbas Rievallis ordine judiciario cum consilio quorundam abbatum ipsam causam discussit et terminavit in forma quæ sequitur.

dientiam. De causa inter dominum abbatem Fornesiensem et dominum abbatem Ricardum de Savygneio pro monasterio Bellelande quam nobis cognoscendam vestra sanctitatis delegavit auctoritas, vocatis venerabilibus patribus et coabbatibus nostris, diligenti cura et sollicitudine tractavimus. Auditis igitur intente utriusque partis rationibus cum de donatione loci de Beghlanda altercarentur, et de abbatis ejusdem subjectione partes hinc inde contenderent, abbas Furnesii primo proposuit ore proprio asserendo ipsum monasterium Bellelande sibi jure pertinere, sicut ex mera donatione quam monachis suis factam fuisse dicebat in elemosinam, insuper et abbatis ejusdem loci subjectionem ex reverentia filiali quam sibi persæpe fecerat et exhibuerat abbas Geroldus. Item proposuit quod idem G. animo feroci et indurato fugam inivit sine aliqua gravi violentia percepta cum monachis suis et tota substantia, ac monasterium suum de Caldra bonis temporalibus totaliter evacuatum inertè dereliquit, quod facere non potuit nec justè debuit, patris abbatis de Furnesio scilicet non interveniente assensu vel permissione. Item proposuit quod illa carta remissionis quam abbas Bellelande habet de abbate Hardredo nullum de jure debet habere vigorem vel effectum, quia prædictus abbas Hardredus sine permissione abbatis Furnesii hujusmodi jus monasterii sui de Caldra remittere non potuit, et qualiter talis illicita remissio irrita et inanis debet justè decerni. Hiis rationibus petit abbas Furnesiensis paternitatem monasterii Bellelande et abbatis subjectionem sibi et ecclesiæ suæ de Furnesio justè competere et sententialiter adjudicari.

‘At contra abbas Savygneii jus suæ defensionis palam in scriptis nobis porrexit et contradidit sicut hic subnotatur, Dixit quidem, primam et præcipuam donationem loci de Hode domui suæ factam per abbatem G. et in suo generali capitulo præsentatam, consilioque ejusdem capituli favorabiliter susceptam evidenter asseruit. Sed et ipsum abbatem G. in eodem generali capitulo quasi specialem filium subiectum deinceps abbati Savygneii et ejus successoribus consilio consensu et unanimi petitione totius conventus sui apud Hode tunc commorantis se gratis reddidisse et ultro submisisse sicut liberum sui et totaliter derelictum et abjectum de abbate Furnesii similiter et curam de Hode una cum regimine animarum ibidem sursum reddidit: et de eodem abbate Savygneii tanquam de patre, cui se submiserat, licet invitatus iterum suscepit et in ipsa subjectione usque ad obitum suum continuè perseverasse, ipsumque qui nunc præest ibidem dompnum Rogerum prædecessoris sui vestigiis hactenus adhæsisse, quem in omnibus habet virum dignum venerabilem et recommendatum.

‘Subjunctum etiam quod abbas Furnesii ipso demerito ingratitudinis, si dicere liceat, justè se exiit subjectione abbatis G. et successorum ejus, cum eundem abbatem G. qui sub spe refugii tempore generalis perturbationis in Coup-land apud Furnesium venit, et abbas Furnesii ipsum abbatem G. et monachos ejus viliter exprobravit, humanitatem caritatis totaliter ibidem denegavit, et cum potentia repellens valedixit. Qui sic spreto, effugati et abjecti, licet invitè inde recesserunt, et Deo providente locum habitandi primò apud Hode, deinde apud Bellamlandam infra breve tempus impetraverunt. Quem quidem locum et etiam se ipsos subjectioni et filiationi abbatis et ecclesiæ Savygneii immediatè submiserunt sicut illis benè licuit, ex quo nulli adhuc fuerant subjecti postquam abbas Furnesii ipsos refutaverat.

‘Hiis allegationibus cum abbas Savygneii petitioni et calumpniæ abbatis Furnesii directè obviasset, et auctoritatem sui generalis capituli ordinis Savygneiensis excipiendo prætendisset in forma prælibata, nos pro modo scientiolæ nostræ omnia quæ ab utraque parte dicta fuerant estimantes et diligenter examinantes, tandem censuimus cum consilio fratrum assidentium ea quæ allegabat abbas Furnesii in sua petitione adnullari posse et infirmari per ea quæ ab abbate Savygneii in sua defensione proposita fuerunt, si probarentur. Proinde cum abbas Furnesii cui de jure tanquam parti actrici incumberebat probatio suæ calumpniæ et assertionis, nullos testes ibidem habuisset; nec rationibus prædictis contra suam petitionem propositis a parte rea ulterius dicere voluisset; et abbas Savygneii testes de hiis, quæ astruebat sufficienter produxisset, qui quidem testes ipsius abbatis Furnesii testimonio ydonei inventi sunt, suscipiendos et audiendos esse decrevimus et eorum adquiescendum testimonio dignum duximus. Cum igitur secundum consuetudinem ordinis nostri ea quæ ab abbate Savygneii dicta fuerant legitimè et sufficienter testes producti probavissent, nos exceptioni peremptoriæ ab abbate Savygneii legitimè propositæ justè deferentes, et causam pro variis laboribus et expensis vitandis ulterius prorogare nolentes, subjectionem monasterii de Bellalanda abbati et ecclesiæ Savygneii et eundem abbatem Savygneii quietum et absolutum ab omni impetitione abbatis Furnesii in causa præmissa, auctoritate nobis commissa sententialiter adjudicavimus, dompno abbate Furnesii hanc sententiam cum omni humilitate et patientia reverentissimè sustinente.’ Interfuerunt hiis omnibus Godefridus abbas de Geroudona, quem loco abbatis de Waverleya utraque pars pro iudice suscepit. Affuerunt etiam abbates de Fontibus, de Novo Monasterio, de Parco Lude, de Basyngwerk, de Rufford, de Joravalle, de sancto Laurencio, de Kyrkestall, de Melsa, de Forda. Affuerunt etiam Thurstinus prior Ryevallis, Mauricius, Galo, Daniel monachi Ryevallis, Ricardus, Robertus monachi de Bellalanda, Robertus, Ricardus, Alanus monachi de Fontibus; Alanus de Revysby, et alii quamplures. In hunc modum quievit et determinata fuit solempniter dicta controversia.

Cum ergo dominus Rogerus Mowbray fundator noster audisset et vidisset multas calumpnias graves et injustas super domum et monachos suos de Bellalanda maliciôsè de die in diem et vehementer agitari, cogitavit apud se quomodo incommodis obviare et monachis tranquillitatem posset conferre: insuper et qualiter dona sua et Gundræ matris suæ, quæ eisdem monachis per vices ante dederant, valebant firmiùs et securiùs tueri et illibata custodiri, perrexit cum militibus suis idem R. Mowbray ad dominum Rogerum nobilem virum tunc archiepiscopum Eboraci et ad capitulum sancti Petri ibidem, humiliter et devotè eisdem supplicans, ut dona sua elemosinaria, necnon et matris suæ scripto suo autentico protegere dignarentur et conservare. Unde dictus archiepiscopus et capitulum petitionibus tam magni viri et mulieris consensum et assensum præbuerunt, eadem dona scriptis suis autentice roboraverunt eò libentiùs quo noverunt servos Christi à tanto viro devotius visitari: et sic idem archiepiscopus suscepit in protectionem beati Petri et suam, domum Bellelande anno pontificatus sui secundo; scilicet anno Domini mclv. Cum verò dictus abbas R. cum suis monachis in occidentali parte territorii de Cukwald, ut supradictum est, mansissent, viriliter extirpare cœperunt de nemore, et per fossas longas et latas magnas aquas de paludibus extrahere: ac postquam apparuit solida terra paraverunt sibi locum latum, ydoneum, et honestum in orientali parte ejusdem territorii inter Whiteker et pedem montis de Cambe, scilicet juxta Burtoft et Bersclyvam ubi de novo ecclesiam suam pulchram et magnam construxerunt, sicut patet in præsentem, quam consummet altissimus et conservet in secula seculorum. Et sic de Stockyng se illuc transtulerunt in vigilia Omnium Sanctorum, anno Incarnationis Dominicæ mc. septuagesimo septimo, ubi, Domino annuente, feliciter manebunt in æternum. Præfuit autem abbas R. in officio pastoralis Bellelande, scilicet apud Bellamlandam in mora et Stockyng, et juxta Whiteker per quinquaginta quatuor annos et ampliùs à die ordinationis suæ usque ad decrepitam ætatem, et tunc cessit officio suo.

Et sciendum quod omnes grangiæ, maneria, et possessiones, tam in comitatu Westmorlandiæ, quam Eboraci datæ fuerunt abbatiæ nostræ de Bellalanda tempore suo. Cum verò idem abbas Rogerus in itinere suo versus capitulum generale et in ejus reditu sæpius et instanter supplicasset beato Bernardo, ut sibi placeret suggerere abbati Savygneii, quod ipse suam reciperet cessionem, eò quod impotens, senio confectus, et debilitatus fuit ad regendum ulterius domum suam, sanctus Bernardus ejus nullo modo adquevit suggestioni, sed ipsum benignè hortabatur, ut ad domum suam rediret et ipsam regeret solita industria et discretione; dicens quod ejus successores nunquam sustentare deberent vel retinere terras et possessiones quas ipse tempore suo adquisierat.

Nos vero frater Philippus quondam abbas de Briostel, nunc autem abbas Bellelande et proximus dicti Rogeri successor, hæc scripsimus in anno Domini mc. nonagesimo septimo, scilicet anno abbatizationis nostræ secundo; et post transitum Alredi abbatis de Ryevall anno tricesimo. Vixit autem dictus Rogerus abbas post cessionem suam in domo Bellelande, una nobiscum, ferè iij. annis, et tunc plenus dierum in senectute bona ibidem quievit in Domino. Videant amodo successores nostri qualia secula inventuri sunt, et scripto diligenter commendent. Nam prædecessores nostri a tempore quo de Caldra recesserunt, usque ad instans tempus, mundanas tribulationes et oppressiones, defectus gravissimos et labores, pro spe retributionis in gloria cœlesti patienter sustinuerunt, et multipliciter sustinemus nos diebus istis, quæ ob tædium prolixitatis scribere recusamus.

Bulldewas, or Buldwas Abbey, in Shropshire.

doubt, however, that the bishop was the real founder: in several of the charters to this house he is expressly called so; and none of them make the slightest mention of "Matilda de Bohun."

This House, which was dedicated to St. Mary and St. Chad, was first instituted for monks of the Order of Savigny, who were afterwards united to the Cistercians.

Its chief endowments will be found detailed in the charters given in the Appendix.

UILDEWAS abbey was founded in 1135 by Roger bishop of Chester, the same see with that which is now called Lichfield and Coventry. Leland, in his Itinerary, speaks of "Matilda de Bohun, wife to Sir Robert Burnell," as "founder of Bildevays abbey, thowgh some," he says, "for the only gift of the site of the House, toke the byshope of Chester for founder."^a There is no

No COMMON SEAL, or Abbat's Seal of Buildwas, have as yet been discovered.

The Ruins of the abbey of Buildwas stand on the south bank of the river Severn, in a rich valley, about eleven miles from Shrewsbury. The walls of the church are nearly entire. It was originally built in the form of a cross; the tower, between the nave and choir, resting upon arches. The side ailes, transepts, and chapels of the choir are in total ruin. On the north side of the nave is the area of the cloister, now a farm-yard. On the east-side, the chapter-house, a parallelogram of forty-three by thirty-three feet, is still perfect; a second story above which is supposed to have been the dormitory. The dimensions of the cloister-court were a hundred and one feet by ninety. A range of lofty arches, with a tower in the centre, are supposed to be the remains of the refectory. The ruins of this abbey are, altogether, very massive, and very picturesque.

The monastery of ST. MARY DUBLIN was subject to this house, as will be seen hereafter: that of YSTRAT MARCHEL, in Montgomeryshire, was also subject to the visitation of its abbat and convent.

Abbey of St. Mary Dublin.

HE two charters of King Henry the Second relating to this monastery, printed by Sir William Dugdale, concern, first, the general confirmation of its endowment,^a and, secondly, the appointment of it as subordinate to the abbey of Buildwas.^b In the Latin head-title Sir William Dugdale has dated its foundation, upon the authority of the Annals of St. Werburgh, in 1139, which seems to have been, in reality, only the year in which this house was made subject to the Cistercian Order. Archdall, in his Monasticon Hibernicum, dates its foundation considerably higher; stating that, by some, it was thought to have owed its origin to the Danes, about the year 948, immediately after their conversion to Christianity, and by others to some of the Irish princes. At first, he says, it was of the Benedictine Order, then the most celebrated in the western world. He names two abbats in the tenth century. Malachy O'Morgair, he adds, who had been archbishop of Armagh, and who in 1139 was the legate to Ireland from Pope Innocent the Second, compelled it, with other abbeys, to embrace the Cistercian rule. About the year 1167 Richard Strongbow, earl of Pembroke, granted to this abbey the lands of Cluenlyff, as did Adam Feipo the church of Santreff, and the church at his castle of Skrine in the county of Meath, which he had endowed. Gilbert de Nugent bestowed on the monks, about the same time, the church of Desertale (since called Ballicar), and four carucates of land adjoining.

The two charters of King Henry the Second already mentioned Archdall assigns to the year 1174.^a

In the year 1182, on the feast of All Saints, Harvey de Monte Marisco having granted to Robert abbat of Buildewas the monastery of Dunbrothy, in the diocese of Ferns, with all its lands and appurtenances, the said abbat sent thither one Alan, a brother of his convent, and a discreet lay person, to make proper inquiries as to the grant; but finding the place waste and desert, the abbat of Buildewas made a transfer of his grant to the abbat of St. Mary's, together with the rights of patronage, and of visiting and reforming Dunbrothy.

Milo de Cogan, who died in 1184, granted to St. Mary's abbey Keadmohenock, with its appurtenances, and fifteen carucates of arable land in the county of Cork, and one burgage within, and one without the walls of the city of Cork.

John earl of Morton, lord of Ireland, afterwards King John, granted to the abbey, about A.D. 1185, a charter of confirmation of the lands of Clonlyff in which the abbey was situated, with the adjoining plain near the sea of Drysach, with the chapel of Clonlyff; and the lands, tithes, and other appurtenances of Culmyn; and the lands of Ballymachalmar, with the chapel and lands of Cnocrore; and the lands of Kerrakarochan, Murlegan, Dovenaghbirin; and the lands of Rathenea, with the chapel, &c.; and the lands of Glassachet, with the chapel; and the lands of Ballybathall, Ballylunan, and Thetechelchi, with the chapel and tithes of Ballybachall; and the lands of Portmornock, Lisban, and Munmackan, with the chapel of Portmornock, and all its appurtenances; also his burgages within the walls of the city of Dublin and without, and his burgage in Winkila; and to have a boat on the water of the Avon Liffey, to fish with equal privileges as his own boat. All this to be enjoyed by them quietly and free of any secular service whatever.

In 1187 Simon le Poer confirmed the grant made by Milo de Cogan, and made a further grant to the monks of St. Mary of sixty carucates of land contiguous to Cork, in his territory of Munster.

In 1193 Dovenald Gilleholmoc granted to the monks the lands of Tissock.

In 1196 John archbishop of Dublin confirmed the grant made by Adam de Feipo of the church of Santreff. Thomas primate of Armagh confirmed this charter A.D. 1200, and, in addition, granted the monks the lands of St. Patrick called Ballybachel.

Reginald king of the Isles granted to this abbey a firm and secure peace wherever his power extended.

In the same year, also, Oct. 12, King John, after he had ascended the throne of England, renewed his former charter of confirmation. This king also gave a new charter of confirmation, dated May 1st, 1203, and another in the year 1208.

Margaret daughter of Milo de Cogan, and wife to Simon le Poer, in 1226 confirmed the grants made by her father and husband to this abbey, and made a further grant to it of twenty carucates of land in the cantred of Roselchir.

Richard de Rupella, in 1231, granted them the townland of Disert.

In this same year Felix O'Ruadan, archbishop of Tuam, was also a benefactor. He gave to St. Mary's abbey the lands of Achedmor in Kerry Locknevarin, with their appurtenances.

In 1233 Roderick O'Connor gave them the townland of Desert, near Briola in the Theod, called Clonvadagh in Tirmany.

In 1235 Felix O'Ruadan, already mentioned, resigned his see, and spent the remainder of his days in this abbey. He had covered the church and belfry with lead, and in 1238 was buried at the foot of the altar of the church.

About the year 1290 William de Carra granted to this abbey the lands of Tilchestellan.

In 1301, the contention which had so long subsisted between the abbats of Savigny in France and of Buildewas in England, respecting the right of filiation of this abbey, was, in a general chapter held this year, determined in favour of Buildewas by means of William de Ashburne, then monk and proctor of Buildewas, and afterwards abbat of St. Mary's.

On the 27th of May, 1304, the abbey of St. Mary Dublin, with the church and steeple, were destroyed by fire. At this time it was the repository of the rolls of Chancery, which were all consumed, to the 28th of Edw. I. except the two rolls of that year, which by the king's writ were delivered to the then chancellor.

David archbishop of Armagh, on the 16th August, 1336, confirmed to this abbey the benefices which it held in Meath.

In 1342 the abbat of St. Mary's was restored to his rights over the house of Dunbrody, which were confirmed in the following year by John abbat of Buildewas.

In 1415, the manor of Carrickbrennan, which had been seized into the king's hands for divers felonies, extortions, and contempts committed by the abbat, was by the king's order restored.

In 1484 William earl of Nottingham granted to this abbey the advowson and patronage of the parish-church of Carelagh, or Cahyrlagh.

In 1485 and 1486 the prior and convent of Little Malvern, in Worcestershire, by two grants, made over to the abbat and convent of St. Mary various lands which they held in Ireland, chiefly in Clonsillagh and Fertullach; with the churches of Clonsillagh, Portloman, and its chapel of Woran, Castlelosty, Portshannon, Knockrath, Mastrum, and Rossagh. The bishop of Ardagh, Hugh Tirril lord of Castleknock, and Richard de Mare, made the monks of St. Mary's grants of benefices about the same time.

king's pardon. He died Jan. 20th, 1497.

JOHN ORUM, who succeeded as abbat, died Dec. 9th, 1500.

RICHARD BEGGE was the next abbat. He was succeeded, in 1511, by

JOHN BURGESS; who dying about Midsummer, 1531, was succeeded by

WILLIAM LAUNDY.

The abbey, with its possessions, was surrendered into the king's hands July 20th, 30th Hen. VIII.^a

On Dec. 20th, in the 35th of the same king, it was granted, with various surrounding lands, in capite, without rent, to James earl of Desmond.

Archdall has given transcripts of two Inquisitions taken in 1541, of the lands of which the abbat was seized in the counties of Dublin and Meath.

On July 9th, 1543, the abbey was granted to James earl of Kildare, for the keeping of his horses and train, at the times of his repairing to parliament or council: the same to be held by the fifth part of a knight's fee.

On Nov. 20th, 24 Eliz. the abbey, with the appurtenances, and a piece of land called Shillingeforde's garden, was granted, for ever, to Thomas earl of Ormond in common socage, not in capite, by the annual rent of five shillings, Irish money.

Archdall says, the abbat of this house had a seat in parliament as a baron. He also says, that a beautiful image of the Virgin Mary, with the infant Jesus in her arms, which had belonged to the abbey, was in his time preserved in the Roman catholic chapel in Mary's Lane Dublin.^b

Abbey of Bitlesden in Buckinghamshire.

BITLESDEN Abbey was founded in 1147. The abbey register gives the following particulars of the foundation: that in the reign of the elder Henry, one Robert de Meperteshal was lord of Bitlesden, who for having stolen a dog in the king's court, gave to Geoffrey de Clinton, the chamberlain, then upon a familiar footing with the king, the vill of Bitlesden, with five rood lands adjoining at Witefeld, on condition that he should protect him from the judgment of the court for that fact. This land afterwards escheated to the earl of Leicester, who gave it to his steward Ernaldus de Bosco, and he, foreseeing that the said lands might not afterwards remain secure to him and his heirs, with the advice and consent of the said earl founded an abbey there, and by deed gave it those lands. In course of time the aforesaid Robert, de Meperteshal would have sued for Bitlesden by plea, but the monks of that place, with the advice and assistance of the aforesaid earl, gave Robert ten marks, and by that means obtained a charter and confirmation from him.^a

In a charter addressed to the bishop of Lincoln and archdeacon of Buckingham, Ernaldus de Bosco speaks of his new foundation as subordinate to Gerondon abbey;^b but in what degree it continued so does not appear. Probably the first monks only were taken from it.

By another charter Ernaldus de Bosco gave the monks his lands at Sigresham.^c

By an inquisition taken in the reign of Edward the First, it was found that the lands of Mairelond were not liable to the duty of scutage.^d

Robert, earl of Leicester, in a charter addressed to Alexander, bishop of Lincoln, confirmed Ernaldus de Bosco's grant of Bitlesden as subordinate to Gerondon.^e

Browne Willis, in his History and Antiquities of the Town, Hundred, and Deanry of Buckingham, has given an account of various donations to Bitlesden abbey from Dodsworth's Excerpts from the Chartulary of Bitlesden.

Ernald de Bosco the second, with his body to be buried there, gave half a yardland in Little Houghton to Bitlesden. Ernald de Bosco the third confirmed his father's grant: as did Ernald de Bosco the fourth. The other instruments and charters selected by Willis will be found included in the analysis of the register of Bitlesden, which will presently be given.

The monks of St. Lucian, near Beavoys in France, who were possessed of an alien cell at Wedon Pinkney in Northamptonshire, in 1392, sold it to the abbat and convent of Bitlesden,^f by whom it was held but a few years; the same in 1440 being made a part of the endowment of All Souls College in Oxford. But of this we shall speak more at large in the account of Wedon.

ABBATS of BITLESDEN.

RICHARD occurs abbat in the time of Theobald, archbishop of Canterbury.^g Willis says, in 1151, 17 Steph. about four years after the foundation.^h

ALEXANDER, between 1157 and 1166.ⁱ

RICHARD died abbat here in 1192, 3 Ric. I. as the annals of Waverley tell us;^k in which mention is made of the deposing of

WILLIAM, A.D. 1198, 9 Ric. I. who was, no doubt, his successor.^l

ADAM, cellarer of Bruern abbey in Oxfordshire, A.D. 1198, 9 Ric. I.^m He occurs in the 3d of John.ⁿ

ADA DE BATHON, who may perhaps be the same person, occurs as abbat in 1209.^o

MAURICE, called also MARICIUS, occurs in the 3d,^p 4th,^q and 11th of Henry III.^r

HENRY, A.D. 1226, 10 Hen. III.^s

STEPHEN DE CANTUAR, or CANTERBURY, died abbat here A.D. 1228, 12th Hen. III.^t After him

THOMAS presided here. He occurs A.D. 1238 and 1240.^u

GIFFARDUS is mentioned in 1236, in which year he resigned, and became abbat of Waverley, in Surrey.^x

WALTER occurs in 1238,^y and again in 1240.^z

HENRY MALLORE received the benediction as abbat from the bishop of Lincoln, on Palm Sunday, A.D. 1241, 25 Hen. III.^{aa} He did not hold the abbacy long: as

PHILIP occurs abbat in 1245,^{ab} and again in 1250.^{ac}

WILLIAM, his successor, also occurs in 1250,^{ad} and again in 1254.^{ae}

ROGER occurs in 1259,^{af} and again in 1262:^{ag} as does another

WILLIAM in 1264.^{ah} He occurs again in 1266,^{ai} 1272,^{aj} and 1281,^{ak} and was, no doubt, the same person with WILLIAM DE WIHAM, or BYHAM, who occurs as abbat in the 8th,^{al} 13th,^{am} and 14th of Edw. I.^{an}

JOHN THORNBURG, or THORNBOR occurs as abbat in 1290.^{ao} He is mentioned in two instruments of the years 1293 and 1295.^{ap} Willis says he was abbat in 1298.^{aq}

WALTER also occurs in 1298 and 1300.^{ar}

JOHN MARUS occurs in 1301 and 1307.^{as} Willis calls him JOHN SARUM, and says, he is mentioned as abbat in 1323, 16 Edw. II.^{at} but this was another person; for

WILLIAM occurs in 1309:^{au}

WALTER in 1311:^{av}

THOMAS in the 5th^{aw} and 8th of Edw. II.;^{ax} and

JOHN in the 9th, 10th, 13th, and 14th Edw. II.^{ay}

This must have been the John alluded to in the last date of Willis under JOHN DE SARUM.

THOMAS DE BUCKINGHAM is supposed by Willis to have been elected about 1324, 17th Edw. II.^{az} He occurs in that year in one of the Harleian charters.^{ba}

The CHARTULARY of Bitlesden, quoted by Dugdale, is now one of the Harleian Manuscripts, Num. 4714. It was purchased by Lord Oxford in 1728. It is a folio volume of considerable thickness, written upon three hundred and sixty-three leaves of vellum.^y When Dugdale made his transcripts from this register, in 1640, it was in the possession of the Duke of Buckingham, and so remained long after. From an original letter of Dugdale to Sir John Cotton, dated 15th October, 1675, which, in 1806, was in the possession of Dr. William Blount, of Hereford, it should seem as if another Chartulary of Bitlesden was somewhere extant. He says, "I pray you forget not to speake to the Duke of Buckingham for that Leiger Booke of Bittlesden, which he is in justice obliged to let you have, having lost that which your father lent him."

In his Grace the Duke of Buckingham's library at Stow there are no fewer than eighty-one ancient deeds of Bitlesden Abbey, of different reigns from that of King John, with Seals appendant to most of them. The oldest deed is of the year 1205.^z

In the Office of the King's Remembrancer is a record as to this abbey, entitled "Carta abbis et conventus de Bitlesden." Pasch. 17 Ric. II.

In the Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer's Office, "Bitlesden. De manibus reginæ amovendis de situ monasterii de Bitlesden et aliis in com. Buckingham, ac Arthuro domino Grey de Wilton liberando." Hil. Rec. 21 Eliz. rot. 139.

One impression of the COMMON SEAL only of Bitlesden has been met with, and that is very imperfect, on red wax, attached to the Surrender in the Augmentation Office, dated 25th Sept. 30 Hen. VIII. The seal is oval, representing the Virgin and Child under a Gothic canopy, having a figure on her left hand, probably intended for St. Nicholas. The figure on her right hand, if there ever was one, is gone. A monk, on his knees, is praying under an arch below. Part only of the legend remains, viz. s . co-mvne DE . BYTLESDEN.

Willis says the church of Bitlesden was demolished very soon after its surrender. "However," he adds, "the ruins of the church and abbey-house were left in good part standing when I visited it anno 1712, and there were then to be seen the walls of the east side of the cloister, and a part of the tower, together with a small chapel, and the chapter-house, which was a handsome arched room of about forty feet square, supported by four pillars. In the chapel lay the broken effigies which was on the tomb of one of the Lord Zouches. It was of alabaster and in armour."

In the next page he says, "The present proprietor, Henry Sayer, Esq.^c has so totally demolished every thing, that not the least remains appear, or even the site of any building whatsoever where the abbey stood; or any of its offices: but it was below the present chapel erected by him to the south-west part of it."

berto dimidiam partem de Marieland ad se hospitandum. Processu verò temporis prædictus Gaufridus de Clinton dedit prædicto Roberto quandam parentem suam in uxorem, et cum illa dedit ei prædictam villam de Bitlesden cum supradictis quinque virgatis terræ de Witefeld: et tunc idem Robertus tenuit Bitelesden, et quinque virgatas præfatas et dimidiam partem de Marieland: et ita extunc dimidia pars de Marieland secuta est Bitelesden. Tempore verò Stephani regis, quando maxima guerra fuit, sæpeditus Robertus perhendinavit apud Meperteshal et dimisit Bitelesden, et nec ipse nec aliquis pro eo inde servicium fecit comiti Leycestriæ, sed terra illa escaeta comitis. Tunc idem comes dedit terram illam senescallo suo Ernaldo de Bosco pro servicio suo. Idem verò Ernaldus, prævidens imposterum quod fortè terra illa sibi et hæredibus suis remanere non possit, concessu, consilio, et auxilio prædicti comitis, fundavit ibi abbatiam, quam comes carta sua confirmavit. Processu verò temporis prædictus Robertus de Meperteshal voluit placitare de Bitlesden, et tunc monachi de Bitlesden auxilio et consilio prædicti comitis dederunt prædicto Roberto decem marcas, et ita habuerunt cartam et confirmationem suam. Ita incepta et fundata abbatia de Bitlesden, anno Gratiae mclxlvij. sexto idus Julii, hoc est anno xiiij. a fundatione de Gerondon.

Wardon Abbey, in Bedfordshire.

WARDON, or De Sartis, abbey was founded in 1135 by Walter de Espec, by whom it was dedicated to the blessed Virgin Mary, and furnished with monks from the abbey of Rievaulx. It was named De Sartis from "de essartis," or "assartis," as built in a place which had once been a wood, but which was afterwards grubbed up and cleared. The Annals of Norwich quoted by Dugdale in the head-title of the Appendix to the present Account make this abbey to have been founded in 1136; and Leland, twice in his Collectanea, puts it in 1138;^a but King Stephen, when confirming the foundation, expressly dates his charter in the first year of his reign, A.D. 1135.^b Another charter of confirmation from King Richard the First names the different lands with which it was endowed. These instruments are given in the old edition of Dugdale: a few others are added in the present edition which are not of minor consequence.

In the year 1217 Fulk de Brent, a powerful baron, whose enormous outrages seem to have rendered him the terror of the country, treated the monks of this convent with much cruelty on account of a dispute about a wood, and carried thirty of them prisoners to Bedford Castle. Yet such was the ascendancy of the church at that period, that he, who set the civil power at defiance, was glad to make his peace by submitting to receive manual discipline from the monks in the chapter-house at Wardon, at the same time confirming to them the wood about which the dispute had arisen, and promising them his protection ever after.^c

In 1252, when Henry the Third, to improve his revenue, granted so many charters of free-warren, the abbat and convent of Wardon purchased one for their surrounding lands, to prevent the waste and depredations which certain of their greater neighbours committed upon them. Matthew Paris has chronicled the persecution they sustained on this occasion from William de Beauchamp, as well as the conversation which, in 1256, the king himself held with the abbat.^d The lands and tenements for which William de Beauchamp continued to exact services, not only from the abbat, but from his tenants, in 1257, are enumerated in an article in the Appendix.^e

The temporal possessions of the abbey of Wardon, as they were entered in the rolls of Pope Nicholas's Taxation, A.D. 1291, will be found enumerated in the note below.^f

^d A.D. 1252. "Eodemque anno rex comperiens quod discordiæ magnatum ortæ propter warennas eorum, thesauro suo per forisfacturas, in quas inciderunt, præbuerunt, licet turpiter, incrementum, fecit acclamari voce præconia in locis publicis, scilicet marcatis; quod qui Warennam habere desideraret, loqueretur inde cum eo, et data pecunia, benignè exaudiretur. Quod et aliqui fecerunt, et sic deperiit jus multorum, per antiquas chartas eis concessum, confirmatum, et usitatum. Unde abbas et conventus de Waredona, credentes sibi prodesset si warennam haberent, quia nobilium ministri conterminorum sepes eorum dilacerabant, et agros eorum seminatos percurrentes et omnia concultantes, fratres eorum cultores et custodes verberibus et verbis contumeliosis affecerunt, a rege data pecunia warennam impetrarunt. Willielmus autem de Bello Campo, videns in hoc sibi derogatum esse; pecudes cepit et afflixit eorundem, et fratres eorum custodes trucidavit, vulneravit, et multipliciter damnificavit." Mat. Par. edit. 1684, pp. 740, 741.
A.D. 1256. "Erat autem tunc temporis quidam miles dives, Willielmus de Bello Campo dictus, uxorem habens nomine Ydam, genere nobilem sed moribus degenerem nimis et ignobilem. Quæ circumdegentium religiosorum et religiosarum persecutrix fuerat indefessa. Hæc igitur nacta jam nocendi abbati de Wared. de regis ira opportunitate, more fæmineo nocere machinans, gravem movit contra dictum abbatem in regis curia quæstionem; sciens quod rex ipsum justè vel injustè, quia iratus, damnificaret. Et cum ex causa pusilla, vel nulla, in misericordiam regis cecidisset, et necesse haberet abbas a rege ipso, quia alias rex vias præcluserat, misericordiam humiliter postulare, rex torvo vultu jurando horribiliter respondit, 'Qua fronte, abbas, misericordiam postulas? Qui nuper mihi indigenti misericordiam cum tuis co-abbatibus denegasti.' Et damnificavit eum rex in multa pecuniâ, ad arbitrium et persequentium voluntatem, effusione."—"Similiter et alii Cisterciensis ordinis abbates, damna et injurias subire multipliciter compellebantur." Ibid. p. 794.

The COMMON SEAL was circular, and very elegant; the subject of it represented the Blessed Virgin crowned, holding in her right hand the Child, in her left, a stalk with flowers: she is seated under a highly ornamented canopy, and in niches on each side of her, are figures praying to her, the whole interior profusely ornamented with tabernacle work. Legend. s. COMVNE. ABBATIS. ET. COVENTVS. DE. WARDONA. There is a Counter Seal bearing the abbatial ARMS, namely, a demi crosier between three warden pears in a shield, surrounded with these words, spes. mea. in. deo. est.^a The impresson on this seal is on red wax; it is appendant to the Surrender in the Augmentation Office, dated 4th Dec. 29th Hen. VIII.

In 1669 Wardon abbey was the seat of Sir Ralph Bovey. The small remains which are now to be seen of the conventual buildings are of brick of no great antiquity. A considerable part of what is represented in Buck's view was taken down about the year 1790. The site, about two miles from the parish church of Wardon, is the property of William Whitbread, Esq. M.P.

Abbey of Ford, in Devonshire.

ORD Abbey was stated in the former edition of the Monasticon to be in Dorsetshire, but it is really in Devonshire, in the parish of Thorncomb and deanry of Honiton.

The particulars of the foundation of this abbey are minutely stated in the first article of the Appendix to the present Account, from a Cottonian manuscript. Richard the son of Baldwin de Brioniis, it appears, who held the honor of Okehampton, brought, in 1136, an abbat and twelve Cistercian monks from Waverley abbey to his land of Brightley in this county. Richard, however, dying without issue, his inheritance fell to his sister Adelicia; and the monks having been five years at Brightley, and not liking that barren place, resolved to return to the monastery whence they had been brought. Adelicia seeing them as they travelled on foot, two and two, through her manor of Thorncomb, with the cross carried before them, inquired into the cause of their departure; which being explained to her, she immediately gave them Thorncomb, with the principal mansion of the same called Ford, and afterwards Westford. There they continued till convenient dwellings and offices were built for them at the place then called Harteschath, but since Ford.

Hawisia de Courtney, descended from Adelicia, gave to the monks of Ford certain land at Herteyne for the support of three poor persons in the infirmary of the abbey. She died in 1209. Through the means of her son, Robert de Courtney, Geoffrey de Pomerai was induced to bestow upon these monks the land of Tale.

As lords of the honor of Okehampton, the Courtneys for many generations continued to be the patrons of Ford abbey: in one or two instances, however, they are recorded to have been oppressors.

Josceline and John de Pomerai at different times confirmed to the monks the manor of Tale.^a

King Richard the First, in a charter of confirmation, enumerated all their possessions, as they stood in the first year of his reign.^b

ROBERT died in 1190.

JOHN, commonly called Devonius; the friend and confessor of King John. Learning flourished prodigiously at Ford under his administration. He died in 1220.

ROGER resigned in 1236.

JOHN DE WARWICK died in the abbacy in 1246.

ADAM was the next abbat.

WILLIAM DE CRUKERNE;^d whose opposition to the bishop of his diocese caused his excommunication in 1276; he having previously excommunicated the bishop.

Bishop Bronescomb, Mr. Oliver informs us from the Exeter Registers, having sent information of the abbat's proceedings to the king, invoked the assistance of the secular power to punish the abbat's contempt and rebellion. "The king," in consequence, "appointed Walter Stamel, dean of Sarum, and Thomas Weke, archdeacon of Dorset, professors of canon and civil law, to decide the controversy. On the 22d of October, 1276, these ecclesiastical judges held their first sitting at Westminster. The abbat declared his repentance, and his readiness to pay down 500*l.*, if such sum should be required by the court; but the judges deferred giving any opinion until after the following Easter, although they were urgently requested by Bishop Bronescombe to decide immediately.

"In the meanwhile, the abbat most anxiously implored the king to prevent the secular power from being directed against him; he maintained that the censures of his bishop were absolutely null and void, as his convent was specially exempted by papal indulgents from any episcopal jurisdiction; he represented the very considerable injury already sustained by himself and his convent, and declared that certain ruin awaited them unless his majesty should interpose in their favour.

"At last the parties agreed, by an indenture dated at Westminster, 5th May, 1277, absolutely to abide by the decision of the abovementioned judges, under a penalty of 100*l.* to be forfeited to the obedient by the refractory party. On the same day the final sentence was passed, viz. that the abbat should recall the sentences of excommunication in the very places where he had fulminated them against the bishop; that he should pronounce them to have been absolutely null and void; that he, his monks and dependants, should proceed, on the ensuing feast of the Nativity of St. John the Baptist, from the gate of St. Peter's cemetery in Exeter, to the entrance door of St. Peter's church, bare-headed, bare-footed, and loosely dressed, and there receive a discipline either from the bishop or his deputy; and that the abbat should further pay, for himself and convent, one thousand marks. The bishop is then enjoined to revoke, without any difficulty, all his censures against the abbat and convent; to remit nine hundred of the said marks; the payment of the remaining hundred marks to be made by the abbat to the bishop or his proxy in the cathedral church, in equal portions, on the next festival days of Michaelmas and Easter; and, with the exception of the discipline,

NICHOLAS was confirmed abbat Jan. 1, 1284.

HENRY occurs in 1312.

WILLIAM was confirmed abbat Sept. 22d, 1319. Mr. Oliver has given the formula of his obedience.

JOHN was admitted abbat June 24th, 1328.

ADAM was confirmed Sept. 29th, 1354.

CHYLHEGLYS occurs abbat in Bishop Brantyngham's Register in 1373.

WALTER BURSTOK was confirmed April 16th, 1378. He was alive in 1411.

RICHARD is believed to have been Burstok's successor.

ELYAS occurs abbat in 1462.

WILLIAM WHITE appears as abbat in 1491.

THOMAS CHARDE, alias TYBBES, was the last abbat. He surrendered his house to the king, March 8th, 1539.^b

The Pensions granted to the religious here, at the Dissolution, will be found in the Appendix.^c

In the 26th Hen. VIII. the spiritual and temporal possessions of Ford were valued in the gross at 381*l.* 10*s.* 6½*d.*: in the net income at 373*l.* 10*s.* 6½*d.*^d

The Scite was granted Oct. 28th, 31 Hen. VIII. upon lease to Richard Pollard, Esq.^e and on June 24th, in the 32d Hen. VIII. to the same person in fee.^f

Sir John Pollard, the son of the first grantee, alienated the scite to Sir Amias Paulet, whose father, Sir Hugh Paulet, had been appointed head steward of the abbey by the last abbat. Sir Amias disposed of it to William Roswell, Esq., from whose family it passed to that of Prideaux: and subsequently to the Gwynnes. Ford is still the residence of J. F. Gwynn, Esq.

Ford abbey, at present, exhibits considerable remains of the buildings which were erected by Thomas Charde, the last abbat.^g

It appears by a note of Hearne, at the end of the third volume of William of Neubridge, p. 778, that about a century ago there remained a gallery called the Monks' Walk, with small narrow windows, and the cells of the monks.

The original chapel of the abbey, built in the twelfth century, remains.^h

DOMINUS Baldwinus de Brioniis, miles inclitus de Normannia, Albredam neptem domini Willielmi Bastardi nobilissimi ducis Normanniæ, duxit in uxorem; ex qua dictus Baldwinus genuit, inter alios, unum filium dictum Ricardum, et unam filiam nuncupatam Adeliciam. tatus Devoniae, pro quodam annuo redditu domino regi solvendo; cujus obtentu donationis et custodiæ dicebatur dictus dominus Ricardus, vicecomes Devoniae. Quilibet autem successorum suorum sic consequentur dicebatur usque ad annum regni regis Henrici filii regis Johannis sextum decimum, quum dictum castellum in manus regias assumebatur.

Dictus autem dominus Ricardus, nuper miles, strenuus sed demum inveteratus et Deo affectus, multum devotus, terram suam de Brightley infra dictum honorem de Okehampton situatam ad abbatiam ordinis Cisterciensis ibidem fundatam, anno Domini mccccxiiij. concesserat, ac à domino Gilberto abbate de Waverleia sancto viro conventum de suis illuc transmittendum impetrabat.

In loco igitur abbatiae competenti præordinato, ædificia magis necessaria per triennium erexerat, ac anno Domini mccccxvj. et regni regis Stephani anno primo, duodecem monachos, cum domino Ricardo eis in abbatem præfecto tertio decimo, ad devotissimam sui instantiam illuc pedites et processionaliter cum cruce erecta et primò quinto nonas Maii de domo de Waverleia, Cisterciensis ordinis, Wintoniae diocesis venientes tam benignè quam votivè suscipiens, ibidem tanquam in eorum possessione titulo sufficiente eis super hoc promittens confecto devotè collocabat. Sic igitur præmissis voti sui compos pro majore parte effectus, illis in structuris et aliis necessariis subvenire non desiit, donec anno sequenti septimo calendis Julii anno videlicet Domini 1137, ac regni regis Stephani secundo, humatus fuit, cujus etiam corpus vel ossa cum dictis monachis postea de Brightley apud Fordam translata fuerunt, et cum ossibus dicti abbatis sui Ricardi postea apud Brightlaye etiam defuncti, et dominæ Adeliciae sororis suæ postmodum defunctorum, hic illic separatim in presbiterio ultra quod jam summum altare erigitur sepulta erant.

Hic vicecomes Ricardus nullam prolem habuit, sed totum jus suum hæreditarium eidem Adeliciae soli sorori suæ reliquit. Quæ quidem Adelicia dicto fratri suo in hæreditate successerat, ac etiam vicecomitissa nuncupata erat.

Cum verò dicti monachi per quinque annos in loco memorato de Brightley mansissent, ac post mortem dicti domini vicecomitis Ricardi præ inopia et præ dira sterilitate victualiumque penuria ibidem amplius morari non potuissent, ad domum suam pristinam de Waverleia cum abbate suo secundo domino Roberto de Penigton redire sunt compulsi; quos cum dicta vicecomitissa per manerium suum de Thorncomb modo illo quo venerint domum revertentes, cum cruce erecta, et primò binos pedites procedentes conspexisset, illos statim ad se asciverat, ac demum ei seriem, redditusque sui causam palam ei facientibus, dolore tacta intrinsecus, cum gemitu dicebat, 'Absit à me domini et patres sanctissimi opprobrium tam damnabile et ignominiosum periculum, ut quod dominus meus et frater Ricardus pio devotionis affectu ad Dei honorem nostrumque omnium salutem tam solempniter quam salubriter inceperat, ego vero soror ejus, et hæres cui decedendo omnia tradidit in manus, non velim aut valeam ad debitum perducere effectum. Ecce manerium meum in quo jam consistimus fertile satis et nemorosum ac abundans frugibus, quod vobis in excambium pro terra sterili de Brightleia cum tota mansione nostra et domicilio imperpetuum donamus, manete hic donec alibi in ista possessione vobis competentiùs fit monasterium, nec vobis in hoc deesse possumus sed satis juvabimus ad construendum.' Sic ergo pia et religiosa domina dictos monachos in manerio suo de Thorncomb perpetuò mansuros gratanter fundaverat, ac curiam suam seu domicilium dicti manerii principale, quod tunc Forde, nunc autem Westford dicitur, eis sufficienti titulo et plenaria seisinâ in integrum mancipabat.

Quo quidem in loco sic admissi et dimissi præfati monachi, ibidem, id est apud Westford, in domicilio quod tunc fuerat dictæ vicecomitissæ ferè sex annis residerant, donec nonnullæ sibi competentes structuræ officinarum regularium in loco monastrali quod tunc Hartescath, sed nunc Forda dicitur, illis erectæ erant. Concepit etiam dicta domina Adelicia de nobili viro domino suo quem priùs acceperat in conjugem, et peperit unam filiam nomine Aliciam sui ipsius hæredem. Anno autem secundo post dictorum monachorum translationem de Brightley apud Fordam, et eorum ibidem ut præmittitur foundationem anno regni regis Stephani septimo, anno videlicet post incarnationem Domini Jesu Christi 1142, nono calendis Septembris, dicta vicecomitissa Adelicia obiit, et apud novum monasterium de Ford sepulta quiescit, et successit ei in dominio de Okehampton domina Alicia uxor domini Randolphi Avenell filia sua antedicta, quam solam sibi hæredem reliquerat, quæ et castrum Exoniae una cum custodia comitatus Devoniae pro certo redditu annuo ut priùs similiter obtinuit. Hæc et unicam filiam dictam Matildam habuit, quæ in fata decessit, quæ Matilda filia ejus et hæres, prædictis parentibus suis defunctis, totam dictam hæreditatem, et cum castello Exoniae, et totius comitatus custodia obtinuit, dominoque Roberto de Aubrincis legitimè copulata, filiam unam dictam Hawisiam, necnon duas alias, postea factas moniales, eidem pariendo produxit. Mortuo tandem dicto viro D. Roberto de Aubrincis, id est de Averinges, secundo marito, id est, nobili viro D. Roberto filio regis Henrici primi notho, conjugata fuerat, de quo etiam concipiens peperit filiam ejusdem viri sui hæredem quam et Matildam vocabat.

Fuerat itaque tam post contractum matrimonium cum dicto D. Roberto de Aubrincis primo viro suo, quam et post ejus decessum, vicecomitissa nuncupata; sed de ejusdem cognomine, post ejus obitum, Matildis de Aubrincis, id est de Averinges vulgariter nominata. Hæc etiam suis monachis de Forda tuta semper protectrix erat, et conservatrix amicissima, in Deum et sanctam religionem piæ devotionis et affectionis viscera materna gerens, ad valentiam nempe sexaginta marcarum suis intercessoribus, dictis videlicet monachis, simul et semel contulit, præter alia bona et commoda innumera, quæ eis frequentius et libentius fecit.

Obiit denique vir ejus secundus, dominus Robertus filius regis Henrici anno Domini m.clxxii. pridie calendis Junii, et post ipsum vicecomitissa Matildis, itaque de Aubrincis ut priùs nuncupata, undecimo calendis Octobris anno Domini m.clxxiii. et regni regis Henrici secundi 19. Ambæ igitur ejusdem filiæ, Hawisia videlicet, prioris viri sui hæres, et filia sua, domini videlicet Roberti de Aubrincis, necnon Matildis proles domini Roberti filii regis et ejusdem hæres, occasione custodiæ et maritagiû in manus regias assumptæ fuerunt, ac demum militi inclyto et generoso domino Reginaldo de Courtnay, tam earum custodia, quam maritagiû à rege collata erant. Seniores igitur filiam Hawisiam, tanquam nobiliorem, dictam vicecomitissam dominus Reginaldus sibi nupserat, sed juniorem, scilicet Matildam, dicti Roberti filii regis patris sui hæredem, filio suo Willielmo de Courtnay de priore conjuge in Normania primogenito, in uxorem contrahebat, annis Dom. et regis Henrici supradictis.

Fuit autem iste dictus Reginaldus de Courtney filius domini Flori, filii regis Franciæ Lodovici, cognomento Grossi; ac etiam ista Hawisia vicecomitissa uxor ejus secunda, de sanguine regio Anglicano, ex parte dominæ Albredæ nepthis etiam regis Willielmi Bastardi matris aviæ suæ dominæ Adeliciae vicecomitissæ primitus memoratæ generosæ exorta. Tota ergo illorum posteritas Reginaldi, videlicet, et Hawisiæ tam ex patre quam ex matre de regio semine prodiit, ac tribus regia Franciæ pariter et Angliæ in eis mixta fuit, sic sanguis eorum fit merè ingenuus et præcipue generosus. Genuit prædictus dominus Reginaldus de memorata vicecomitissa domina Hawisia uxore sua prolem valde inclitam, Robertum, scilicet, de Courtnay ipsorum hæredem: solitam itaque antecessorum suorum devotionem et affectionem in Deum, et dictos monachos suos de Forda penitus continuaverat, ac præter alia à pietatis obsequio ad ipsorum defensionem, indemnitate et promotionem frequenter, quasi ubique illis exhibita, per quoddam munus centum marcarum in pecunia numerata, aliorumque jocalium et catalorum se illorum precibus devotè commendabat, magis enim confidebat in orationum suffragiis quam in prædiis quibuscunque seu possessionibus terrenis.

Dilectus igitur à Deo et hominibus, cujus memoria in benedictione, quinto calendis Octobris anno Domini m.cxciv. et regni regis Ricardi quarto feliciter obiit in Christo, et apud Fordam in aquilonari parte presbiterii sepultus quiescit. Dicta verò vicecomitissa de cognomento viri sui Reginaldi de Courtnay, cujus erat relicta, domina Hawisia de Courtnay extitit nuncupata, quæ diutiùs in sua viduitate ligia operibus misericordiæ et pietatis intenta terram de Hertheyne dictis monachis de Forda ad sustentationem trium pauperum in infirmatorio seculari perpetuò procurandorum tandem contulit, et alia beneficia similia eisdem fecit. Obiit tandem plena dierum in senectute bona pridie calendis Augusti anno Dom. mcccix. et anno regni regis Johannis decimo, quæ in ecclesia Fordensi in australi parte presbiterii sepelitur.

Surrexit ergo dictus Robertus de Courtney dictorum Reginaldi et Hawisæ filius et hæres legitimus, qui totum honorem de Okehampton jure hæreditario obtinuit, castellumque Exoniæ, ac custodiam totius comitatus pariter tenuit, donec rex Henricus anno sui regni 16. dictum castellum sicut alia castella Angliæ plurima in manus suas assumpserat, et ea cuidam Petro de Rievalle committebat. Et tunc verò dictum castellum simul et custodiam totius comitatus Devonæ amiserat; ob cuius amissionem vicecomes ampliùs nuncupatus non erat. Prædiis tunc et redditibus propriæ et pristinæ hæreditatis, de Okehampton, videlicet, ac aliis, ut oportuit, contentus, et tam strenuitate probitatis, quam liberalitatis amore plurimum floruit, sed de suis monachis eorumque monasterio de Forda, multum sollicitus fuit, nullam eis molestiam, aut injuriam, seu gravamen quodcunque aliquando intulit, sed nec ab aliis ipsos aliquando molestari vel gravari permisit; solebat etiam inter alios asserere, et pluries super hoc applaudare, quod pennam haberet in cauda pulcherriam domum de Forda, sub sua protectione et advocacy constitutam, ipsosque monachos patres et patronos frequentius vocaverat, quibus et ipse patronus verus protector et defensor præcipuus, quasi sua omnia cum illis habens communia, ubique semper erat.

Ejus autem tempore Galfridus de Pomerai terram de Tale vendicaverat, et per potestatem ipsius domini Roberti et consilium ductus et inductus, totum jus suum inde et clameum dictis monachis relaxabat; dedit autem ei pro hac relaxatione dictus dominus Robertus, de ære proprio suo, quinquaginta marcas sterlingorum præ manibus tempore Johannis de Warwick tunc dicti monasterii abbatis. Genuit idem dictus Robertus de domina Maria, juniore filia domini Willielmi de Redverii comitis Devonæ sibi desponsata uxore, prolem Deo gratam et patri dilectam (videlicet) dominum Johannem de Courtney virum simplicem et rectum, licet in armis strenuum eorum utcumque hæredem; cum ista Maria totum habuit in liberum maritagium; habuerunt et chasiam de Crukes, exceptis patronatibus ecclesiarum et 50 libratis terræ de . . . Castris quæ priùs dabantur Willielmo Brewer, cum seniore filia comitis Johannis: et quoniam ista sine hærede obiit, totum ad Mariam et hæredes suos rediit. Qui Robertus cum tandem vitæ suæ laudabilem cursum feliciter consummasset in stadio, septimo calend. Augusti apud Ywren, manerium suum, diem clausit extremum anno Domini m.ccxlii. et regni regis Henrici III. 26. qui statim ad monachos suos de Forda, ut idem prius adhuc vivens, ordinaverat, delatus extitit, et in eorum presbiterio die tertio (id est quinto calend. Augusti), omni cum devotione et honore anno secundo abbatis Adæ sepultus fuit, qui in piramide supposito armati militis incliti structura jam erigitur, ac in cuius circumferentia tale epitaphium reperitur:

Militis egregii virtutum laude referti.
Quem genuit strenuus Reginaldus Courtiniensis
Qui procer eximius fuerat tunc Devonienis.

Post mortem verò istius nobilissimi viri domini Roberti de Courtney, ut præmittitur defuncti, floruit perspicuus in Christo et seculo, filius suus et hæres, dominus Johannes de Courtney prænotatus, et habuit totam patris sui hæreditatem in terris prædictis et possessionibus, adeo plenè et integrè sicut pater suus aliquando tenuerat; castellum tamen Exoniæ, et custodiam comitatus Devonæ à patre suo domino Roberto per regem ablata nunquam obtinere valebat. Nupserat tamen sibi Isabellam filiam domini Johannis de Veere comitis Oxoniæ, quæ peperit ei Hugonem de Courtney primum, suumque hæredem. Fuit itaque iste dominus Johannes vir simplex et rectus ac timens Deum, et progenitoribus suis non minus devotus nec in monachos suos Fordenses minùs benevolus, sed illorum suffragia cunctis operibus præponens, et in eis plenarie confidens, munificus, et integer eis per omnia extitit amicus; in nullo eos vel eorum monasterium vel quando oneravit seu gravavit; neque ab aliis onerari vel gravari permisit. Sed ipsos et eorum prædia terras et possessiones, ubicunque infra hundredum suum et dominium scituata, à quibuscunque sectis, servitiis et secularibus exactionibus sufficienti titulo libera fecit et quietam, ac seipsum pro eis scutum, quasi, et defensorem tutissimum semper exhibuit, et à multis pressuris et dispendiis indemnes præservavit; fructus autem spei suæ qui in precibus dictorum monachorum habuit, sequenti narratione patebit.

Contigit illum aliquando de transmarinis ad propria navigantem alto in mare circa crepusculum tanto suis cum sequentibus mortis subiacere periculo, quod ipsi etiam nautæ singulos sibi Deo commendantes, præ confusione maris et turbinum, tam de vita sua, quam salute desperarunt omnino. ‘Nolite timere nautæ (inquit iste dominus) sed vires vestras resumite et nobis pene naufragantibus tam audacter quam viriliter unam saltem horam modò subvenite; erit enim tempus, quo monachi mei de Forda ad vigiliis surgent, et pro me ad Dominum deprecantes et orantes intervenient, ita quod nullæ tempestates et turbines aut aquæ procellosæ nos perdere seu quovismodo extinguere possint; ideo vos interim nolite torpere, nec vitam nostram nec salutem negligere, quia jam instat hora in qua omnipotens et misericors Deus eorum meritis et precibus, etiam omnibus dignabitur subvenire.’ Ad ista unus de suis in via comitantibus taliter respondet. ‘Quid domine de monachis illis seu illorum suffragiis taliter loquimini, qui jam ut nobis ad plenum constat, violenter somnosunt oppressi? quomodo pro vobis orare possunt qui etiam dormientes seipsos non sentiant?’ Ad hæc dominus in spe firmus solidissima respondit. ‘Etsi multi dormiant, scio quod eorum plurimi orationibus etiam instantes devotissimè pro me eorum servulo, quamvis et parvo, Deum in præsentem obsecrant et implorent, nec possunt aliquid in tanto instanti periculo mei esse immemores, qui illos hactenus mihi meritis pluribus in adversitatibus conservavi indemnes: nullo modo perire poterunt, pro quibus illi tot et tanti die nocteque intercedunt; et quia ego eos, et illi me diligunt scio et veraciter credo, quod ipsi ampliùs et devotiùs jam pro me, meaque salute, et incolumitate apud Deum intercedunt.’ Ad hæc naclerus inquit. ‘Ut quid frivolis intenditis? nam finis vitæ vobis instat, confitemini mutuo invicem et spes vestras ad Dominum precibus commendetis;’ et cum his verbis objecit quicquid habebat in manibus quasi extemplò spiritum exhalaturus; nec solus corruit, sed omnes cum illo in nave constitutos præter unum dominum desperatione dejecit.

Tunc dominus ille Johannes (et veraciter Johannes quia gratiam Dei efficaciter, ut Johannes sonat, consequutus) infremuit, et complosis ad Deum manibus sic supplicando oravit. ‘Omnipotens et misericors Deus, monachos sanctos pro me jam deprecantes, et me cum ipsis obsecrantem dignanter exaudias, et nos sanos et incolumes, pro tua pietate ad portum optatum perducas.’ His dictis, quia in simplicibus gaudet Deus, fidei suo et simplici, quamvis seculariter potenti, ob fidei suæ meritum et spei firmamentum in ultimo et calculo, sicut potens est, misericorditer subvenire, statuens omnem procellam in auram, et fluctus maris quousque mitigans ipsum navigium optato littore collocabat. Quod perpendentes, cum gaudio expectati qui antea dejecti præ timore mortis et periculi totaliter fuerant, divinæ misericordiæ et militis incliti consortes sui meritis intuitu fidei, et suæ spei firmissimæ de monachorum suffragiis taliter obtentis de sua incolumitate potitus, pro vita debitas gratiarum actiones devotissimè persolvebat. Sed cum quanta humilitate et gratia munera divinæ largitatis illi à Deo misericorditer exhibita, inter monachos suos de Forda consequenter in reveniendo ad propria retulerit, et ea sibi affuisse per eorum preces et merita asseveraverit, vix enim ad plenum explicare valebat. Sed si antea devotus multum et dictis monachis suis benevolus aut munificus extiterit, postea verò devotior, benevolentior ac munificentior fore juravit. Ex tunc enim illis relaxabat, et confirmabat quodcunque petierant, quia ipsum eodem die in fraternitatem capituli sui ad devotissimam sui instantiam solemniter admittebant. Delegavit etiam corpus suum ibidem cum dilectis fratribus suis spiritualibus fore sepe peliendum, ac eis etiam pro tunc valefacto, non diu post se eorum precibus ampliùs commendavit per donum quadraginta marcarum: obiit tandem feliciter in Christo quinto nonas Maii anno Domini m.cclxxiii. et regni regis Edwardi primi, primo anno; qui juxta patrem suum dominum Robertum de Courtney apud Fordam sepelitur coram summo altari. Legavit etiam cum corpore suo 40 libras sterling. eidem monasterio, necnon et arma sua cum vehiculo et totali apparatu quibus funus ejus illuc deferebatur eisdem monachis et fratribus suis legavit, tam ex fraterna affectione motus, quam animo devotus. Relicta verò ejusdem domina Isabella de Courtney, domino Olivero de Dineham postea se maritaverat; sed diu post ipsum tertio idus Augusti defuncta apud Fratres Prædicatores Exoniæ à parte australi presbiterii, ex opposito ejusdem, humata erat.

Erexit se ergo dominus Hugo de Courtney primus, in progenitorum suorum hæreditatem et dominium; sed quantum in ipsis viguit et floruit devotio et affectio in Deum et Forden. cœnobium, tantum in isto tepuit et hebuit mentis sinceritas, pietas, puritas, præcordia suorum. Duxerat autem in uxorem Elianoram filiam proceris incliti domini Hugonis le Despencer primi, patris etiam domini Hugonis le Despencer militis ingenuosi, strenui et famosissimi, postea comitis Winton. divitiis et potentia singulariter referti; de qua genuit Hugonem secundum hæredem sibi futurum, et postea Devoniam comitem: ac Philippum postea dominum de Mourton prope Dartmore militem inclitum; sed tandem vij. calendas Julii anno Domini mcccxiv. in bello Scotiæ apud Striveling interemptum. Genuit etiam ex eadem matrona sive domina prudentissima quatuor filias, videlicet, Isabellam domini Johannis de St. John uxorem, Avelinam domini Johannis Gifford militis uxorem, necnon Egelinam Roberti de Scales uxorem; et Margaretam Johannis de Mulis, tironum nobilium, uxorem.

Iste Hugo primus, monasterio de Forda, quod antecessores sui ad augmentationem cultus divini, et ad sui suorumque salutem et gloriam potiùs providendam, tam pie, quam salubriter in liberam puram et perpetuam elemosinam, possessiones et prædia cætera eidem conferendo, fundarunt, nihil ex omnibus sibi reservantes præter eorum suffragia, nimis infestus et molestus exstitit; et quæ illi in pios usus assignaverant, iste ad usum canum et equorum vendicabat. Dixit enim, et minus veraciter asseruit, dictam abbatiam de Forda, quæ in liberam puram et perpetuam elemosinam à suis progenitoribus exstitit fundata, à se debere teneri per servitium inveniendi eidem in omni guerra cum contingeret unam carectam ferratam cum uno equo carectario liminare, et acilio seu apparatu ad quinque equos carectarios et cum uno baihudo coriario ad eandem carectam, necnon et perhendinandi duos dextrarios vel palefridos ipsius Hugonis cum duobus garcionibus ad omnes custus in abbatia prædicta, et inveniendi huccas ad eosdem equos, et etiam perhendinandi unam leporariam vel unam brachetam cum catulis suis quolibet anno quousque catuli fuerint unius anni ætatis; de quibus etiam servitiis asseruit dominum Johannem de Courtinay patrem suum per manus ipsorum religiosorum fuisse seisitum tempore regis Henrici patris regis Edwardi tunc regnantis; ac seipsum postea, de carectario liminari per manus domini Willielmi abbatis in dicto monasterio tunc præsentis, ad guerram Walliæ anno nuper Edwardi decimo fuisse seisitum.

Et quia idem dominus Hugo ecclesiæ beatæ Mariæ de Forda et monachis ibidem famulantibus Deo, qui morem paternum et consuetudinem antecessorum suorum observabant, plus obesse, quam prodesse optaverat, occasione prædicti servitii qd. tunc sibi a retro fuisse minus veraciter asseruit, omnia averia eorum apud grangiam suam de Westford inventa die sancti Laurentii anno Domini m.cclxxxvij. et regni regis Edwardi xvj. ac etiam omnes alios boves eorum apud Westford et Orchard cum populi multitudine illuc veniens, fecit ab aratro disjungi, et in Dertmore juxta Okehampton effugari; pro quibus replegiandis rex Edwardus scripsit vicecomiti Devon. nono die Septembris anno regni regis Edwardi ejusdem xvj. et vicecomes scripsit regi quod ballivi domini Isabellæ de Fortibus comitissæ Devoniam de hundredo de Exmister, quibus idem vicecomes returnum brevis regis habere fecerat, dictos boves cum aliis averiis abbatis de Forda replegiare non potuerunt, eo quod præfatus Hugo averia illa advocavit esse sua, magnum super hiis in curia regis placitum esse cepit; ac tandem pax talis qualis inter partes reformata exstitit, sed non in parvo tempore duravit. Venit namque postea dictus dominus Hugo, nescio qualiter motus, cum aliis multis apud Orchard die dominico proximo post festum sanctæ Agathæ virginis anno regni regis Edwardi xvij. distractionem violenter, ut prius, facturum, sed per familiam abbatiam vir sagittarum ictibus ac mortis periculo expers impeditus exstitit, sed nullum averium ibi cepit, rediens autem versus Colecombe per grangiam de Westford, unum taurum, xij. vaccas, quatuor boves et quatuor juvenecas tunc ceperat, et illa averia apud Wimple imparcari faciebat, sic ergo placitum quod prius inter ipsum et abbatem Nicholaum, sopitum in curia regis suscitaverat, et hoc in perpetuum sui malum nisi abbas sectam suam subtraxisset. Ex his ergo plurimum indignatus dictam domum de Forda postea odio habuit, cui et nunquam antea in ullo beneficus fuit. Obiit tandem apud Colecombe tertio calendas Martii anno Domini mcccxi. et regni regis Edwardi primi xix. ac apud Cowick prope Exon. sepelitur. Post cujus obitum relicta ejus prænominata, domina Alianora, xxxvij. annos superstes in ligia viduitate permanserat, ac domum suam et familiam in omni abundantia et honore tam prudenter, quam sapienter ut strenua materfamilias, ac domina discreta, apud Colecombe regebat; pollebat enim tam sensus vigore quam subtilitate ingenii, et quamvis dedita seculo, intenta nihilominus hospitalitati. Tandem London. de Cancia rediens anno Domini mcccxxvij. et regni regis Edwardi iij. secundo calend. Octobris mortalibus valefecit, et propè maritum suum dominum Hugonem apud Cowick humata exstitit.

Filius autem ejus dominus Hugo secundus, tam sapientia, quam scientia mirabiliter præditus dicto patri suo Hugoni de Courteney post in totam hæreditatem successerat, qui domine Agnetæ sorori sororii sui domini Johannis de St. John anno ætatis suæ xvij. conjugatus erat. Ipsi autem sorores suas mutuo sibi nubebant. Genuitque dictus dominus Hugo secundus de præfata domina Agneta, dilecta Deo et hominibus, eo quod humilis mitis et benigna, prolem inclitam et religiosam, Johannem eorum primogenitum, qui postea Tavestochiæ abbas factus erat, quò et in juventute se transtulit ad monachatum. Genuit etiam secundum natu, Hugonem tertium, iv. idus Julii anno Domini mcccij. hæredem sibi futurum, Robertum qui in juventute sua obiit, ac Thomam postea conjugem Murielæ senioris filiæ et hæredis domini Johannis de Mules, militem strenuum. Duasque filias, videlicet Elianoram nuptam Johanni de Gray, sed non diu superstitem, et Elizabetham domini Bartholomei de Lydell uxorem. Crevit etiam iste dominus Hugo secundus in immensum, divitiis et gloria super omnes progenitores et antecessores suos in Anglia tam singulariter quam excelenter, ingenio pollens et dominio, ad quem spectabat, et revertebatur hæreditas comitatus Devoniam jure hæreditario et successione.

Factur sic igitur magnus, et antecessorum suorum ut prænotatur maximus, tria magna sed non magnifica imo tria mala sed utinam non sibi mala in domum de Forda fecit memorabilia, paternum in hac parte gerens et non deserens animum ex præconcepta indignatione superscripta: sed pater suus tantum in uno dictam domum moliebatur lædere; in hoc, videlicet, quod ipsam abbatiam a progenitoribus suis in liberam puram et perpetuam elemosinam fundatam, minus veraciter vendicavit, et asseruit per certa, dira, duraque servitia de se teneri debere. Iste verò istud non deserens alia duo mala, malo isti malè super addidit, quia cum istam domum de competentibus sibi immunitatis, libertatisque privilegiis, per quasdam indenturas inter ipsas partes, ob minas et terrores ex parte sua et domini, minus ritè confectas evacuasset, quantam libertatem quam in manerio suo de Thale dicta domus habuit nequiter et injustè abstulit, et tam abbatem quam tenentes suos ibidem omnes et singulos ad curiam et hundredum suum de Harrigge minus justè attraxit, et ad eorum sectam faciendam non absque gravamine compulit et coegit. Denique et rectorem de Cruck in causa decimarum de terris et prædiis suis de Othull et Goggeber, ac aliis infra fines et limites parochiæ suæ scituatis, sed dictæ domui ante Lateranense concilium acquisitis, de quibus à præstatione decimarum eidem fuerunt, et esse debent, totaliter immunes, contra eosdem sustinuit, et tam ipse quam dominus Hugo tertius, filius suus et hæres cum prædicto rectore apud Bathon. et Wellensem episc. intervenit, quod idem episcopus, in quem dicti religiosi per eosdem dominos inducti et compulsi tanquam in arbitrum compromiserunt inviti, ordinavit judicialiter unam compositionem realem inter partes prædictas, per quam dicta domus de Ford obligatur ecclesiæ de Cruck in censu annuo quinquaginta solidorum, in suæ immunitatis præjudicium, et enormem ipsius monasterii læsionem.

Ista sunt ergo tria mala, quæ idem dominus Hugo secundus fecerat in exhæredationem Fordensis monasterii. Primum, videlicet, quod ejusdem libertatem in qua fundabatur in liberam puram et perfectam et perpetuam elemosinam, in temporale redegit servitium. Secundum quod libertatem, quam hactenus habere solebat in manerio suo de Thale simul cum redditu quem pro eodem solvere consuevit, ad suum attraxit hundredum. Et tertium, quod ipsam abbatiam ad ecclesiam de Cruck obligari procuravit in dicto redditu annuo quinquaginta solidorum. Nupserat autem filius suus et hæres dominus Hugo tertius patre adhuc vivente anno Domini mcccxxv. iij. die idus Augusti, generosæ dominæ Margaretæ filiæ comitis Herefordiæ domini Humphredi de Bohun, tironis strenuissimi, et in armis famosissimi, sed ante contractum hujus matrimonii propter querelam communis justiciæ Angliæ prosequendam, à regiis satellitibus apud Pontemfractum nequiter occisi. Hæc Margareta matrem habuit ingenuam, dominam Elizabetham illustrissimi principis et regis incliti Edwardi post conquestum Angliæ primi filiam, anno Domini mcccxj. iij. nonas Aprilis nata; per quam contigit posteritatem Courtneis regio sanguine Anglico iterum renovari, ex ea provenientem. Ingentitas enim hujus dominæ Margaretæ neptis regis Angliæ, quæ fuit filia filiæ regis Edwardi egregii, æquipollet generositati Reginaldi de Courtney supradicti, qui fuit filius domini Flori filii regis Franciæ Grossi Lodovici, et sic generositas de Courtneis recentiori ingenuitate sublimatur, ac regia tribus, regalibus necnon progenies Franciæ pariter et Angliæ in eis permiscetur.

Habuit idem dominus Hugo tertius donum gratum, ex mera liberalitate patris sui adhuc superstitis, sed occasione assumptæ sibi uxoris, videlicet, manerium totum de Colecumb cum suis pertinentiis, in domicilium; necnon duo maneria, de Coker penitus cum manerio de Wettedene ad singulare dominium separatim à patre. Pro tempore exercendæ familiæ, et apud Colecumb presidentis genuit filios et filias; Hugonem, videlicet, quartum, eorum primogenitum, anno Domini mcccxxvij. xj. calendas Aprilis natum; Thomam, Edwardum, Johannem, Margaretam, Elizabetham, Catharinam, anno Domini mcccxxxv. et regni regis gloriosissimi Edwardi post conquestum tertii, nono.

Dictus dominus Hugo secundus omnes antecessores suos de Courtneis in seculari potestate et dominio excellens, eo quod in terris prædictis et possessionibus comitis Devonæ jure hæreditario, ut præmittitur successit, sicut jure ita in nomine comes Devonæ dici et esse promeruit, habuit xvij. libras, vj. sol. et octo denarios annui census sterlingorum ad dictum hunc comitem hæreditarie pertinentes, singulis annis de regiis perquisitis in comitatu Devonæ percepturos, quos antea minime habebat. Sublimatus taliter in comitem iste dominus, tanto pietatis affectu eodem anno attractus fuerat, quod cuilibet monasterio in Devon. xx. marcas, prioratui de Plimpton totidem, cæterisque prioratibus singulis decem marcas, ac cuicque domui fratrum mendicantium decem marcas conferebat. Sed qualiter ad eum pertinuit hæreditas comitatus Devonæ subnectendum.

Rex Henricus post conquestum primus, filius regis Willielmi magni ducis Normaniæ, totius Angliæ conquestoris, cum post fratrem suum Willielmum Rufum super totam Angliam feliciter regnasset, dilecto et fideli suo Ricardo de Redveris* primo Tiverton, ac postea honorem de Plimton cum aliis locis ad eundem pertinentibus contulit, in comitemque Devon. tertium denarium annui exitus ejusdem comitatus illi concedendo, eum consequenter creavit. Exitus autem comitatus qui tunc ad regem pertinebat ad xxx. marcas tantummodo se extendebat, de quibus dictus comes decem marcas annuatim in partem suam assumebat. Post hæc insulam Vectæ à dicto rege obtinuit, unde comes Devonæ et dominus Insulæ nuncupatus erat. Qui comes Ricardus genuit primum Baldwinum, post se Devonæ comitem, de Timmore canonicorum et Twina ubi est Christi ecclesia et monasterii Quararæ in Insula Vectæ, et de Tira in Normannia inclytum fundatorem. Hic comes Baldwinus primus tres filios, videlicet Ricardum, Henricum, et Willielmum, habuit, ac tandem anno Domini m.clv. secundo nonas Junii, mortuus apud Quareram, ubi uxor sua Adelicia et dictus filius suus Henricus in juventute defunctus quiescunt, sepulturam accepit. Senior ergo filius ejus, Ricardus secundus, ei in hæreditatem successit et comes Devon. extitit; et duos filios post se successivos comites et hæredes, videlicet Baldwinum secundum et Ricardum tertium legitimè procreavit, uterque autem eorum sine prole obierat, et sic ad patrum suum Willielmum de Vernona cognominatum, quia Vernonæ scholaris fuerat, hæreditas tota spectabat.

Iste Willielmus comes genuit Baldwinum tertium de Mabilia comitissâ, uxore sua, ac etiam duas filias Johannem, videlicet Willielmi Brewer et Mariam Roberti de Courtney, inclytorum procerum uxores futuras. Cum prima filia, Johanna videlicet, dedit pater quinquaginta libratas terræ apud Crust in manerio de Cruick, cum advocacione ejusdem ecclesiæ genero suo Willielmo, ac cum secunda, totum residuum dicti manerii cum hundredo forinseco et chacia de Cruiks genero suo Roberto. Præfata denique Johanna uxor Willielmi Brewer omni prole caruit et sic nullius mater debitum mortis persolvit: Maria tamen fœcunda extitit, ac prolem etiam Deo et hominibus dilectam, videlicet Johannem de Courtney tunc viri sui et suum imposterum hæredem votivè pariebat. Iste autem Johannes de Courtney genuit Hugonem primum; et ille Hugo primus Hugonem secundum, dictum comitatum jure hæreditario, ut consequenter patebit, jam assecutum.

Ante mortem verò dicti comitis Willielmi de Redveris, ac de Vernona nuncupati, filius suus Baldwinus tertius prænominatus, genuit ex Margareta filia et hærede Warini filii Geraldii, Baldwinum quartum; et patre suo adhuc superstitie calendas Septembris anno Domini m.ccxvj. morte præreptus est. Anno itaque sequenti, quarto idus Septembris, obiit idem comes Willielmus. Dictus ergo Baldwinus quartus Amiciam filiam Gilberti de Clare comitis Gloucestriæ et Hertfordiæ in uxorem duxerat, de qua Baldwinus quintum postea comitem et Isabellam Albermerliæ comitissam procreabat. Hic Baldwinus junior, post patrem comes, Johannem quandam genuit; qui Johannes moriens, patrem sine prole reliquit. Tandem et pater ejus Baldwinus junior, qui et quintus, prole fraudatus obiit, et sic tota hæreditas ad sororem ejus Isabellam Albermerliæ comitissam legitimè pervenit; quæ quidem comitissa Isabella, in possessione comitatus Devonæ, necnon domini Insulæ constituta, dote materna excepta, dedit processu temporis Amiciæ matri suæ, hæredibus, et assignatis suis imperpetuum, manerium de Buckland, Bickley, Wallampton, et Coliton, cum hundredis et advocacionibus ecclesiarum feodis militum et aliis omnibus quibuscunque pertinentiis suis, quæ universa, ipsa mater ejus Amicia Deo postmodum liberaliter contulit, ac monasterium ordinis Cisterciensis, monachis de Quararia illuc ascitis, apud Buckland, ex hiis omnibus fundavit; quam quidem fundationem, et domum suam prædictam, tam dicta Isabella, quam rex Angliæ Edwardus post Conquestum primus ratificavere et approbavere; ac Deo et dictis monachis Cisterciensis ordinis ibidem Deo servientibus, tam votivè quam devotè, confirmarunt anno videlicet Domini m.cclxxvij. et regni ipsius regis Edwardi viij.

Tandem verò dicta domina Isabella de Fortibus Devon. et Albemariæ comitissa absque prole obiit, in qua tota successio ex masculina linea, à dicto domino Willielmo de Redveris, sive de Vernona, descendens pœnitens defecit. Ad Mariam ergo juniorem filiam ejusdem Willielmi domino Roberto de Courtney desponsatam, et hæredem ejus, tota dicta hæreditas comitatus Devonæ retorquenda fuit, quia Johanna soror ejus et senior filia ejusdem comitis Willielmi sine prole obiit, ac conjugem suum Willielmum Brewer liberis etiam fraudatum reliquit. Jure ergo hæreditario et successione legitima dictus Hugo de Courtney secundus dictum comitatum obtinuit; eo quod de sanguine proximus et hæres legitimus, quia filius primi Hugonis filii Johannis de Courtney, qui filius fuit Roberti et dictæ Mariæ filiæ et hæredis dicti Willielmi de Vernona. Et licet idem Hugo de Courtney secundus sic dictæ dominæ Isabellæ de Fortibus nuper comitissæ Devonæ et dominæ Insulæ in hæreditate comitatus successerat, dominio tamen dictæ Insulæ Vectæ adhuc fraudatus extitit; sed hoc minus justè, quia ad hæreditatem suam et totum reliquum dignoscitur pertinere. Vendicat tandem dominus rex Angliæ dictam Insulam tanquam jus suum proprium à dicta domina comitissa Isabella, donatam per cartam, quam tanquam dictæ comitissæ exhibet, utinam non minus veraciter, non nequiter, non fraudulenter contra voluntatem dictæ Isabellæ, vel præter, impetrata fuisset. Rex illustris Edwardus, post Conquestum Angliæ primus præfatam Insulam plurimum optaverat ac aures dictæ dominæ ut inde sibi illum faceret hæredem, tam per se quam per alios sæpius pulsabat. Quæ et bona domina facere semper renuit, quotiescunque in hac parte requisita fuit, constanter recusavit hæreditatem suam lædere, vel in aliquo hæredibus suis derogare. Tum verò dominum de Stratton clericum et dictæ dominæ familiarissimum utpote per quem potius ipsa cartam faceret, rex promotorem in hac parte sibi statuebat, qui plus timore quam amore ad hoc inductus regem, quod petierat consequuturum promittebat, quod cum nullo modo domina vivente potuit efficere, ipsa tandem moriente, regi ne videretur promissis illudere, cartam ei fecerat sigillo dominæ sigillatam, ut qui habuerat omnia in potestate sua, sic ergo regi satisfecerat et hæredes legitimos dominio, Insulæ nequiter, et subdolè, hujus factionis commento hucusque defraudabat.

Anno Domini mcccxl. die Dominica in festo sanctæ Trinitatis et sancti Barnabæ Apostoli domina Agneta de Courtney, comitissa Devonæ, apud Tiverton obiit, quæ die Martis quinto calendas Junii apud Cowick propè Exon. solempniter humata fuit. Hæc cum à dicto conjugæ sua Hugone de Courtney vidua facta fuit ut præmittitur anno nono regis Edwardi tertii, annis quinquaginta tribus vel circiter sub lege conjugali vixerat, sub qua plurimas molestias, etiamque calumnias, toto tempore sororis suæ dominæ Alianoræ de Courtney præfati mariti sui genetricis ipsam incessanter calumniantis, et super clandestino adulterio apud filium deferentis, tolerabat.

In the 26th Hen. VIII. the clear value of the spiritual and temporal possessions of this monastery was rated at 466*l.* 11*s.* 2½*d.*^a

Mr. Oliver says, in various leases that he had met with, he found mention of the manors of Kingsbridge and Harberton belonging to the monks. The abbey had also some property in the town and near the bridge of Totnes.^c

The site of Buckfastleigh abbey was granted in the 31st of Henry the Eighth to Sir Thomas Dennys,^d of Holcombe Burnell, a large sharer in the property of the Dissolved Monasteries.

Dr. William Petre, one of the visitors of the Religious Houses at the Dissolution, received grants of several of the manors belonging to Buckfastleigh.^e

According to an entry upon the Hundred Rolls, the abbats of Buckfastleigh had formerly the power of inflicting capital punishment in their manors.^f

The COMMON SEAL, appended to the Surrender, 25th Feb. 30 Hen. VIII. in the Augmentation Office, is round, representing the Virgin Mary, crowned, with the infant Jesus on her left arm, under a Gothic canopy. The legend, s. CONVENTVS . BUCKFESTRIE. The impression is on red wax.

It appears from Chapple's Collections that the manor of Buckfast belonged to Sir Richard Baker about the year 1629. It afterwards became the property of the Doyleys, and was sold off in parcels.

The immediate site of the abbey now belongs to William Searle Bentall, Esq. and others. Most of the ruins were taken down about the year 1806: one tower is still, or was lately remaining. A modern house, in the Gothic style, has been built over the vaults of the abbey.^g

Melsa, or Meaux, Abbey.

In the Deanry of Holderness and Archdeaconry of East Riding,
IN YORKSHIRE.

ELSA, or Meaux Abbey was founded in 1150, by William le Gros, Earl of Albemarle, and was dedicated to the Virgin Mary. The legendary history of its foundation forms the first article in the Appendix to the present account. A second account of the foundation and its early benefactors is also given, from the Register of Fountains Abbey.^a

The first deed of the founder specifies his grant of the place called Melsa, with the wood of Rudhe.^b By a second instrument he not only confirmed these, but added all his land at Wayna, and the whole pasture at Saltehache and Neulande.^c Hawise, countess of Albemarle, his daughter, confirmed her father's grants.^d An instrument given subsequent to these explains how the founder became possessed of Melsa itself.^e

Richard de Otringham, rector of the church of Shelford, in the diocese of Ely, by deed dated 16 kal. Nov. 1316, gave to the monks here all his lands in Otringham, Tharlesthorp, Frysmareis, Well, Drypol, and Sutton, for the maintenance of a chantry of seven monks at the gate of the abbey.^f

Sir John de Friboys, knight, gave six bovates of land, with six closes at Holmeton, for the support of a monk, to be added to the fifty, which he appears to have considered as the settled number of the convent.^g The convent however appears not usually to have consisted of so large a number. In 1392 it consisted of an abbat and twenty-six monks only. Their names are all enumerated in the register of Melsa in the Cottonian library.^h

Peter de Malo-lacu gave to the monks of Melsa lands in Ake, Wharrom, Lokyngton, and Bryddeshall, for the maintenance of two priests, one to sing the mass of our Lady, the other for the dead, and to perform an anniversary for Isabel his wife.ⁱ

The charters here referred to were all given by Dugdale in the former edition of the Monasticon, together with the confirmation charter of King John, from the charters in the Tower.^k

^h William de Scardeburgh was the abbat at this time. The officers among the monks were, portarius, supprior, bursarius, magister averiorum, precentor, prior, cellerarius, camerarius, sacrista, succentor.

"Servientes mercennarii in Monasterio."

"Armiger unus abbatibus cum famulo suo. Camerarius unus abbatibus qui et Pincerna cum famulo suo. Cocus unus abbatibus cum duobus pagis suis. Valetus unicus in stabulo abbatibus. Famulus unus Cellerarii cum pagio eidem adjuncto. Famulus Bursarii. Famulus unus magistri averiorum. Barbitonsor unus. Cissor unus cum pagio suo. Carpentarius unus cum famulo suo. Faber unus. Ac etiam alii famuli necessarii prout per diversa officina mon. sunt partiti."

Tanner, probably from the passage already alluded to in the Monasticon, speaks as if the Convent of Melsa had at all times consisted of fifty monks. See Notit. Monast. Yorksh. lxxviii. The abbat and twenty-four monks only had pensions at the Dissolution.

is an abbat with his crozier, may be considered the Common Seal. The parties to the Deed, which is dated 29 Edw. I. are the Abbat and Convent of Melsa and the master of the hospital of St. Leonard York, therefore the seal to be used ought to have been the Common Seal; and it has been observed, that, where no Christian name of the abbat has been mentioned, seals of this nature have been frequently used as Common Seals.

Caput Primum.

Post incarnationem Domini anno millesimo centesimo quinquagesimo, à conquestu verò Angliæ per Normannos octagesimo quarto, ab initio ordinis Cisterciensis quinquagesimo secundo, à fundatione autem monasterii de Fontibus decimo octavo, universalem ecclesiam et catholicam Eugenio papa tertio gubernante, regnum verò Angliæ regente Stephano de Blois rege: vivente adhuc beatissimo patre nostro Bernardo Clarevallensi abbate, calendas Januarii, in die videlicet Circumcisionis Dominicæ, sub bonæ memoriæ domino Adam abbate nostro primo, cepit initium hoc cœnobium Melsa Latinè, Meaux Gallicè, sive Anglicè a nostris patribus nuncupatum. Locus autem ipse à pristinis habitatoribus sortitus est nomen, qui in conquestu Normannorum de quadam civitate Galliæ Meldis Latinè, sed Meaux Gallicè vocitata exeuntes, post dictum conquestum ipsum locum inhabitantes nomen de Meaux ei imposuerunt, in memoriam suæ pristinæ civitatis. Prædictus autem Adam abbas noster primus, ut dicitur, aliquando fuit monachus de Whitby, et unus illorum qui egressi sunt de dicto monasterio de Whitby ad monasterium beatæ Mariæ Eboraci inchoandum. Postmodum verò priorem dicti monasterii beatæ Mariæ Eboraci, et alios qui inde exierant, et in territorio Ripponensi monasterium ordinis Cisterciensis quod Fontes dicitur inchoaverunt, secutus est. Pridie verò nonas Octobris anno Domini millesimo centesimo trigesimo secundo, facta est egressio monachorum Eboracensium de cœnobio eorundem, et eodem anno incepta est abbatia sanctæ Mariæ de Fontibus sexto calendas Januarii. Tresdecim monachi egressi sunt de cœnobio beatæ Mariæ Eboraci, scilicet Richardus prior, primus abbas de Fontibus; Richardus sacrista, secundus abbas de Fontibus; Robertus primus abbas de Kirksted; Gervasius subprior, primus abbas de Parcolude; Walterus elemosinarius, secundus abbas de Kirksted; Ranulphus primus abbas de Lisa Norwagiæ; Alexander primus abbas de Kirkstall. Abbates septem; reliqui verò quinque monachi, non abbatiantes obierunt. Radulphus autem cantor qui tertius decimus erat solus regressus est, in cuius loco dictus Adam de eadem ecclesia Eborum venit ad Fontes, et ipse Adam primus abbas de Melsa. Hujus autem cœnobii Fontanensis octo sunt filiæ, videlicet Novum Monasterium, Kirksted, Parcolude, Woburne, Kirkstall, Lisa, Vallis Dei, et monasterium nostrum de Melsa. Et dicta est Melsa quasi sapor mellis, vel Melsa quod interpretatur rixa vel in azimis; vel dicitur Melsa, quasi Messa quod interpretatur hospes salvans, vel mensura salutis suæ dans potum. Hæc autem etymologiæ et interpretationes re satis lucide concordant: etenim dici potest mellis sapor propter loci amœnitatem, propter religionis dulcedinem, et propter divini cultus specialem dulcorem; vel dicitur rixa, quia in principio fundationis suæ erat rixa et discordia de ipsius situ: vel quia ab initio sui usque in præsens, vix sine rixa et persecutione conquievit, vel quia inibi degentes continuam habent rixam contra triplicem hostem, dæmonem scilicet, mundum et carnem. Vel dicitur in azimis, sinceritatis quidem, hoc est rectæ intentionis, perfectæ veritatis, et bonæ operationis; vel dicitur hospes salvans temporaliter per se transeuntes; spiritualiter se in eo Christo mancipantes, temporaliter et spiritualiter inibi continuè permanentes; vel mensura salutis, quia secundum mensuram uniuscujusque bonæ operationis retribuetur mensura salutis; vel dans potum confortationis indigentibus, pias elemosinas largiendo afflictis, carnis motibus insurgentibus calicem Dominicæ passionis spiritualiter bibendo, et perpetuæ consolationis spiritibus sitientibus divinæ contemplationi jugiter insistendo. Igitur ad ordinem relationis stilum reducam.

Caput Secundum.

De Causa Fundationis, et Situ Loci.

Hujus monasterii de Melsa fundator erat Willielmus le Gros præclarus comes Albæmarliæ, et dominus de Holdernes, et hæc causa fundationis ejusdem. Iste Willielmus comes vir erat nominatissimus, et quasi dominus totius provincie Eborum. Idemque iter Ierosolimitanum in voto habebat, quod propter ætatem, et corporis gravitatem minimè valebat adimplere. Erat autem eo tempore, in monasterio de Fontibus monachus quidam dictus dominus Adam postea abbas noster primus, vir summæ prudentiæ, et inter plures valdè nominatus, qui dum in ædificiis construendis monachorum videlicet de Kirkstede, Woburne, præcipuè de Valle Dei cujus dictus comes fundator erat, occuparetur, et esset sollicitus, cœpit dicti comitis notitiam aliquid obtinere. Et cum comperisset ipsum comitem propter voti sui præmissi solutionem anxium esse, suggestit eidem ut monasterium aliquod Cisterciensis ordinis in redemptionem voti sui fundaret. Adjungens quod si hoc secundum ordinationem suam perficeret, ipse voti sui absolutionem a domino papa impetraret. Annuit comes petitum si suum dictus Adam consummasset promissum. Cum igitur dictus Adam coadjuvante eum beato patre nostro Bernardo erga dominum papam Eugenium tertium tum in Galliis commorantem negotium præmissum ad finem perduxisset optatum: circuit et perambulat prædia et possessiones ipsius comitis, locum commodum monasterii ædificandi ubique requirens. Cumque demùm ad locum qui Melsa dicebatur advenisset, contemplatur locum nemoribus et frutetis consitum, aquis et paludibus cinctum, ac frugi terrarum gleba fecundum. Animadvertit dictum locum fore suis votis aptissimum. Erat autem in loco eodem monticulus quidam, qui collis beatæ Mariæ dicebatur, ubi nunc ipsius cœnobii ecclesia fundatur: in cuius vertice præfatus Adam ascendens, baculum quem in manu tenuit, in terram fortiter infixit, dicens, 'Hic locus, nempe vocitetur aula regis . . . etiam vineaque cœli, portaque vitæ, gens hic creetur chisticolarum:' et adiecit, ad circumstantes loquens; 'Num audistis charissimi quid propheta promiserit de domo Domini ædificanda? Erit, inquit, in novissimis diebus præparatus mons domus Domini in vertice montis: quæ verba tota hac die nescio qualiter in ore meo revolvī, et nunc perpendo quæ divina providentia agebat, quæ in hoc monticulo voluit templum suum fieri in nobis.' Audiens autem comes quod locum illum elegisset, graviter tulit, eo quod propter sui amœnitatem supra modum diligebat, cogitaverat enim eundem locum fossa et vallo undique cinctum ferarum habitationem fecisse, et jam tunc fossatum qui adhuc dicitur Parkedike in occidentali parte inceperat. Nam ante paucos illos dies locum prænominatum, qui pro tribus carucatis terræ computabatur, cum domino Johanne de Melsa milite, cujus patrimonium locus ipse fuerat, commutavit pro manerio de Bewic juxta Aldburgh cum sex carucatis terræ ad eum pertinentibus. Ita ut dictus dominus Johannes et hæredes sui ipsum manerium de Bewick cum pertinentiis, per idem servitium de comite tenerent quod pro ipsa Melsa perantea reddi fuerat consuetum. Sed necdum fuerat dicta commutatio scripti munimento confirmata.

Caput Tertium.

De Causa Nominis Loci, et ejus Separatione a Dominiis adjacentibus.

ANTE quidem hæc tempora Gamellus filius Ketelli de Melsa avus seu pater dicti Johannis de Melsa, cum Gulielmo notho rege et conquestore, de prædicta civitate Galliæ, Meaux Gallicè dicta exiens cum aliis, in his partibus Holidernesiam sortem suæ habitationis est assecutus, et ob memoriam civitatis suæ egressionis, nomen huic loco quem inhabitabat, ut Meaux nuncuparetur, imponebat. Postea autem dictus Adam abbas noster primus, de prædicti comitis consensu, atque dicti domini Johannis de Meaux militis, ei nomen Latinum, ut Melsa Latine diceretur commutans imponebat, eo quod à dicta civitate Galliæ dicta Meldis nomine tenus differetur, et ob religionis in eo jugiter assequendæ suavitatem mellis sapore non immerito deberet comparari. Ipse quidem Gamellus dicti loci incola, et alii dominiorum collateralium cohabitatores, dominus videlicet Basing de Waghun, Sywardus, de Sutton, Framo de Falconbury de Rise, Richardus de Scrutevill de Rowthe prædictis villis, contemporanei et convenientes post guerram Normannorum ut domini præfuerunt. Qui post guerram præfatam pacificato regno, ex communi consilio et provisa utilitate hæredum suorum terminos inter se distinguentes, certas mensuras possessionum suarum posuerunt ad auferenda certamina posterorum. Nam hos terminos inter se de Melsa posuerunt, videlicet ab extrema parte aquilonari fossæ parci à jactu unius securis versus aquilonem usque ad Swynesholme, et a Swynesholme usque ad parvum Collesholme; et a parvo Collesholme, usque ad veterem pontem in medio marisco juxta angulum bosci de Ruda. Et isti sunt termini inter Felsam et Rudam, ab isto ponte usque ad quercum in occidentali parte de Leverykland, in cujus medio supereminet quidam monticulus (id est) terra antiquitus congesta in modum furni ad eruditionem futuri populi, et ab illo monticulo in parte septentrionali juxta Tiryngholme, usque ad pontem qui vocatur pons Rudæ; sub quo posuerunt antiqui grandem lapidem in testimonium, et isti sunt termini inter Melsam et Rudam. Et inde in directum usque ad Maplestubb in Lumbercotes veniente quidam duplici fossa de marisco in transversum. Et sciendum quod duæ partes de Lumbercotes pertinent ad Melsam, et a Maplestubb usque ad mediam partem de Seggesholme ubi vacca antiquitatis humata est. Similiter in testimonium divisa inter Waghun et Swynam à Seggesholme usque ad fraxinum quam Henricus de Verley succidit super Brauncesholme, et à media parte de Snoresholme super ripam de Hull usque ad fossam comitis sed comminuitur. Hac autem forma divisa sunt dominia villarum de Waghun et Routh à manerio de Melsa et ipsa Melsa à reliquis dominiis sibi contiguis et vicinis. Sed quia hæc divisa signa et testimonia à modernis penitus ignorantur, restat ut de ipso solo dominio de Melsa de quo nunc agitur, et de separatione ejus a dominiis aliis adjacentibus, sicut in præsentiarum noscitur, disseratur. Nam vaccaria de Felsa parcella hujus domini de Melsa extat manifesta. Sed utrum ipsa fossa constructa fuerat vel separata antequam monasterium nostrum sumpsit exordium vel non, seu cujus tempore, fateor me omnino nescire. Ipsius autem Melsæ divisio moderna sic habetur, primo à australi angulo de Crystings versus occidentem per le Parke dyke, qui dividit pasturas de Felsa et mariscum de Wele deducens versus aquilonem in parte occidentali usque ad Meynpitt, tendendo versus orientem usque ad viam quæ ducit versus Rudam, et dehinc paululum versus aquilonem usque ad Forbridge, et sic per borealem finem de Benuris et fines sellionum versus Whytker de Ruda, ubi foramina quædam in terra rotunda ad spacium trium pedum latitudinis per fossa quasi per jactum lapidis inter se distancia in signum separationis inter Melsam et Rudam in hac parte distinguunt, infra quæ foramina versus capita sellionum fossatum in solo nostro proprio de Melsa conficitur, ut ipsæ antiquæ divisæ seu foramina extra dictum fossatum per trium pedum spatium remaneant. Ut si quando in futurum dictum fossatum mundari debeat, seu dilatari, in solo nostro proprio pro dicto fossato dilatando perfodamus. Et super dictum fossatum seu foramina non tamen æqua linea usque ad

Wichdyk, et hoc ex parte ejus boreali, et per dictum Wichdyk quod dividit in parte ejus superiori Rudam et Riston, et in hac parte inferiori Melsam et Arnall, tendendo versus austrum usque ad Monkedike; et in transverso de Munkdike versus Maplestubb in Lumbercotes per Kyelker, et hæc ex parte ejus orientali, et de dicto Maplestubb versus occidentem usque ad prædictum angulum de Crystings ubi præscriptam divisionem inchoavi ex parte ejus australi. Dominium videlicet quadrum circuitum habens quasi quatuor milliarium, agricultura, prato et pastura dotatum, et bosco super hæc omnia eminente pulcherrimè decoratum. Et ubi ipsum villa seu manerium de Melsa fuerat situatum, extat modo grangia nostra quæ Northgrange nuncupatur. Et postea ipsa commutatio dictorum maneriorum de Melsa et Bewick fuerat perpetrata, dictus Johannes de Melsa miles et post eum hæredes sui quandiu hæreditariè succedere poterant, apud Bewick morabantur. Præfatus autem Johannes de Melsa miles cujus patrimonium proprium Melsa erat, genuit Robertum, qui genuit Johannem, qui genuit Godfridum, qui genuit Johannem, qui genuit Godfridum, qui genuit Johannem, qui sine liberis mortuus est, qui obiit circa annum Domini millesimo trecentesimo septuagesimo septimo, cujus capitale manerium de Bewick, et patrimonium ejus in Sutton post ejus obitum dominus Radulphus de Hastings comparavit. Sed nunc ad relationis ordinem stilus est revocandus.

Caput Quartum.

De prima Monasterii ædificatione, et Monachorum inductione et Tenementis nobis datis per Willielmum Groos comitem fundatorem nostrum, in Waghun, Bosco de Ruda, Hotone, et Eggetone.

CUM autem ut prædictum est dictus Adam monachus locum monasterium ædificando aptum elegisset, et ipsius loci commutatio nondum fuerat scripti munimento confirmata, elaborabat dictus comes Willielmus le Groos in quantum potuit, ut dictus Adam monachus locum alium ubicunque voluit sibi placeret in dominio suo eligere ad monasterium fundandum. Sed nequaquam hunc ab incepto proposito aliquantulum flectere prævalebat. Tandem ergo comes locum ipsum cum omnibus pertinentiis suis Deo et beatæ Mariæ Virgini ad monasterium monachorum Cisterciensis ordinis ibidem faciendum solempniter conferebat. Fecit ergo ædificari quandam magnam domum licet ex vili cemate ubi nunc stabilitur pistrinum, in qua conventus adventurus, donec providentius pro eis ordinaretur, habitaret. Fecit etiam quandam capellam juxta domum prædictam, quæ modo dicitur camera cellerarii, ubi monachi omnes in inferiori solario postea decubabant, et in superiori divina officia devotionis persolvebant. Quibus nondum perfectis, conventum monachorum de monasterio de Fontibus v. kalendas eductum, in locum prædestinatum kalend. Januarii introduxit, atque ipsi conventui pro scripto Adam monacho præfecto in abbatem locum ipsum præfatis abbati et monachis suisque successoribus relaxabat. Deinde cœperunt dicti abbas et monachi ex operibus manuum suarum victum quærere quotidianum in sudore vultus sui pane suo vescentes, et in sanguine suo vineam Domini Sabaoth complantes. Confluebant ad eos undique comprovinciales; ad coadjuvandum quidam, quidam verò ad conversionem. Stolidus enim populus gentem admirabat cucullatam quibusdam temporibus divinis obsequiis insistentem, et aliis temporibus operibus rusticis occupatam. Cœperunt deinde dicti monachi in ædificiis et necessariis cotidie proficere et indes eorum numerus cœpit augeri devotis comprovincialibus, manus eis porrigentibus adjutrices. Porro idem venerabilis comes cœpit dictorum monachorum profectibus congaudere, et in augmentum divini cultus dedit eis boscum de Ruda, quem pridem cum Alano de Scrutvill pro sexaginta acris terræ arrabilis in Aldburgh eo magis valentibus commutavit. Quicquid etiam habuit in Waghun de patrimonio proprio et de patrimonio archiepiscopi, et ecclesiam ejusdem villæ ac Petrum de Waghun militem suum et teneamenta ipsius, ita tamen quod ipse Petrus esset attendens dictis monachis de singulis serviciis suis, donec idem comes præfato Petro changiam ad valitudinem terræ suæ conferret, dictis monachis in puram et perpetuam elemosinam est largitus, ut ipse Petrus occasione dictæ changiæ eisdem monachis ipsam terram suam in Waghun postea erogaret:

Sed tamen prædictum Petrum aut ipsius tenentem non valuerunt aliquam optinere, donec post nonaginta novem annos. Alter Petrus, cujus prædictus Petrus avus fuerat, in sua ultima senectute, se fieri monachum postulavit et optinuit, et tunc divisa hæreditate, quicquid sibi competebat, eisdem monachis relaxavit, ut in sequentibus, tempore domini Michaelis abbatis octavi referetur. Ecclesiam etiam de Waghun multis adversantibus causis nunquam possidebant, cujus quidem clameum archiepiscopo Eborum tandem relaxabant sicut in tempore domini Richardi abbatis septimi constabit postea manifestum. Idem etiam comes dedit dictis monachis tresdecim acras terræ et pasturam tresdecim vacuarum in Hoton in Whitbystrand et heremitorium sancti Leonardi juxta Eggiton in Whitbystrand in perpetuam elemosinam. Sed si decem acrarum terræ, pastura et heremitorium unquam in possessione dictorum monachorum persistebant, vel si possessa qualiter fuerunt alienata, hiis diebus minime reperitur.

Caput Quintum.

De terris datis nobis per eundem Comitem in Saltagh, de libero Passagio apud Pagulam et uno Tenemento in Hedon.

Et cum dictus comes fundator noster hæc dictis monachis contulisset, quam terram dicti Petri militis ipsi monachi nondum habebant, et ipsa Hoton et Eggeton ab ipso monasterio nostro non prope distabant, cogitabat possessiones dictorum monachorum ampliare, unde quandam pasturam super Humbriam quæ dicitur Saltagh, et Newland, et unam carucatam terræ arrabilis adjacens in Kaynham, dedit monasterio; monachi cum prædictis sexaginta marcas dederunt eis qui sibi in illa terra jus, immerito tamen sicut in sequentibus liquet, vendicabant. Osbertus siquidem vicecomes quondam opinatissimus sacerdos fuerat et à rege Henrico primo vicecomes Eborum et Lincolnæ constitutus. Hic à multis comitibus et baronibus Angliæ multas terras adquisivit propter servicium suum, et quia famularis regis erat. Inter quas à comite Albemarl qui tunc erat, impetravit, Kaynham in Holdernes, et in Lindesay Totele, et ea retinebat. De hiis quidem terris dedit prædictus Osbertus tribus militibus quatuor carucatas terræ liberè de ipso tenendas; duas videlicet Humfrido de Kaynham, et unam carucatam Bernaro de Haburr, in marisco de Kaynham, et Fulcherio de Rooston dedit illam carucatam terræ, quam dictus comes nobis dedit: quam videlicet Askillus pater Willielmi de Heduna, qui fuit nativus dicti Fulcherii, de eodem Fulcherio tenendam. Et sciendum quod terram ipsam de le Newland, prædictus Umfridus de Kaynham, assensu et donatione prædicti Osberti de Humbr. adquisivit, et eam fossato circumcingi fecit, et ipsam terram de Newland de præfato Osberto vicecomite tenuit quamdiu ipse Osbertus vixit. Post cujus verò mortem, venerunt filii ejus, videlicet Willielmus Turvecant et Richardus. Et quoniam filii sacerdotis fuerant, nec hæreditatem clamare poterant, pacti sunt se regi Henrico dare pecuniam, ut permitteret eos, terras quæ fuerunt patris eorum possidere. Et cum partem regi dedissent, et de residuo rex ab eis fidejussores exigeret nec invenire potuissent, omnes prædictæ terræ ex hac causa in manibus regis remanserunt. Tunc Stephanus comes Albemarl pater dicti Willielmi comitis redemit terras hæreditatis suæ de manibus regis Henrici et cassatæ sunt omnes donationes illæ terrarum quas Osbertus vicecomes, vel illi qui de ipso tenuerunt alicui conferebant. Similiter et alii comites et barones fecerunt, de quibus Osbertus aliquid tenuerat. Ab illa omni die, et deinceps nec Askillus prædictus, nec Willielmus filius ejus de Heduna, nec Simon Willielmi filius, nec aliquis hæredum suorum præfatas carucatas terræ de Saltagh vel Newland habuerunt. Quæ postea dictis monachis in puram elemosinam collatæ fuerunt. Sed si præfata sexaginta marcæ, præscriptis Willielmo et Richardo filiis Osberti, aut militibus præscriptis seu præfatis Askillo et Willielmo in dictis terris jura clamantibus, aut omnibus aut alicui eorum fuerunt persolutæ, penitus ignoratur. Hoc tamen scitur, quod a solis hæredibus prædicti Askilli pro duodecim marcis et dimidio quietam clamantiam ipsius terræ ceperamus, sicut in tempore Philippi abbatis secundi postea referetur. Quibus quidem sexaginta marcis, licet immerito persolutis, grangiam unam ibidem apud Saltagh incepimus ædificare. Idem ergo Willielmus comes fundator noster, confirmationem domini regis Stephani super omnibus præmissis nos fecit habere. Postea vero idem comes dedit nobis aliam terram in eodem marisco de Kaingham, quam quidem successores monachorum tunc existentium, quia firmam quam comiti debuerant per aliquot annos retrahendo non reddiderant, merito perdiderunt. Sed quanta fuerit ista terra ignoratur. Post cujus comitis mortem, Willielmus de Fortibus comes Albemar. qui filiam Willielmi prædicti Hawisiam quia hæredem masculum non habuit, duxerat in uxorem, duobus fratribus, Willielmo scilicet prædicto et Henrico qui fuerant de progenie dicti Askilli, centum acras terræ in præfato marisco concessis pro centum solidis annuis, de quibus viginti quinque acras et totum quod alter ipsorum ibidem habuit, nos tenemus sicut in tempore Alexandri abbatis quarti referetur. Postea verò quam eandem grangiam de Saltagh ibidem inceperamus, propter frequentes Humbriæ inundationes fluctuosas, non modicam portionem terræ versus prædictam grangiam consumentes, eadem grangia in locum interiori ubi nunc situatur fuerat consummata, sicut in tempore domini Willielmi abbatis, qui postea referetur. Locus enim de quo prædicta grangia translata fuit Ald-Saltagh vel West-Saltagh nuncupatur, contra quem locum licet Humbria ibidem terram proprius consumpsisset, terra jam recrescere cœpit, præscriptusque etiam Willielmus le Groos comes fundator noster, dedit nobis liberum et quietum passagium apud Pagulam, quatenus cum omnibus rebus nostris propriis in eundo et redeundo libero passagio frueremur. Dedit etiam nobis quandam mansuram in Hedon, ut in eundo ad Saltagh et dictum passagium et inde redeundo, ibidem perpetuum hospitium haberemus. Quam mansuram etiam idem abbas Adam cuidam Roberto filio Benedicti, et Sapienciæ uxori suæ filiæ Haldene, cui jure hæreditario prædicta mansura pertinebat, reddidit, quatenus eam in feodo et hæreditate rehaberent, et eam de ecclesia nostra ipsi et justi successores eorum tenerent, ut in ea hospitium nostrum, congruè et honorificè ad opus fratrum nostrorum euntium et redeuntium haberemus. Quæ quidem mansura ad opus nostrum iterum reversa est.

Caput Sextum.

De Genealogia Nobilium Comitum Albemar. fundatorum nostrorum.

Sed quia ipse Willielmus le Groos comes Albemar. noster fundator fuit ut præfertur, restat nunc, ut de ejus antecessoribus, ejusque hæredibus præclaris comitibus Albemar. et dominis de Holdernes paulisper attendere quos breviter intenditur memoriæ commendare. Comes quondam Campaniæ, nepos regis Francorum, habebat quendam filium militem egregium nomine Odonem qui propter homicidium cujusdam magnatis terræ illius inde fugisset, ad Willielmum nothum qui fuit dux Normanniæ et post rex Angliæ pervenit. Porro coadjuvante dictum Odonem archiepiscopo Rothomagi erga ipsum regem Willielmum, dedit ei præfatus rex sororem suam in uxorem. Postquam autem celebratæ sunt nuptiæ, Odo rogavit eundem archiepiscopum, ut suggereret regi dare sibi unde uxorem suam alere posset, et exposuit ei causam quare de terra sua jampridem fugisset; dedit ergo rex dicto Odoni insulam de Holdernes, et ipse idem archiepiscopus dedit eidem Odoni comitatum Albemarlæ ut in expeditionibus esset ejusdem archiepiscopi signifer cum decem militibus. Dederat autem præfatus rex dictam insulam de Holdernes prius militi cuidam valdè probato et in armis probato qui cum ipso in Angliam venerat Drugoni de la Beverer Flandrensi qui construxit castellum de Skipse: habuit autem idem Drugo quandam regis cognatum, quam omine infausto interemit, post cujus necem venit dictus Drugo ad regem simulans se velle cum uxore sua in Flandria reverti, et petiit ab ipso aliquantam pecuniam sibi dari. Accepta ergo a rege pecunia, festinavit ad mare; cujus nefandum factum et fictum negotium cum rex cognovisset, misit post illum ut comprehenderetur, sed ipse denuo non reversurus transfretavit. Data est ergo Odoni de Campaniæ qui habuit sororem regis uxorem, Holdernessia, sicut dictum est, quæ valdè sterilis et infructuosa erat eo tempore, nec gignebat nisi avenam. Cumque Odoni uxor sua filium peperisset, quem vocavit Stephanum, petiit à rege ut daret ei terram ferentem frumentum, unde alere posset nepotem suum, dedit ergo ei rex villam de Bitham cum pertinentiis et alias possessiones plurimas. Porro filius Stephani filii Odonis, fuit Willielmus le Groos prædictus fundator noster, et ipse Willielmus le Groos accepit uxorem Ceciliam nomine, filiam Willielmi filii Duncani qui fuit filius regis Scotiæ Malcolm, et frater regis David. Per quam Ceciliam dominus Willielmus le Groos et hæredes sui comites Albemarle jure hæreditario Cravennam possidebant. Ex qua Cecilia dictus Willielmus accepit unam filiam nomine Hawisiam. Ipse quidem Willielmus comes le Groos comes post foundationem monasteriorum sancti Martini de Auxiato, propè Albemarle de ordine Cluniacensi, et S. Mariæ de Thornton regularium canonicorum de ordine sancti Augustini, et duorum monasteriorum de Valle Dei et de Melsa, monasterii videlicet nostri prædicti de ordine Cisterciensi, vixit viginti novem annis, et apud Thornton tumulatus est. Et cum ipse belliger et dux exercitus temporibus requisitis extitisset et in mari transfretando tempestates nocturnas et repentinas eis suisque naufragium minantes sæpe perpersus fuisset; eisdem tempestatibus ingruentibus noctem usque ad ejus medium sub spe insomniæ deducebat. Media autem nocte irruente, quia monachi sui sancti Martini, et canonici sui de Thornton ad nocturnas vigilias surgere consueverunt sub confidentia precum ipsorum monachorum et canonicorum, spretis tempestatibus securius dormiebat. Circa gallicantum quidam peractis monachorum et canonicorum prædictorum vigiliis cum evigilaret sub confidentia orationum monachorum de Valle Dei et de Melsa qui ipsa hora noctis ad suas vigilias etiam surgere festinarent, spretis iterum tempestatibus, sive dormiendo, sive vigilando diem securius expectabat. Hawisia verò filia ipsius Willielmi post mortem patris sui data est per regem Angliæ qui temporibus illis extiterat, nobili viro, Willielmo de Mandevilla, sed ipso mortuo sine hærede ex ipsius procreato, data est iterum dicta Hawisia Baldwin de Betoyn comiti Insulæ, de qua accepit unam filiam tantum, quæ filia maritata marischallo Angliæ tunc existenti, prole non producta, animam Deo corpus terræ commendabat: mortuus est etiam ipse Baldwin de Betoyn, et Hawisia per præceptum domini regis accepit maritum Willielmum de Fortibus primum et habuit ex ea Willielmum de Fortibus secundum, qui habens uxorem accepit ex ea Willielmum de Fortibus tertium, qui duxit uxorem Isabellam nomine, filiam comitis Insulæ et Devonix, ex qua filios et filias procreavit, quarum una sepulta est in presbyterio nostro, et alii diversis in locis sine hæredibus ex eis procreatis. Sed una earum Avelina nomine, quæ sola tunc superstes, data est Edmundo filio regis Henrici tertii in uxorem. Willielmus verò de Fortibus tertius mortuus est, similiter et Avelina filia sua, et hæres uxor Edmundi supradicti, obiit sine hærede aliquo de corpore suo procreato. Et sic ob defectum hæredum fuit comitatus Albemarle et honor de Holdernes seisis in manu domini regis. Sed tamen dominium de Holdernes reges succedentes nunc unus nunc alter ad terminum vitæ suæ pro libitu concesserunt. Tandem rex Richardus secundus à Conquestu, duodecimo die Junii, anno regni sui decimo tertio, dedit dictum dominium de Holdernes cum omnibus membris, feodis militum, advocacionibus ecclesiarum, abbatiarum, prioratuum, et aliis pertinentiis suis in quocunque loco, et in quocunque modo eidem spectantibus, domino Thomæ duci Glocestriæ, comiti de Essex et de Bokingham, constabulario Angliæ, ac filio regis Edwardi tertii à Conquestu, avunculo suo; quod dominium Anna regina tenuit ad terminum vitæ suæ; tenendum dicto domino Thomæ duci, et hæredibus de corpore suo exeuntibus, per servicia inde debita et consueta in perpetuum, in valorem sexcentarum librarum per annum, in partem solutionis mille librarum annuarum per dictum dominum regem, eidem duci domino Thomæ pro statu suo comitis Buck, honorabilius manutenendo, concessarum. Dicta ergo Anna regina, circa festum Pentecostes, anno Domini millesimo trecentesimo nonagesimo quarto, et dicti domini regis decimo septimo, Deo spiritum commendante, dictus dominus Thomas dux possessionem dicti domini de Holdernes continuè est adeptus. Omnes quidem comites præscripti à prima fundatione nostra, usque ad Willielmum de Fortibus tertium, et idem Willielmus de Fortibus tertius, omnia terras et tenementa quæ dicti monachi de Melsa suis temporibus possidebant, eis in perpetuam elemosinam confirmaverunt.

NUM. II.

Fundationis et Fundatorum Historia.

[Ex Regist. de Fontibus penes Willielm. Ingleby mil. an. 1630, fol. 10 a.]

ANNO Incarnationis Dominicæ MCL. kal. Januarii, inceptum est monasterium nostrum de Melsa sub abbate bonæ memoriæ domino Adam. Hic quidem aliquamdiu monachus fuit in monasterio sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci. Postmodum verò per priorem ejusdem domus et alios qui inde exierant, et in territorio Riponensi, monasterium quod Fontains dicitur inchoaverant, secus est. Inde post non longum cum aliis pluribus ad ædificanda monasteria de Kyrkestede, de Woburne, de Valle Dei directus est. Porro comes Albemariæ Willielmus primus monasterium de Valle Dei fundavit, quod tamen propter loci inopportunitatem ad aliud prædium translatum est, postmodum. Willielmus autem fuit filius Stephani filii Odonis qui fuit filius comitis Campaniæ junior, et propinquus regis Francorum. Odo autem propter homicidium cujusdam de magnatibus terræ fugit de terra sua, et venit ad Willielmum nothum qui fuit dux Normanniæ et rex Angliæ, et petit dari sibi sororem ejusdem Willielmi in uxorem, quod et factum est, archiepiscopo Rotomagensi adjuvante partes Odonis. Postquam autem nuptiæ celebratæ sunt Odo rogavit eundem archiepiscopum ut suggereret regi dari sibi unde uxorem suam, scilicet regis sororem, alere posset, exposuit ei causam quare de terra sua fugisset; dedit ergo archiepiscopus Odoni civitatem Albemariæ et in expeditionibus esset ipsius archiepiscopi signifer cum decem militibus. Suggestit etiam eidem archiepiscopo regi ut aliquam possessionem daret eidem, et exposuit ei causam ipsius. Qua audita, dedit rex Odoni Holdernes; dederat autem rex eandem Holdernes militi cuidam valdè probo et in armis probato qui cum ipso in Angliam venerat Drogoni de la Beverer Flandrensi, qui construxit castellum de Skypse; habuit autem idem Drogo uxorem quandam regis cognatam quam omine infausto interemit. Venit ergo ad regem simulans se velle cum uxore sua in Flandriam reverti, et petit aliquantam pecuniam sibi dari; et dedit ei rex. Accepta ergo pecunia festinavit ad mare. Quæ cum cognovisset rex, misit post illum ut comprehenderetur, sed ipse jam non reversus transfretavit. Data est ergo Odoni de Campaniæ qui habuit sororem regis uxorem, Holdernes, sicut dictum est, quæ valde sterilis et infructuosa erat eo tempore, nec gignebat nisi avenam. Cum autem peperisset Odoni uxor sua filium quem vocavit Stephanum, petit à rege ut daret ei terram ferentem frumentum unde alere posset nepotem suum. Dedit ergo rex ei villam de Bitham cum pertinentiis et alias possessiones plurimas. Porro filius Stephani fuit Willielmus, sicut dictum est. Willielmus verò habuit sorores quatuor, filias Stephani, quarum una data est vicedomino de Pynkeney, altera autem vicedomino de Verberay, tertia nobili viro Bertanno de Brikebet, quarta Willielmo de Romare, et postea Petro de Brus. Willielmus quoque accepit uxorem Ceciliam nomine, filiam Willielmi filii Duncani, qui fuit filius regis Scotiæ Malcolm et frater regis David. Duncan autem habuit filium nomine Willielmum, qui habuit uxorem Aliz de Rumeli, ex qua accepit tres filias, ad quas jure hæreditario pertinent Craven, et Copaland, et Alderdale, et Cokerum. Harum primam, nomine Ceciliam, Willielmus habuit, ut dictum est, ex qua accepit filiam unam nomine Hawisiam, nec alios liberos habuit. Hawisa verò data est Willielmo de Forz, et habuit ex eo filium Willielmum de Forz secundum, qui habens uxorem Avelinam nomine filiam nobilis viri Ricardi de Munfichet, accepit ex ea filium nomine Willielmum de Forz tertium, &c.

Abbey of Newminster, near Morpeth, in Northumberland.

NEWMINSTER abbey was founded by Ralph de Merlay and Julian his wife (the daughter of Gospatric earl of Northumberland) about the year 1137, for Cistercian monks from the abbey of Fountains, in Yorkshire. The house was dedicated to the honour of the blessed Virgin Mary. Different charters, with an enumeration of the chief benefactors to it, will be found in the Appendix of Instruments. Wallis has recited the titles of the different donations in English.^a In the former edition of this Work Dugdale placed Newminster abbey by mistake in Yorkshire.

But few names of the

ABBATS of NEWMINSTER

have occurred. Of ST. ROBERT, the first abbat, an account will be found in Alban Butler's Lives of the Saints under June 7th.

ADAM occurs abbat in the time of Edward I.^b

^h By an inquisition taken in the 47th of Edward III. it was found that the lands belonging to the HOSPITAL or FREE CHAPEL of

....CHARLETON.^c

JOHN occurs in 1467.^d

DAVID, in 1479.^e

The abbat of Newminster was summoned to the parliament held at Carlisle Jan. 21st, 35 Edw. I., A.D. 1307.^f

There are but two Entries in the Taxation of Pope Nicholas IV. relating to the possessions of Newminster abbey in 1291. Nothing is entered as held by them at that time out of the diocese of Durham. The rectory of Welington, appropriated to the monastery, is the only spirituality, rated at 45*l.* 18*s.* 10*d.* and forms the first entry. The temporalities of the abbey form the second, and are entered in mass: they amounted to 220*l.* per annum.^g

Tanner says this monastery had at the Suppression about fifteen religious. The gross income in the 26th Hen. VIII. appears to have amounted to 140*l.* 10*s.* 4*d.*; the clear income to 100*l.* 8*s.* 1*d.*^h

Tanner mentions a REGISTER of this abbey as formerly in the possession of Lord William Howard, of Naworth; with a MARTYROLOGY of it among the Cecil manuscripts, afterwards the duke of Kent's at Wrest. Collectanea from both these volumes, in the hand-writing of Mr. Francis Thynne, were in the library of John Anstis, MITFORD, in Northumberland, were in possession of the abbat of Newminster, but they were restored in the 1st of Richard II. Of this hospital we have little to say, and for compression's sake shall insert that little here. It was dedicated to St. Leonard, and was founded and endowed with lands for one chaplain by Sir William Bertram, lord of Mitford. See Tanner, Notit. Mon. Northumb. xx. Wallis, vol. ii. p. 326. John de Mitford had, by grant from the king, the chapel of St. Leonard Mitford given to him in the 14th Ric. II. See MS. Harl. 6961, p. 175. Pat. 14 Ric. II. p. 1.

Esq. Other extracts from the Register will be found in the Harleian manuscripts, num. 247, fol. 102; 294, fol. 214.^a

The COMMON SEAL of Newminster is beautifully engraved in Mr. Surtees' History of the County of Durham, vol. ii. pl. xii.

The site of this abbey was granted in the 7th James I.

to Robert Brandling. When Wallis wrote, it belonged to William Ord, of Fenham, Esq.^b It belongs now to William Ord, Esq. of Whitfield Hall.

A fragment or two of the portal, or gateway, leading to this abbey was all that remained of its buildings when Wallis published his History, A.D. 1769. A more recent account states that every vestige of the abbey has been destroyed except the arch of one of the entrances.

I. respecting the abbat's claim to free warren in Newminster, Horton, Felton, Newton, West Tritton, Est Tritton, Stretton, Kesterne, Ulgham, and Rothelay, in Northumberland, followed by the verdict of the jury; whence it appears that the rights of the descendants of the founder had been to a certain extent encroached upon by the abbat, whose privileges were, in consequence, somewhat abridged.

Thame or Tame Abbey, in Oxfordshire.

HERE was at Otteley, in the parish of Oddington, in this county, says Tanner, an Abbey of Cistercian monks, founded by Sir Robert Gait, who were shortly after removed on account of the low and unhealthy situation to Thame; where Alexander, bishop of Lincoln, gave them his park to build a monastery on, A. D. 1137^a or 1138^b.

Bishop Kennett, in his Parochial Antiquities, has given the history of this foundation more in detail. Sir Robert Gait, Knight, he says, lord of the manor of Hampton, thence called Hampton Gait, now Hampton Gay, possessed a fourth part of the village of Ottendun; and going to Gilbert, abbat of Waverley, he desired and obtained leave to build an abbey of the Cistercian order in the said village of Ottendun, which accordingly he raised at his own charge, and endowed it with five virgates of land, which made the fourth part of a Knight's fee, and called it from the name of an adjoining wood Ottelei.^c

Gilbert and the convent of Waverley, it appears, gave to this new abbey of their order one hide of land in Nortun, which Robert de Siffrawast had given them.^d

The next addition to their revenue was made by Edith, the wife of Robert de Oily, who, with her husband's consent, gave, out of part of her own dowry in Weston, bordering upon Ottmoor, that demesne which lay on the corner of their wood, and continued on without the intermixture of any other lands;^e the quantity of which demesne was thirty-six acres, as expressed in a confirmation of Henry the Second.^f

Leland says, this Abbey was situated upon Ottmoor;^g on that corner, Bishop Kennett supposes, which lay nearest to the village of Ottendon; the religious always affecting such low places, partly with the pretence of more solitary living, and partly out of love to fish and fat land. However, he continues, this site upon the moor was fitter for an ark than a monastery, and therefore, by Alexander, bishop of Lincoln, it was soon removed to Thame in this county, and the church there dedicated to St. Mary, on the 21st of July A. D. 1138,^h of which the bishop was now reputed the founder, though it was only a translation of the first House,ⁱ and the bishop's augmentation only the park of Thame whereon the new abbey was built, and some land which had belonged to Nigel Kyre. Soon after, there was given to this abbey of Thame some land in Chesterton, by Robert de Amory; two hides in Stoke by Peter Talemash, which were of the fee of Reginald de St. Walery; half a hide in Merton by Hugh Constable; and another hide in the same place by Geoffrey son of Osmund.^k Robert Fitz Aumery also gave to Serlo, abbat of Thame, certain lands in Wulwardhull.^l

A confirmation charter of King Edward the Second enumerates the possessions of the monastery of Thame, at that time, at considerable length. It will be found in the Appendix.^m

The temporal possessions of the abbey of Thame mentioned in Pope Nicholas's Taxation, A. D. 1291, produced at that time no less an annual sum than 101*l.* 17*s.* 3*d.* The only spiritual possession of the Monastery entered in that record is a portion in the Church of Stoke Talmache of the annual value of 13*s.* 4*d.*^a

In the 26th of Henry the Eighth the revenues of this house amounted to 256*l.* 13*s.* 7½*d.*

There are no Ministers' Accompts of this abbey in the Augmentation Office.

The site was granted to the bishop of Oxford and his successors in the 34th Hen. VIII., and afterwards, in the 1st Edw. VI. to Edward duke of Somerset.

The COMMON SEAL of Thame is in the Augmentation Office, attached to the Surrender of the house to King Henry the Eighth, dated 16 Nov. in the 31st of his reign. The subject of it is the Virgin with the infant Jesus held in her right arm, having on each side of them a female figure; the whole under a highly ornamented canopy. At the base, which is imperfect, there was an arch, in which probably was a monk praying. The legend is, s . COMVNE . B MARIE . DE . TAME. The impression is on red wax.^b Considerable portions of the old buildings of Thame Priory are yet remaining: several of the stone window-frames are lancet-headed. An engraving of these Remains will be published very shortly in Mr. Skelton's Antiquities of Oxfordshire.

NUM. I.

[Ex MS. Cotton, Julius C. vii. fol. 287.]

Cum coepissent abbatiae Cisterciensis ordinis per Angliam diffundi, et jam domus de Waverleia duas generasset filias, Wardonam et Fordam, ad petitionem Roberti Gait militis, concepit et genuit tertiam quæ nunc dicitur Thama. Hic Robertus Gait, qui in villa de Ottendun quartam partem habuit, ad abbatem Gilbertum veniens, conventum ad abbatiam in memorata villa construendam, petiit et accepit. Construxitque ergo ibi abbatiam, et eam dotavit portione sua modica quidem, videlicet quinque virgatis terræ quæ et ipsæ quartam partem unius militis faciebant, vocavitque eam ex nomine eo adjacentis nemoris Otteleam.

Abbey of Bordesley, in Worcestershire.

BORDESLEY Abbey, says Nash, is generally supposed to have been founded by Maud or Matilda the empress, the daughter of King Henry the First, and the mother of King Henry the Second;^a but the first stone having been laid by Waleran de Beaumont, earl of Mellent and Worcester, about the year 1138, he has by many been considered as the founder.^b The annals of Winchcombe date the foundation in 1136.^c

The Empress's charter to this abbey was confirmed by her son King Henry the Second, by King Richard the First, and by King Edward the First.^d

Hugh surnamed Kevelioke, earl of Chester, was a good benefactor to this abbey. He bestowed upon it his lordship of Combe in Gloucestershire,^e to maintain six monks perpetually for the health of his soul, and for the souls of Earl Ranulph his father, Robert earl of Gloucester his grandfather, his mother, and for all christian souls.^f In the former edition of the Monasticon, Dugdale had ascribed this grant to this earl's father Ralph, whose widow Maud, daughter of Robert earl of Gloucester, confirmed it by her charter.^g

In the 28th Edw. I. the following lands were held by the abbat of Bordesley, and are recited as exempt from the forest of Feckenham. The grange of Sydenhale, the grange de la Leye, the new grange of Hawley, the scite of the abbey of Bordesley, part of Tardebrig, with the woods thereof, and the hamlet of Redditch.^h

This house had likewise large property at Osmareley,ⁱ at Ashborne,^k Tisoe,^l Stretton super Fosse,^m Oxhill,ⁿ Edrich-eston or Rudbrook,^o Snitfield,^p Bevington or Binton,^q Hilborough,^r Bidford,^s Kenton Langley,^t Sangar,^u Edston,^x Bearley and Claverdon,^y and Overley,^z all in Warwickshire: and at Wickwane in Gloucestershire.^a is chiefly taken from Nash's Collections.

WILLIAM was abbat about A.D. 1160.

^a See her Charter in the Appendix, Num. I.

^b There is a Charter, however, of Waleran earl of Mellent, printed in the Appendix to the present Account, Num. III. in which he speaks of himself as having founded Bordesley; yet, as Tanner observes, this Waleran is one of the witnesses to the Empress Maud's Charter, Num. I. In King Richard the First's Charter, Num. II. the foundation is ascribed to Maud, without any mention of Waleran. The reader must reconcile these difficulties for himself.

in red wax, is extant in the Augmentation Office, appendant to the Instrument of Surrender, dated 17th June 30 Henry VIII. It is oval, of a moderate size: the subject, not easily to be comprehended, on account of the defect of the impression, may be conjectured to represent the Virgin crowning the founder, both being seated under a gothic canopy, and having underneath a monk in a niche in the attitude of devotion. The legend SIGILL. ECCL'IE. BEATE. MARIE. DE. BORDESLE.

The site of this monastery was granted in the 38th

Henry VIII. to Andrew Lord Windsor, whom Dugdale, in his Baronage, calls Sir Andrews Windsor.^a

There are no vestiges now remaining of Bordesley abbey. The foundations are said to have been discovered in different parts of eight acres of ground.

Hugh, surnamed Kevelioke earl of Chester, has been already mentioned as giving to the abbey of Bordesley his lordship of COMBE in Gloucestershire, to maintain six monks there perpetually; but whether that abbey had a CELL there for any length of time Tanner was unable to discover.

gave the fatal stroke to all the lesser Monasteries; and thereby opened the gap to the miserable ruin of all the rest, which soon after happened.) And the next ensuing year, was one of the temporal Lords, who subscribed that letter to Pope Clement the Seventh; intimating to him, that unless he did comply with King Henry in that business of his divorce from Queen Katherine, his Supremacy here was likely to be endangered.

"But of this Lord Windsor I have little else to say, than what I have been told by Thomas, late Lord Windsor deceased, and which he received by tradition from his ancestors, viz. that after the dissolution of the greater monasteries in 31st Hen. VIII. the king, being informed by Cromwell, and some other, who had been his chiefest agents in that work; that the most likely way to secure them from ever returning again to those uses, whereunto their pious founders did at first design them, would be to dispose most of them into the hands of the nobility and gentry, by free gift, easy purchases, or advantageous exchanges. This subtle project so wrought with the king, as that he soon assented to put it in practice; and in order thereunto, thought fit, (amongst others) to engage this Lord Windsor for one; to which end he sent him a message, that he would dine with him at Stanwell, upon a certain day, not long after; and accordingly did so. But, before he went away, told him, that he liked so well of that place, as he resolved to have it; yet not without a more beneficial exchange. Whereunto the Lord Windsor answering; that he did hope his highness was not in earnest; and, that it having been the seat of his ancestors for many ages, he would not now take it from him. The king, with a stern countenance, replied; that it must be: and commanded him, upon his allegiance, to go speedily to his attorney-general, who should more fully acquaint him with his royal pleasure. Which daring not to refuse, he accordingly repaired to the attorney-general, who shewed him a draught, ready made, of an exchange for that Lordship of Stanwell with its appurtenances, lying in the counties of Middlesex, Surry, Bucks, Berks, and Southampton, (by which the greatness of it may in some sort be discerned) in lieu of BORDSLEY ABBEY, in com. Wigorn. Whereof being constrained to accept, he was commanded to quit Stanwell forthwith, though he had then laid in his Christmas provisions, for the keeping of his wonted hospitality there. Whereupon he left them in the House, saying, they should not find it bare STANWELL. This happened in the 34th Hen. VIII."—Dugd. Baron. tom. ii. pp. 307, 308.

Abbey of Louth Park, or De Parco Lude, in Lincolnshire.

HE annals of Peterborough place the foundation of this abbey in the year 1139. From a manuscript relating to the history of Fountains abbey in Yorkshire, quoted by Dugdale from the Arundel library, it appears that Alexander bishop of Lincoln was the founder. He is said to have built this abbey in the park near Louth, for Cistercian monks, whom he had at first brought from Fountains to Haverholm.^a

This, as well as most of the Cistercian monasteries, was dedicated to the Virgin Mary.

Tanner says that in the time of King Henry the Third herein were no fewer than sixty-six monks, and one hundred and fifty conversi; whereas about the time of the Suppression here were not above twelve religious.^b

The original endowment of this abbey, with the names and gifts of various subsequent benefactors, will be found in the confirmation charter of King Henry the Third, dated in the eighth year of his reign.^c

The temporalities of Louth park abbey in the diocese of Lincoln, in 1291, appear to have amounted to the annual sum of 246*l.* 9*s.* 3*d.*; beside 20*s.* a year in the diocese of Coventry and Lichfield.^o

In the 26th Hen. VIII. the gross value of the revenues of this House amounted to 169*l.* 5*s.* 6½*d.*; the net income to 147*l.* 14*s.* 6*d.* per annum.

The first grant of the site of this abbey is unnoticed by Tanner; it was made in the 28th of Hen VIIIth to Sir Thomas Brughe Lord Brughe.^p

No REGISTER of Louth park abbey is at present known: Tanner's and a few other references to records and papers belonging to it will be found below.^q

Appendant to the Harleian charter, 44 H. 49. is a small oval seal, with the figure of an abbat in the area, a

IRKSTED Abbey was founded by Hugh Brito, son of Eudo, lord of Tateshale, in 1139, to the honor of the Virgin Mary. The Cottonian Manuscript Tiberius C. VIII. represents its site, upon a plain hemmed in with brambles and marshes, to have received its name of Kirksted prophetically, as the place of a church, before an abbey was constructed there. The first inhabitants of Kirksted, it appears, were brought from Fountains abbey.^a The foundation charter may be seen in the Appendix of Instruments, Num. III.

William de Dentune conveyed to the monks of Kirksted the wood of Langhage with its appurtenances.^b Robert Fitz Hugh, the son of the founder, was another benefactor. He granted two charters to the monks; one confirming his father's gifts, and the other confirming the donation of William de Dentune.^c Gerard the son of Gerard de Furnivall gave the mill of Wdeus for the support of lights at the masses.^d Gerard de Furnivall is also stated to have confirmed all the donations of Richard de Luvetot and his son William, which said Richard had granted to the monks the hermitage of St. John at Kymbrurth.^e Walter d'Aencourt bestowed certain lands at Chotes upon them, and confirmed two or three grants from other persons of a minor kind.^f John the son of Walter d'Aencourt gave them two carucates of land in the fields of Branztun.^g Philip de Kyma confirmed his father's grant of Medringham.^h Robert de Arci bestowed all the land belonging to Nocketun and Dunestun upon the monks;ⁱ which places were confirmed to them by Thomas the son of Robert de Arci,^k who also remitted half a mark which the monks had been accustomed to pay to him by way of acknowledgment.^l

The monks of Begar yielded up to those of Kirksted a grange at Gaiton, given to them by Alan earl of Bretagne;^m for which Earl Conan gave to the latter other lands at Gaiton, as appears by his deed.ⁿ Ralph Fitz Gilbert conferred on this monastery all his land of Scamtun,^o confirmed by Gilbert, earl of Lincoln.^p Richard de Builli gave land at Kymberwrth, for the reception of two houses and an orchard; and for four forges, two for founding, and two for the working of iron, with liberty to dig coal throughout the territory of that village for two fires, and wood in the forest there for four fires.^q Guarin, the son of Gerold, allowed the monks to dig stone in his quarries for their own use throughout his lordship of Wassenbrock.^r

These are the greater benefactions to Kirksted. The value of the temporalities of this house in 1291, is stated to have amounted to 369*l.* 3*s.* 9*d.*^s In the 26th Hen. VIII. the value appears to have been lessened, the clear revenue then amounting to no more than 286*l.* 2*s.* 7½*d.*^t

No COMMON SEAL of this abbey has as yet been discovered; but impressions of the private seals used by several of its abbats are discoverable among the Harleian deeds in the British Museum.

Appendant to a deed which has been already named in the Account of Stanfeld Nunnery, Cart. Antiq. Harl. 44 F. 3, is an impression from the seal of Simon Abbat of Kirksted, A.D. 1278. It is oval, of green wax, and represents

A View and Plan of Kirksted abbey may be seen in Stukeley's Itin. Cur. pl. xxviii. the east view of it was also engraved by Buck 1726. At present the corner of a building, supposed to have been a tower, is the only remain.

Sed quoniam hæc elemosina tam longè erat de abbacia nostra, quod non potuimus eam ad libitum nostrum et proficuum collaborare, dilectis autem monachis de Kirkestede eandem elemosinam fratribus nostris erat admodum utilis et contigua; eorum precibus et fraternitate compulsi, deposuimus in manu comitis Conani, omne jus et omnem donationem et investituram præfatæ elemosinæ, quam de manu comitis Alani recepimus, et ipse comes Conanus concessit et dedit prædictis fratribus nostris de Kyrkestede eandem elemosinam in manu Radulfi celerarii, qui in loco abbatis sui de Kirkestede præsens aderat in præsentia nostra, nobis eandem donationem concedentibus, et confirmantibus, et assignavit eis in terra sua, pro eadem elemosina, duas carucas terræ et dimidiam de suo dominio in territorio de Gaiton, et fructum quod appellatur Gaiton Rahaga, et hoc factum fuit coram hiis testibus. Hoc etiam pepigimus quod si morte præventus, vel quolibet casu præpeditus fuerim quod hanc conventionem eis perficere non potuerim, apud conventum de Begar, et apud abbates qui de domo de Begar facti sunt impetrabo, quod quicunque post me abbas, in domo de Begar substituetur, eandem pactionem eis per omnia perficiet. Et hoc pepigimus quod omnes has conventiones præsentabo per me, et per abbates factas de abbacia de Begar, primo generali capitulo Cisterciensi; et privilegium domini papæ, et cartas per quas hæc elemosina confirmata est, illuc nobiscum portabimus, et de eis hanc elemosinam tenere faciam, et in eorum privilegiis et cartis ascribi faciam. Abbey of Kingswood, in Wiltshire.

KINGSWOOD, in the former edition of the Monasticon, as well as in the first edition of the Notitia Monastica, was placed in Gloucestershire; but the town is subject to the sheriffs and justices of Wiltshire, and accounted within the hundred of Chippenham in that county, though it is encompassed with Gloucestershire, and seven miles distant from any other town in Wiltshire.

In regard to spiritual jurisdiction, it is in all matters subject to the bishop and archdeacon of Gloucester.

The history of the foundation is given at length in the Appendix from the Abbey Register.^a In performance of a design of Roger de Berkeley the elder, it appears, which by reason of his death could not be accomplished, an Abbey of Cistercian monks from Tyntern was built here A.D. 1139, by his nephew William de Berkeley, to the honor of the blessed Virgin Mary; but the abbat and most of the monks were, in the latter part of the reign of King Stephen, or in the beginning of that of King Henry the Second, by agreement with Reginald de Saint Walery, removed to Haselden in the parish of Rodmarton, and from thence, for want of water, in a little time they went to Tettebury, to which place Kingswood became a Grange or Cell, with only a monk or two to say mass. After some attempts made by the abbat of Waverley to place some of his monks at Kingswood, and other disputes, all were compromised by the concurrence of Roger de Berkeley and Bernard de St. Walery; and the abbey was once more removed from Tettebury to a place called Mireford in Kingswood, not far from the old site, about the year 1170.^b Such were the early vicissitudes of this House.

King Henry the First's charter, authorising Roger de Berkeley's gift of Acheolt to the monks, will be found in the Appendix; with William de Berkeley's letter to Pope Innocent, praying for the ratification of his grant of Kingswood,^c followed by five other charters confirming the land at Kingswood, from Roger de Berkeley the elder, Roger de Berkeley the younger, and King Henry the Second.^d The last instrument given in the former edition of Dugdale is a cession from Nicholas de Kingestone of certain land called Jonesham.^e

According to Pope Nicholas's Taxation the spiritualties of this monastery amounted in 1291 to the annual sum of 6*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.*; the temporalties to 47*l.* 17*s.* 2*d.*; making a total of 54*l.* 1*s.* 6*d.*^f

There is no valuation of Kingswood in the General Ecclesiastical Survey of the 26th Hen. VIII., but its possessions are there answered for in gross, at the sum of 245*l.* 8*s.* 8*d.*, the whole of its estates being then on lease to Sir Nicholas Poyntz, Kn^t. under the seal of the Court of Augmentations, dated 10th March, 29 Hen. In the 2d year of Queen Elizabeth, the site of this House was granted to Sir John Thynne, Knight.^b

In 1651, a REGISTER of Kingswood Abbey was in the possession of John Smith, Esq. of Nibley, in the county of Gloucester.

Tanner has only the following references, relating to this Monastery, to public instruments:

"Cart. 11 Hen. III. p. 1, n. 109, pro maner. de Acholt, ex donatione Rogeri de Berkele. Plac. in com. Gloucestr. 53 Hen. III. rot. 9, d. pro ii. partibus maner. de Chelesworth.

"Pat. 3 Edw. II. m. 19, de mess. et terris in Hull, Berkele, Pochampton, &c. Pat. 5 Edw. II. p. 1, m. 13. pro terris in Culkerton."

The COMMON SEAL represented the Blessed Virgin crowned, holding in her arms the infant Jesus, and standing between two elegant pilasters surmounted by a canopy; the field diapered; in base, under an arch, the half figure of a monk praying, the legend much flattened, so that no more of it can be read than s. cōe CONVENTUS DE KINGEWOD. An impression of this Seal on red wax is appendant to a conventual lease temp. Hen. VIII. in the Augmentation Office.

Historia Foundationis.

[Ex Registro Abb. de Kingeswode penes Johannem Smith de Nibley, in com. Glouc. ar. 1651.]

HÆC est narratio abbatis et conventus de Tynterna, de Kingeswode. Willielmus de Berkeley dedit abbatiae de Tynterna Kingeswode ad fundandam ibidem abbatiam ordinis Cisterciensis; et Matildis imperatrix filia Henrici regis Angliæ carta sua donum illud confirmavit. Processu vero temporis et tempore hostilitatis, regnante rege Stephano post mortem Henrici regis Angliæ, emerunt illi de Kingeswode Haseldene à quodam Johanne de sancto Johanne cui rex ille Stephanus dederat quasdam terras Reginaldi de sancto Walerico tempore hostilitatis. Redeunte autem pace et justitia, reddente unicuique quod suum erat, Reginaldus de sancto Walerico recepit Haseldene et monachos effugavit. Quibus tandem, post multas quas ab eo perpassi sunt vexationes, Haseldene cum cæteris terris quamplurimis se redditurum spondit, si abbatiam suam transferre vellent illuc, quia ex injuncta sibi à domino papa pœnitentia abbatiam de ordine Cisterciensi fundare suscepit; quod pacti sunt illi et partiti conventum de Kingeswode, paucos apud Kingeswode relinquentes, abbas cum pluribus transtulit se ad Haseldene sic tenentes utrumque locum. Et quoniam aquæ penuriam habebant apud Haseldene, secundò transtulit illos Reginaldus de sancto Walerico ad locum qui dicitur Tettebiria quem et dedit illis. Conquerente autem Rogero de Berkeley, hærede scilicet Willielmi de Berkeley, quod Kingeswode quæ prius abbatia fuerat, et ad id à prædecessore suo data, quasi grangia teneretur de Tettebiria volente eo, aut fundum suum recipere aut conventum illuc revocari, rogatu regis qui id volebat sed et petitione capituli Cistercii concessit ut Kingeswode grangia esset de Tettebiria; ita tamen ut apud Kingeswode ab uno sacerdote monacho privatim continuè missa celebraretur. Ob hoc datis sibi à monachis xxvij. marcis argenti et dimidium, sicut de hoc ejusdem Rogeri carta testatur, et filio suo qui adhuc superest unum chacorem, aut unam marcam argenti, qui et ipse carta sua donum prædecessorum suorum et patris sui cum monachis conventionem testatur et confirmat.

Et hoc totum regis charta confirmatum est. Postea verò missam illam, proprio altari ad eam deputato, idem Rogerus in abbazia celebrari promisit rogatu generalis capituli, sicut literæ ipsius capituli ad hoc testantur.

Omnibus autem hiis ita se habentibus, habitum est capitulum in Anglia apud Kirchkeste de ubi inter cæteros coabbates suos fuerunt Philippus abbas Elemosinæ, et Henricus abbas Waverleye, et Paganus abbas de Tettebiria, ibique pro sedanda controversia quadam, quæ versabatur inter abbatem Elemosinæ et abbatem Waverleye, quæ unde vel qualis fuerit ipsi melius sciunt, concessum fuit abbati Waverleye, ut apud Kingswode abbatiam ædificaret quæ jam grangia fuit abbas de Tettebiria, concessu fundatoris et confirmatione regis, sicut cartæ eorum testantur; abbate Elemosinæ interducente ad hoc Paganum abbatem de Tettebiria ut illud concederet, qui erat homo simplex et nullius astutiæ; compositionem quandam facientes inter de possessiones ecclesiæ de Tettebiria quæ et tenuis erat in possessionibus et vix in toto suo stare poterat parcientes; et pro libitu suo quod suum erat non dividentes. Hoc autem totum factum est nesciente nec assentiente conventu de Tettebiria et sine conscientia et consensu patris abbatis scilicet de Tynterna: quibus postea reclamantibus et contradicentibus, res in litem vocata est, et super ea diu litigatum etiam in præsentis capitulo; tandem, convenientibus quamplurimis abbatibus in unum apud Kingswode, judiciaria determinatione, abbas Waverleye quatuor monachos quos ad Kingswode transmiserat cum eo quod suum erat ad se revocavit, et Kingswode sicut fuerat in grangiam de Tettebiria reducta est. Supersunt adhuc multi monachi, conversi, clerici, laici, et Rogerus fundator de Kingswode qui hiis omnibus interfuerunt. Et quoniam locus angustus erat apud Tettebiriam, et minus sufficiens ad positionem abbatiae, maximè quia ligna ad arandum non habebant, nisi de bosco de Kingswode qui longè erat, Bernardus de sancto Walerico fundator ecclesiæ de Tettebiria, accepit à Rogero de Berkeley fundatore de Kingswode, mediante homagio suo, quadraginta acras terræ apud Mireforde, qui locus confinis est et conterminus terræ de Kingswode, et transtulit illuc abbatiam suam de Tettebiria sicut exinde utriusque cartæ testantur; in quo loco abbatia adhuc posita est: et sic xxvii. annis aut eo ampliùs Tynterna abbatiam illam sicut revera filiam suam quam ædificavit, et totiens transplantavit, multos provincia sibi defundans labores, tenuit in pace ab omni calumpnia, donec abbas de Waverle in generali capitulo, cui non interfui ego abbas de Tynterna, neque aliquis qui pro me aperiret os ad reclamandum de re antiquata, et abbatem, judiciaria determinatione sopita, novam disposuit querelam, ostendens quædam scripta facta sine conscientia et assensu conventus de Tettebiri, cujus grangia et tunc temporis fuit Kingswode, et abbatis et conventus de Tynterna, ad quem spectat locus ille ratione filialitatis: jussumque est à capitulo ne abbas Elemosinæ conventionem factam inter abbatem Elemosinæ et illum Waverle exequeretur et teneret capitulo fortè pro tractu temporis, non reducendo ad memoriam quid super hoc factum sit in diebus antiquis. Abbas Elemosinæ abbatiam nostram translata de Tettebiria ad Mireforde, qui est confinis et conterminus terræ de Kingswode, unde et abbatia pro loci vicinitate; et quia nominatior est Kingswode, quam Mireforde accepit et nomen ejus, cum abbate et conventu nostro contradidit abbati de Waverle plùs ut nobis videtur invitatus voluntati quam rationi, cum scripta illorum nullam faciant mentionem præter de loco de Kingswode in quo priùs abbatia posita fuit, qui et tunc fuit grangia abbatiae de Tettebiria, et adhuc est grangia translata abbatiae de Tettebiria, quæ est ad Mireford; an dicta sunt hæc coram iudicibus à capitulo sub hac causa delegatis et super hoc oculi nostri, videant equitatem.

Volo vos non ignorare me concessisse et carta mea confirmasse illud caritatis donum quod pro patris mei regis Henrici animæ redemptione, et prædecessorum suorum remedio Willielmus de Berchele contulit abbatiae de Tynterna; scilicet, totam Kingswode, et quicquid deinceps ipsius abbatiae cristicolis de suo collaturus est. Carta R. de Berckley.

NOTUM sit fidelibus omnibus quod ego R. de Berckley concessi regis et rogatu, sed et petitione capituli Cistercii, consensu quoque conjugis meæ et hæredis mei, concessi monachis de Kingswode, misertus paupertatis eorum, transferre abbatiam suam de feodo meo quam antecessores mei fundaverunt; hoc tenore, ut manerium illud, scilicet Kingswode remaneat illis liberum et quietum ab omnibus serviciis secularibus, et querelis sicut prius fuit, stante ibi abbatia. Ita tamen, ut ibi ab uno sacerdote monacho missa continuè privatim celebretur, simque particeps omnium beneficiorum translatae abbatiae tanquam fundator, et omnium abbatiarum Cisterciensis ordinis, tam ego quam conjux mea et hæres meus, cum antecessoribus et successoribus meis. Ipsi autem monachi ut meliorem gratiam invenirent apud me, dederunt mihi viginti septem marcas et dimidiam et filio meo unum cacorem vel unam marcam, et manutenebo eos pro posse meo sicut fundator. Et si forte quolibet modo redierint, reddam eis, quantum dederunt ad suum placitum. Hanc pacationem me servaturum fide firma. Testes, &c.

Carta G. Abbatis Cistercii.

[Ibid.]

FRATER G. Cistercii dictus abbas, totusque abbatiae conventus in generali capitulo congregatus, domino R. de Berckley, salutem quæ est in Christo Jesu cum devotis orationibus. Magnas misericordiæ Dei referimus gratias qui dedit in corde vestro pauperum suorum curam, et magnam, sicut audivimus, in ordinem nostrum devotionem, quam abbatiam de Kingswode translata pia solitudine fovetis et defenditis, et in omnibus prout possibilitas vestra permittat promovetis. Unde universi ordinis nostri orationes vestrae salutis curam agunt, et sine memoria vestri ad aures divinitatis non ascendunt; ut autem prædictum devotionis vestrae sacrificium sincerum, et sine omni fermento conspectui divinæ pietatis offeratur, obsecramus vos et monemus ut de missa illa cotidiana quam in Kingswode celebrandum statuistis, nostrum audiat consilium, et eandem missam, proprio altari ad eam deputato, in abbazia celebrari permittatis. Videtur enim nobis salutem vestram non esse congruum ut aliquid per vos et propter vos à fratribus nostris fiat quod consuetudini ordinis nostri non conveniat. Porro si super hoc vobis non placuerit nostro consentiri consilio, concedimus interim ut pactum vestrum vobis teneatur, ne in aliquo vestram exacerbare videamur caritatem: diligimus enim vos tanquam fratrem nostrum et omnia quæ honori et salutem vestram competerint non minus devotè quam debitè exequi, viribus nostris parati sumus. Præterea dextra in sublevando sedula, in dando munifica omnem in desiderio sancto querulam excludit repulsam; inde, ne in hoc negotio ulla tumultuetur opacitas, rem ex integra majestati vestræ intimari juravimus. Henricus Rex Anglorum patruo nostro Rogero de Berkeley certi pretii taxatione terram quandam absque calumpnia sibimet reservatam dedit, condicione tali quatenus eam religioni horum alteri profitenti monachatum, scilicet seu canonicatum sanciret. Sed quoniam hic idem morte præventus est, memor tum propositi, illam nobis condicione præfata legavit. Et ne inde ulla imposterum exactio violens posset inferri, regis præfati munimento, præsentiae vestræ delato, confirmavit. Nos itaque voluntate ejus supplentes ordini Cisterciensi, quia cæteris in sanctitate præponderare nobis visus est, terram illam ab patruo scilicet hoc sine vobis legatam ad abbatiæ fundandam concessimus. Proinde vestra eidem ordini auctoritas moderetur cautelam, quatenus idem ratam habeatur et constans et ne ejus rei ulla possit dissolutio uspiam inveniri, precamur benevolenciæ vestræ gratiam, quatenus auctoritate apostolica corroboretur, ut siquis exactionis ejuslibet, aut etiam detrimenti calumpnia molitus, Romano insuper privilegio versuciam conetur inferre, anathematis gladio percussus absistat. Pipewell Abbey, in Northamptonshire.

PIPEWELL, anciently also called the Abbey of St. Mary de Divisis, is stated by Tanner to have been founded in 1143. The annals of Louth Park give 1141 as the year. Bridges, however, speaks with less certainty; he says, early in the reign of Henry II. or at the end of King Stephen's, William Batevileyn founded here an abbey for Cistercian monks, dedicated to the honour of the Virgin Mary.^a The eastern part of it was situated on the fee of Geytington, of the gift of Ralph, earl of Chester; and the western part on the fee of Wahul, given by the founder, who endowed it with seven virgates of the same fee. All the land which he possessed within or without the township of Pipewell on the site of the abbey, or adjoining to it, had been an Hermitage,^b which with the contiguous grounds, was confirmed to the convent by Becket, archbishop of Canterbury. In the earliest charters after its foundation, it had the name of St. Mary de Divisis, either because it stood on two distinct fees, or because its demesnes lay on both sides of Harper's brook, which divided the hundreds of Rothwell and Corby.

"Not long after the convent was erected,^c William Flemyng, at the instigation of the devil," so the Register asserts, "laid claim to that part of the foundation standing on the fee of Wahul, and disturbed the monks in their possession of it. To prevent any future dispute, Robert, the son of William Batevileyn, gave the said William Flemyng four virgates in Cotesbroc, in exchange for this land in Pipewell.

"Richard I. at the beginning of his reign, on setting out towards the holy land, assembled here a general council^d of the nobility and clergy, Baldwin archbishop of Canterbury, and other bishops, abbats, and priors, being present, when he gave to Geoffrey de Luci the bishoprick of Winchester, and disposed of other ecclesiastical preferments. Here was then consecrated John bishop elect of Uthitherne, by John archbishop of Dublin. In this council, Hugh de Pusac bishop of Durham, and William earl of Albemarle, were appointed chief justices of England, and joined with William Marischal, Geoffrey Fitz Pierre, and others, in the regency of the kingdom. Ralph de Glanvil, though much advanced in years, solicited at the same time the king's permission to go to Jerusalem.

"One of the earliest benefactors to this monastery was Ranulph, earl of Chester, who, beside the ground on which part of the building stood, gave the monks his wood of Michlehae, and confirmed lands and a wood in Stokes, which had been given them by William de Albin.^e This William de Albin gave them also a portion of land named Pikmede, lying between the abbey and the high road leading from Rokingham to Northampton, with a right to erect, and maintain, a bridge of two arches, forty-eight feet long, and sixteen feet wide, over a stream running between Longwong and Pikmede.^f Hugh de Redmild was a benefactor to them of his lands in Pippewell held of the honour of Belvoir, which gift was afterwards confirmed by Peter de Lincoln.^g About the same time, Robert Fitz-Hugh de Pipewell endowed the convent with his possessions in Pipewell, of the inheritance of Osmund his brother, to whom, in exchange, he gave lands in Karleton, with the advowson of the church; which benefaction was afterwards confirmed by Elias the son of Osmund de Karleton. To these donations are to be added those of Peter and Livina de Redmild; of Osmund and Ivetta his wife, who were inhabitants of Pipewell, and gave up part of their possessions when the monastery was founded. On the death of Peter de Redmild without children, his wife Livina, reserving to herself the house in which she dwelt, gave up all her other estate here, on condition to be supplied by the monks with all necessities during life; and, after her decease, Henry Fitz-Mabel de Cotesbroch, grandson and heir of Hugh de Redmild, bestowed on them the remainder of her inheritance. On the ground where her house stood the monks erected their grange in Pipewell.^a In the thirty-eighth of Hen. III. Ralph son of Elias de Karleton released the convent from all exactions due to Richard earl of Cornwall for their possessions in West Grange, held by the service of half a knight's fee.^b Besides these lands and tenements in Pipewell, by the liberality of Geoffrey de St. Patrick, Baldwin de Ver, Nicholas de Herlawe, who gave them Kingemanneswode assart, and other benefactors, they had large possessions in Deresburg; Reginald rector of Deresburg, in 1246, remitting his claim to all tithes from Kingemanneswode assart and Heyhull.^c Andrew de Riston gave the convent his part of Rahawe Wood and part of Coleshawe Wood to build their grange. For this donation the monks gave Andrew fifteen marks, his son William three marks, Roger half a mark, and his wife a horse.^d Roger Basset endowed them with Rawhawe Grove; Hawisia, wife of William de St. German, with lands in Riston; and Richard, parson of Riston, with the wood of Littlehawe. In Acle, Robert Fitz Launcelin bestowed on the abbey Effhawe, which Simon earl of Northampton confirmed to it. Reginald de Acle, Geoffrey de Argent, and William his son, Simon Malesoures, and Peter de Malesoures, conferred divers lands and the wood of Oldefolde; Thomas Jukel and Emma his wife, West Acle mill; William de Albin, Ralph de Carleton, Richard de Uffington, and divers others, giving up their right of common in Oldefolde, in the twenty-third of Hen. III. the monks obtained of the crown licence to enclose it.^e

"In 1247, Robert Hotot, of Carlton, with several others, released his right in a close near East Grange mill and in Yngwode assart.^f At the same time, William de Newton, Joan wife of Thomas Hoter of Wilharston, Adeline de Stok, Thomas Croyland, William Gryffyn, Ralph Marescal of Wilharston, and William de Medburn, severally remitted their claim to right of common in Yngwode. In Braybroke they had thirteen virgates by the gift of Hugh de Senliz and Emma his wife. This Emma was the elder of two sisters, daughters of Ivo Neufmariche, (Albreda, the younger, being married to Ingebald de Braybroke) and, with her husband, Hugh de Senliz, gave the Knights Hospitallers of Dingle two virgates and four tofts, to supply the said Hugh and Emma with necessary food and ornament for the term of their lives: but these Hospitallers neglecting to perform their agreement, Hugh and Emma made over these lands to the convent of Pipewell on the same conditions; and, having been supported by the monks for twenty-four years, gave them these thirteen virgates, of the honour of Huntingdon, on which they erected a grange and other necessary buildings. Robert son of Ingebald de Braybroke ratified the part his mother Albreda had taken in this exchange. By gift from Henry de Oxendon, the grandson of Hugh and Emma Senliz, they had four virgates in Braybroke; and from Richard de Oxendon, his son, eight virgates and twenty acres of inland in Cold Asheby.^g By benefactions from the family of Pavely, from Hugh Ridell, and Reginald his son, they became possessed of other lands in Braybroke, in Childecote, and Cold Essebi, with large donations in Cold Essebi, where they built a grange, from the liberality of Osbert de Leycestre and the descendants of John de Pavely; and from the same Osbert de Leycestre and Muriel his wife, the church of Eltendon and twenty-three virgates of land, of the fee of Hugh de Poers; and in Wynwyk, by the gift of Sir Randolph de Blukvil, Knight, a marse, with six virgates of land, four carucates of oxen, six horses, and six hundred sheep, of the greater hundred; for which benefaction the monks gave him forty marks of silver.^h

"All these donations, with the gifts of many other benefactors, were confirmed by charter from Henry II.ⁱ who also gave them the land of Benefield, in Rokingham forest,^j which they exchanged with Edward III. for the church of Geytington."^k

Beside the lands and possessions which they were seized of in this county, they had lands in Warwickshire, at Rugby, of the gift of Henry de Rokeby, in Henry the Second's time;^m at Bilton, in the reign of King Stephen, by donation from Walter Fitz Hingan;ⁿ at Church Lawford, in the same reign, the benefaction of Roger Hayrun,^o and at Long Lawford, from John de Stuteville;^p with lands in Dunchurch and Thurlston, and the lordship of Causton, near Dunchurch, by the liberality of Ingelram Clement and Thurchil de Causton.^q Here they erected a grange, which, from the accident of a candle carelessly placed against a wall, was almost destroyed by fire. With these estates, by the donation of many particular persons, they had possessions at Barford, Temysforde, Roxeden, and Stageden, in Bedfordshire, and in the town of Bedford; at Stamforde, and Pipewelle in Holland, in Lincolnshire; with certain small rents in the county of Rutland; and the rectory of Wychambroke, in Suffolk.^r

Pipewell Abbey was founded in a country overgrown with wood, which in course of time became much diminished, to the great impoverishment of the convent. The causes assigned for this impoverishment and decrease were the quantity consumed in the brewhouse, the kitchen, the infirmary, and the east and west granges; where the servants, not content as formerly with thorns and briars, used for necessary business the roots and tops of oak trees. In the next place, several great men, whom they were afraid to oppose, obtained large quantities of timber for their private benefit. Among these, Walter de Langtone, bishop of Chester, and treasurer to Edw. I., had plenty of materials for building a sumptuous mansion at Thorp-Watervyle: John de Hotot, the greater part of his materials for rebuilding his manor-house at Bramtone: Henry de Stokes, official of Northampton, timber for erecting and repairing houses in Stokes, and his church of Ravensthorpe: Thomas de Latymer, of Braybroke, a grant of wood to build a large chamber; and Stephen Brown, for a new parsonage-house at Deseborough: with much timber consumed in raising and repairing granges, granaries, mills, and other buildings belonging to the abbey. A third cause was clandestine alienations and private sales; with great numbers of people, who came daily and nightly to plunder the woods in Deseborough, Stoke, Wilberstone, Carleton, Acle, and especially in Ristone. To this decrease, not a little contributed by different sales in the time of these four abbats, John de Hillum, Richard de Heyham, Andrew de Royewell, who raised only ten marks; and Thomas de Thokerington, who cut down in Personeswood, so called from Richard Persoun, of Ristone, the former possessor, to the amount of eight pounds of silver: with several falls for sale in Sywardeslunt, Bassetshawe, and Inwode, in 1315, Thomas de Thokerington being then abbat; in Littlehawe, Persones-wode, and the noble wood of Oldeforde, in 1316, and in 1322, in Southwode, in the time of abbat William de Lalleford. And lastly, this scarcity was increased by converting the woodlands into tillage; Coleshawe, Rahage, and Effhawe woods being entirely cleared, and Wilberston-Stokynge and Pykemedede grubbed up in the twenty-first year of Hen. III. From these circumstances, under a pretence of poverty, the monks, in a general chapter in 1323, resolved to abandon the abbey. It was, however, soon re-established,^a THOMAS, as appears from the Register, being appointed abbat of the new monastery.^b who have presided here, we have been able to collect the following names:

ROGER occurs in 1193,^c who was probably succeeded by WILLIAM, whom we meet with in 1205. His successor seems to have been

ROBERT, who sat here in 1211. Whether he died in his office, or quitted it by cession, we do not find; but his name is mentioned in 1231: and then occurs

RICHARD in 1235, who appears to have had

ROBERT, his successor, in 1239. It is not clear how long he governed, but in 1246 we find

WILLIAM in this station; to whom succeeded, we suppose, in 1254,

ROBERT DE NEWBOLD; after whom, in course of succession, comes

THOMAS DE GRAFTON, who quitting the abbey in 1279, the government of it devolved on

JOHN DE HILLUM,^d who received his benediction from

Oliver Sutton, bishop of Lincoln, in 1280, and gave it up in 1294, to his successor

RICHARD DE HEYHAM,^e who presided four years, and left it to

ANDREW DE ROYWELL. He held it about ten years; THOMAS DE THOKERINGETON occurring in 1308, and resigning it to

WILLIAM DE LALLEFORD, of whom mention is made in 1322, but the year following a general chapter was held under abbat

NICHOLAS, when the revenues of the convent being greatly sunk, the monks determined to quit the place. It did not, we apprehend, continue long deserted, but it does not appear who was the restorer or second founder of it. Soon after occurs

THOMAS, the first abbat of the new monastery; but whether this was Thomas de Thokerington, who was re-elected to the government, is not easy to determine. It is said, too, that

WILLIAM DE LALLEFORD, by virtue of the king's writ, received this office at the hands of William le Merse, a monk of the new monastery. In 1367

JOHN, abbat of Pipewell, granted a yearly pension of xls. to the bishop of Lincoln, in lieu of the profits that would accrue to him during a vacancy of the church of Geydyngton.^f In 1405

JOHN DE COVENTRE, a different person we imagine from the former, had the rule of this house,^g which, on the next vacancy, was supplied by

STEPHEN DE RYSSHTON.^h He vacated it by death in 1435, when the convent elected

WILLIAM GREYN, a monk of the house, his successor. He probably made room by death for

THOMAS WESTON, who, in 1483, was in possession of this office.ⁱ From henceforward we meet with no other abbats till 1510, when John Walker, parson of Clendon, entered into an agreement with

ROBERT STAMFORD, who had then the government of this monastery. In 1535

THOMAS LENTON, was abbat^j when the estimate of its revenues was taken by the king's commissioners. Four years afterwards, in the thirtieth of Hen. VIII.

THOMAS GYLLAM, abbat, with the convent, consisting of thirteen monks, surrendered the monastery, with all its lands, rents, and possessions, into the hands of the crown.^m

By the Survey of its estates and possessions in 1535, 26 Hen. VIII. the yearly profits arising from them to the monastery were valued at 347*l.* 0*s.* 8½*d.*; from which being deducted 63*l.* 19*s.* 0¾*d.* in rents resolute, fees to officers and servants, pensions to the bishop, dean, and chapter of Lincoln, and in salaries to stipendiary capellans, the clear value was 283*l.* 1*s.* 7¾*d.*.ⁿ In the first year of Edw. VI. William, Marquis of Northampton, obtained a grant of East Grange and West Grange, with the woods Rawhawe, Crabtree-hill, Oldfelde, Youngwood, Grange-park, and other woods, lately belonging to Pypwell Abbey, then in the hands of the crown.^o This grant was confirmed to him in the second year of Queen Elizabeth.^p Shortly afterwards they reverted to the crown; and in the seventeenth of the same reign the site of the monastery and granges were given to John Dudley and John Ayscough in exchange for lands in other places.^q

When Bridges wrote, a Mr. Lebas, by purchase from the Duke of Powis, was lord of Pipewell.

a few Charters of Pipewell Abbey; but the REGISTERS of greatest importance are the Cottonian Manuscripts, Calig. A. xii. and xiii. and Otho, B. xiv. The titles under which the charters are arranged will be found in the note below.^a

Another Register of this abbey is preserved among the Duke of Buckingham's Manuscripts at Stow; Press III. N°. LXXXIV.^b

An impression of the COMMON SEAL of this abbey has been communicated to the Editors of this work by Mr. Baker, of Northampton. It represents the Virgin and Child seated, having on each side of them a niche with the head of a monk, in a Gothic arch below is an abbat with his crozier. Legend. s. co'e . ABBATIS . ET . CONVENTUS . sc'e . MARIE . DE . PIPEWELLE.

Near the woods of East and West Grange foundations of old buildings still point out the site of the abbey. The church is supposed to have stood upon the south, on what is now called the Hall-hollow. In Bridges's time several large wrought pillars, glazed tiles, fragments of painted glass, and a small mutilated figure of the Virgin Mary, were found near the ruins.

In the Cottonian MS. Otho, B. xiv. fol. 195, the church, cemetery, cloister, and chapter-house of Pipewell are stated to have been dedicated on the 5th of the kalends of March, 1311, in the time of Abbat Thokerington, Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, with one or two other of the greater barons, attending the ceremony.

per iudices ordinis inter partes datos, altercatione partium sopita, monachi de Gerudonia ad proprium monasterium sunt reversi, monachique Novi-Monasterii ibi tunc pacificè ædificare cœperunt, et in eodem loco usque ad diem ultimum in laboribus magnis Domino gubernante permanserunt. Hinc est quod propter divisionem istorum monachorum dicunt quidam supradicta abbatia primò vocabatur sancta Maria de Divisis, sed quorum opinionibus standum est pro certo nescitur. De secundo vocabulo non est dubium, sed certum est quod ubi West-grangia sita est fuit quædam villa quæ à quodam fonte nomen Pipewelle accepit, indeque abbatia nomen secundum assumpsit, quod manet usque in hodiernum diem. Quæ quidem abbatia in prima fundatione sua inter nemora pulcherrima frondosa sita fuit atque condensa, quæ nunc velut quercus defluentibus foliis sicut avis ad coquinam quæ deplumata stat ex omni parte nuda.

In prima fundatione monachi, atque conversi, in locis perquisitis arbores diversas cotidie plantare cœperunt, nemoque sua quæ magnis tribulationibus ac laboribus sumtuosis à diversis personis adquisierunt sicut mater unicum amat suum filium tenerè dilexerunt. Quamobrem unam carectam cotidianam cum duobus hominibus fortissimis ad cariandum spinas et tribulos pro pistrino et bracino ordinarunt. Talis verò carecta re et nomine dicebatur in lingua materna Thorn-carte. Item ordinarat ligniferos ad portandum cotidie siccum boscum et mortuum veteresque radices quercuum ad dorsum in quodam instrumento ad hoc subtiliter aptato. Fueruntque in diversis locis tot ligniferi; videlicet ad bracinum j. ad hospicium et ad coquinam conventus j. ad coquinam abbatis j. ad infirmitorium monachorum j. ad infirmitorium conversorum j. ad infirmitorium secularium j. ad grangiam de Est j. ad grangiam de West j. Tot ligniferi annuatim fuerunt tunc præsentati coram ministris forestæ, ante tempus defensionis ad præstandum juramentum de Vert et de Venisoun tantum. Postea verò per incrementa temporum diversorum abbatum translata est carecta spinea ad decapitationem quercuum, quæ nunquam revertebatur ad spinas et tribulos cariandum quamdiu boscus duravit. Omnesque ligniferi à bajulatione sicci bosci et mortui paulo post fuerunt suspensi. Et cum infra abbatiam vel in duabus grangiis focalia habere voluerunt et præcipue tempore hyemali, cum securibus in manibus nunc ad radices quercuum nunc ad capita earundem velociter cucurrerunt. Sicque per focalia annuatim de quercubus sumpta inceperunt nemora sanctæ Mariæ de Pipewella indes pejorari ac diminuire. Nec mirum, quia omnes quercus semel per capitis detruncationem absceisæ nunquam postea in altum se extollere potuerunt nec vigere. Hæc fuit prima causa destructionis boscorum de Pipewella.

Causa secunda destructionis boscorum fuit per literas et minas potentum magnatum, quibus propter majus periculum non audebant abbates resistere, quia divitum terror semper sibi exigit honorem. Verbi gratia, dominus Walterus de Langetone, quondam episcopus Cestriæ, thesauriusque Edwardi boni regis Angliæ habuit electionem meremii in boscis de Pipewella pro quodam ædificio magno et sumptuoso quod ipse fecit apud Thorp-watervyle. Johannes de Hotot, qui fuit quasi altera manus dicti episcopi habuit de prædictis boscis majorem partem grossi meremii pro manerio suo de Bramtone pulcherrimo, de novo construendo. Magister Henricus de Stokes quondam officialis Northamptoniæ per quantum tempus vitam duxit in humanis, habuit meremium pro ædificio domorum et emendatione apud Stokes, et apud ecclesiam suam de Ravensthorpe, nec audebant abbates eidem resistere, quia aut pro denariis, aut pro bladis semper fuerunt abbates in daungerio dicti officialis: Thomas le Latymer de Braybrok, habuit cumulum magnæ cameræ suæ apud Braybrok, de meremio abbatis et conventus. Stephanus Broun habuit magnam partem meremii pro illo novo ædificio quod ipse fecit in personagio de Deseborough. Persona de Herlestone habuit meremium pro una camera quam fecit et plantavit frater Thomas carpentarius, sanctæ Mariæ de Pipewella. Præterea non fuit in patria, aula, camera, orreum, molendinum venticium sive aquaticum alicujus valoris plantata sine adminiculo aliquo boscorum sanctæ Mariæ de Pipewella. Et quot virgæ molendinorum venticiorum dabantur in temporibus diversorum abbatum nemo novit nisi Deus cui omnia patent. De causa secunda tantum.

Causa tertia destructionis boscorum fuit in constructione et emendatione domorum infra abbatiam et extra, utpote in grangiis, orreis, bercariis, molendinis aquaticis et venticiiis, per vices, in cotagiis et aliis necessariis per multorum annorum revolutiones. Est autem causa ista utilis et approbanda.

Causa quarta fuit in furtivis alienationibus, donationibus, et privatis venditionibus, verbi gratia; ante dispersionem monachorum fuit semper unus conversus eques custos boscorum, et habuit sub ipso forestarios tres pedites, una cum pagiiis eorum. Et quando venerunt ballivi seu forestæ ministri vel assisores patriæ qui locum tenuerunt in assisis et in inquisitionibus coram justiciariis domini regis, aliquid petentes deficiente pecunia in communi bursa, ad custodem boscorum aliquando pro uno quercu, et aliquando pro duobus mittebantur. Et nichilominus per multorum annorum revolutionem ante domus dispersionem, supradictus conversus levavit annuatim de bosco per præceptum superiorum suorum mercedes autumpnales et aliquando hyemales pro carucariis grangiarum de Est et West. Et in hujusmodi donationibus venditionibusque privatis præfati custodes, curialitate aliqua mediante, aliquid addiderunt, quia ut dicebatur quod per proprios forestarios nostros in bosco per vices mala multa facta fuerunt. Insuper in Deseborug, Stoke, Wilberstone, Carleton, Acle, et præcipuè in Ristone die noctuque fuerunt raptores qui nunquam ad boscum sanctæ Mariæ de Pipewella accedere causa deprædandi cessaverunt, excepto tempore autumpnali. Et malefactores de Ristone aliis operibus negotiisque omissis, de bosco de Pipewella semper vixerunt, nec timuerunt custodes bosci, nec sententiam excommunicationis quæ frequenter trina amonitione præmissa canonica, in hujusmodi malefactores pulsatis campanis candelisque accensis fuit fulminata. Sufficiunt ista de causa destructionis bosci quarta.

Causa quinta incepit per vendiciones cropporum diversarum quercuum in temporibus quatuor abbatum, videlicet Johannis de Hillum, Ricardi de Heyham, Andreæ de Royewell, et Thomæ de Thokerington. Quantam pecuniæ quantitatem pro hujusmodi venditionibus duo primi, videlicet Johannes et Ricardus, receperunt per vices pro certo nescitur, sed Andreæ concessit conventus quod ipse levaret de detruncatione quercuum x marcas tantum. Abbas Thomas levavit per fratrem Ricardum de Bromwyk tunc grangiarum de Est-grangia de decapitatione quercuum in Personeswode viij. l. argenti. Tantum de causa quinta.

Accedamus nunc ad causam sextam quæ omnes causas transcendit suprascriptas, scilicet ad extirpationem bosci per radices factam in diversis locis. Sciendum est carissimi quod super illam culturam terræ arrabilis quæ vocatur Coleshawe juxta Est-grangiam crevit boscus, ut cartæ Andreæ de Ristone qui fuit dominus ad aulam orientalem manifestè testantur. Et inter Coleshawe, et illam terram arabilem quam homines de Bereford tenent de rege, crevit boscus quæ dicebatur Senerodes, prout cartæ Hawisiæ, filiæ Willielmi de Ristone qui fuit filius Andreæ de Ristone testantur. Postea vero Robertus de sancto Germano, qui fuit filius et hæres dictæ Hawisiæ, donationes matris suæ carta sua confirmavit; et nunc tota illa terra, videlicet à divisis camporum de Ristone usque ad illam culturam quam tenent ipsi de Bereford vocatur Coleshawe. Quando verò monachi decreverunt dictos boscos de Coleshawe, et de Senerodes assartare et in agriculturam terram redigere, Simon Basset de Riston, qui fuit dominus ad aulam occidentalem petiit communiam pasturæ in terris supradictis. Et facta est finalis concordia inter partes in curia regis Johannis, anno regni ejus iv. Quære in rubeo libro cartarum inter fines concordales capitulo viij. folio ejusdem primo. Memorandum quod inter abbatiam et grangiam de Est, ex parte aquilonari crevit boscus de Rohawe, et adhuc manent ibi Rohawe-hegges. Et sciendum quod monachi boriales scriperunt in cartis nostris Rahage pro Rohawe. Terram de Rohawe et boscum qui crevit in ea dederunt monachis de Pipewell, Andreas de Ristone, Willielmus filius ejus, et Robertus filius ejusdem Willielmi. Isti successivè domini fuerunt ad aulam orientalem. Et sciendum quod dicti monachi concesserunt præfato Andreæ et hæredibus suis communiam in bosco de Rohawe, pro porcis tempore pannagii quamdiu boscum supradictum extirpare noluerint, ut patet in libro cartarum folio xj. octavi capituli.

Item Reginaldus Basset de Ristone, et Robertus filius ejus, qui fuerunt tunc domini ad aulam occidentalem, dederunt terras suas de Rohawe et boscum qui in eisdem crevit, ut patet in quo supra fol. iv. et v. primi capituli. De terra autem quæ est inter grangiam de Est et Oldefold, ex parte illa, unde fuit vel cuius fuit cartæ non docent, sed in quodam registro antiquo invenitur de Rohawe et Effehawe et quot acras bosci continebant. Et cartæ docent quod Robertus filius Launcelyn de Acle et hæredes sui dederunt monachis de Pipewell, unum nemus quod Effehawe dicebatur, et nemus de Effehawe dominus Symon quondam comes Northamptonæ carta sua confirmavit. Et illud nemus ut creditur crevit super illam terram quæ jacet inter Est grangiam, et illud chimum quod vadit de stagno molendini de Est, ad landam de Banefeld, videlicet sub capite occidentali de Oldefold. De istis terris suprascriptis in quibus crevit boscus de Coleshawe, Senerodes, Rohawe, et Effehawe, non solvimus alicui decimas prædiales nec personales, quia de novalibus à præstatione decimarum per privilegia nostra absoluti sumus. Et sciendum est quod super illam terram quæ nunc dicitur Wilberstone-Pleyne, et in aliis terra quæ dicitur Wilberstone-Stokying in campo West-grangiæ, et in illa terra de Pykemedæ quæ est inter boscum et cursum aquæ hyemalis, videlicet le Waterfal crevit boscus, ideoque jure quo supra non debent illæ terræ decimari. Fuit autem boscus qui crevit in istis tribus locis extirpatus anno regni regis Henrici filii Joannis xxj. Pro istis assartis fuit contentio et distantia maxima inter dominos de Stokes et monachos de Pipewella prout docet liber cartarum capitulo lx. folioque ejusdem iij. et iiij. Tantum de causa vj.

Causa septima destructionis boscorum de Pipewella incepit per venditiones multiplices in quadam placea quæ dicebatur Sywardeslunt quæ jacet inter Deseborug-stokying et longam fossam et spinosam, quæ se extendit in longum de Inwodeheved usque ad boscum de Deseborug, crevit quidam bosculus de quo habetur in libro cartarum capitulo ix. folioque ejusdem primo. Inter Inwodeheved et Basetteshawe crevit quidam boscus qui vocatur Inwode, et vendebatur boscus ille in tempore abbatis Thomæ de Thokerington, videlicet in tempore regis Edwardi filii boni regis Edwardi et anno Domini mcccxxv. ante quam venditionem fuit boscus supradictus detruncatus per abscisionem ramorum. Et tunc voluit præfatus abbas terram illam in qua dictus boscus crevit, particulariter clausisse cum fossa, et in quibus locis incepit fossare patet usque in hodiernum diem, sed malicia vicinorum patriæ noluit tunc ipsum permittere opus incepit finire.

Inter Basetteshawe et abbatiam crevit boscus per abscisionem ramorum detruncatus pui vocabatur Southwode. Et vendebatur boscus qui crevit super illam placeam in tempore abbatis Willielmi de Lalleford. Et in tempore regis Edwardi filii boni regis Edwardi anno gratiæ mcccxxij. infra assartum quod habuimus de rege ex opposito curtillagii versus orientem fuit quædam placea bosci quæ vocabatur Warinnesgore, quia quidam dominus de Clendone nomine Warinus dedit dictam placeam monachis de Pipewella. Sciendum est quod boscus qui crevit in prædicta placea vendebatur in tempore abbatis Thomæ de Thokerington, fuitque postea dicta placea clausa infra assartum quod teneamus de rege et hoc cum maximo dangerio patriæ. Juxta assartum quod tenemus de rege quod vocatur Bettesgrene versus grangiam de Est fuit quidam bosculus qui vocabatur Littleham quem monachi de Pipewella emerunt pro xj. marcis argenti de Ricardo Persoun de Ristone. Et postea mutabatur nomen illius placeæ bosci et dicebatur et dicitur usque in hodiernum diem Personeswode, quia de Ricardo Persoun emebatur. Quæ quidem placea jacet inter cauceam quæ est juxta le Harperesbrok, et se extendit in longum usque ad boscum Roberti Lovet, et in latum se extendit illa fossa assarti quæ est juxta Betesgrene, versus occidentem, videlicet ad quandam goram regis quæ jacet juxta boscum Roberti de Ristone. Et inter goram regis et præfatam placeam quæ dicebatur Personeswode, adhuc manet quidam cursus aquæ hyemalis sed tortuosus quia non linialiter currit. Et ut breviter dicam, bosculus de Personeswode prius vendebatur per abscisionem ramorum in tempore abbatis Thomæ de Thokerington ut supra scriptum est, et postea residuum dicti bosculi vendebatur in tempore abbatis Willielmi de Lalleford. De emptione non de venditione dicti bosci patet in libro cartarum capitulo viij. folio ejusdem x. In illo loco juxta Est grangiam qui vocatur le Park vendebatur certus numerus quercuum in tempore præfati abbatis Willielmi.

In Oldefold fuit boscus pulcherrimus et condensus sine detruncatione ramorum seu cropporum quem habuerunt monachi de dono Galfridi Argent de Acle, et de dono Willielmi Argent, Saræ Argent, et Petri Malesoueres, et ut patet in libro cartarum capitulo j. folio ejusdem j. et vj. quære. Vendebatur boscus de Oldefold in tempore abbatis Thomæ de Thokerington et in tempore regis Edwardi filii boni regis Edwardi anno Domini mcccxvj. et xvij. excepto quodam angulo versus orientem, qui postea vendebatur in tempore abbatis Willielmi de Lalleford pro decem marcis. Sciendum est carissimi quod isti duo abbates quorum unus alteri in onere successit non in honore, in maximis augustiis et pressuris tunc temporis fuerunt quas nisi per hujusmodi boscorum venditiones evasisse minimè potuerunt. Quorum culpa fuit in causa novit Deus. In illo clauso in quo vaccaria una cum crofto suo sita est crevit boscus pulcherrimus. Et in quadam placea in campo West-grangiæ quæ nunc est terra arabilis, videlicet contra Caperoneswolde crevit quidam bosculus qui vocabatur Lettlehawe quem habuerunt monachi ex dono Willielmi Boutevileyn. Et in multis aliis locis in quibus nunc est terra arabilis et quorum noticiam non habemus, crevit boscus, et præcipuè in campis West-grangiæ.

Memorandum quod omnia nemora suprascripta ante tempus dispersionis fuerunt consumpta atque destructa, videlicet infra novies viginti annos quia à prima domus foundatione usque ad dispersionem triennalem tot anni fluxerunt tantum.

Post dispersionem prætextu paupertatis in dicta domo factam, ista adhuc fuerunt nemora sanctæ Mariæ crescentia quæ sequuntur nominanda, videlicet de capite de Rohawedick per albam crucem et per divisas de Asketeshawe, et sic per fossam de Pekemedæ usque ad Wilberstonepleyns in longum ex parte una, et de cornerio orientali muri abbatiæ ex parte altera usque ad vaccariam. Et per fossam quæ cingit croftum vaccariæ usque ad fossam quæ est inter Caperoneswode et terram arabilem quæ vocatur le Berwes usque ad boscum de Lettlehawe crevit boscus, videlicet Rohawe, Mikelehawe, Cheuscorte, Brodeleye, Caperoneswode.

Inter Wilberstone-pleyne et quandam parvam culturam terræ arabilis fuit quidam bosculus pulcherrimus qui vocabatur Littlehawe quem Hugo de Pipewella dedit monachis, et Robertus dictus Vicecomes donationes Hugonis carta sua confirmavit, ut patet in libro cartarum capitulo 3. fol. ejusdem 3. Inter prædictum bosculum et Merehocforlong crevit boscus de Joungwode. Et sciendum est quod omnes istas particulas boscorum, videlicet de Rohawedick usque Joungwodeheved in longum et in latum dederunt monachis sanctæ Mariæ Willielmus de Albeneya et homines sui, exceptis Rohawe, Mikelehawe, et Littlehawe. Omnesque istas donationes confirmavit Ranulphus comes Cestriæ qui habuit tunc feodum de Geytindona. Et de dicto comite tenebatur aliquando manerium de Stoke-Daubeney. Tot fuerunt nemora quæ modo sunt consumpta.

Adhuc dicetur à diversis personis causas destructionis boscorum Pipewellæ ignorantibus, væ væ illis væ qui destruxerunt nemora Pipewellæ. Melius est carissimi silere quam alicui in oratione malum optare, quia quicumque in oratione aliquibus malum optat, oratio ejus fiet in peccatum, quia in ipsis suis precibus contra conditorem suum pugnat.

Dictum est carissimi de boscorum destructione, de binis nominibus abbatiæ. Nunc autem de situ ejusdem et de diversis infortuniis quæ eidem evenerunt, necnon et de diversis angustiis et pressuris quas alma Christi ecclesia quæ dicitur Pipewella sustinuit ante tempus dispersionis.

In libro cartarum capitulo xlvij. habetur, quod abbatia sita est ex parte orientali super feodum de Geytindona ex dono Ranulphi comitis Cestriæ. Ex parte verò occidentali super feodum de Wahille ex dono Willielmi Boutevileyn qui dictæ abbatiæ primus fundator erat. Hinc est quod post mortem præfati Willielmi fundatoris nostri suadente humanæ salutis æmulo surrexit quidam miles nomine Willielmus Flaming, qui posuit calumpniam super dimidiam partem terræ de Pipewelle quam dederat monachis Willielmus de Boutevileyn. Dicti monachi summa cum festinatione aggressi sunt Robertum Boutevileyn filium et hæredem dicti Willielmi, lacrimosisque querimoniis ipsum consuluerunt quid in tali casu essent facturi. Præfatus Robertus zelo Dei armatus, inspiranteque gratia divina, dedit Willielmo Flaming in excambias iiij. virgatas terræ in Cotesbrok, ita quod monachi bene et pacificè imperpetuum gauderent illis terris in Pipewella quas prius dederat monachis Willielmus pater suus. E contra præfati monachi ex mera voluntate dederunt dicto Roberto Boutevileyn quasdam terras in campo de Cotesbrok quas eis dederat dictus Willielmus Boutevileyn qui ut supradictum est primus fundator erat. Et sciendum est quod hæredes de Boutevileyns tenentur inperpetuum acquietare illas terras de Pipewella de forinseco servicio, videlicet pro dimidio feodo unius militis pertinente ad dominos de Wahille. Deinde post annorum multorum revolutionem accidit quod apud Cotesbrok fuit quidam bonus miles nomine Willielmus qui pro monachis suis in eorum angustiis et pressuris pro posse suo semper stetit quasi murus. Cui successit filius suus et hæres nomine Robertus Boutevileyn qui monachos de Pipewella in multis infestavitque vexavit. Verbi gratia, præfatus Robertus non sano sed Achitophel ductus consilio jure suo hæreditario ut ipse dixit vendicabat perhennationem unius equi stantis in stabulo abbatis quocienscumque et per quantum tempus voluerit. Item petiit annuatim unam robam hyemalem de secta capæ abbatis. Item vendicabat quatuor minutiones per annum infra abbatiam. Item petiit ut canes sui venatici moram facerent infra abbatiam sumptibus monachorum et pro voluntate sua. Item imposuit monachis quod nunquam habuerunt cartam aliquam de fundatione abbatiae nec tunc habuerunt nisi quandam indenturam quæ semel apud Langeport ostensa fuit coram salubri consilio utriusque partis ad quendam diem amoris. Quid ultra? dictus Robertus quadam die misit unum equum apud Pipewellam ad perhennandum quem puer suus duxit in stabulum abbatis, ibique ad præsepe per capistrum equum suum nodavit quibque inconsulto. Tandem istud devenit ad aures abbatis, qui summa cum festinatione consuluit legisperitos quid in tali casu esset ipse factururus. Qui consuluerunt abbati, quod quando puer dicti Roberti adaquaret dictum equum, quod pueri abbatis ipsum una cum equo suo excluderent, et ita factum est. Qui dictum equum ad ostium stabuli abbatis dimisit, et arrepto cornu circumivit abbatiam bis vel ter levando hutesium super abbatem et conventum. Tunc autem per consilium sanum ac salubre ex parte abbatis et conventus ordinatum, duo monachi, videlicet Petrus de Thirnebi, et Robertus de Dunchirche et quidam secularis nomine Henricus de Spalding alique seculares pedites dictum equum apud Cotesbrok duxerunt quodam tempore autumpnali, ibique in quodam stabulo per capistrum ad præsepe domini sui nemine in curia invento firmiter ligaverunt. Quid ultra? vix monachis de curia egressis, supervenerunt de campis homines dicti Roberti, et Henricum de Spalding una cum equo detinuerunt per biduum sive per triduum, videlicet usque adventum dicti Roberti. Tunc Robertus nimio furore repletus minabatur abbati et omnibus monachis quod si ipse aliquos illorum inveniret equites, in instanti equos decaudaret, si verò pedites, personas maletractaret. Qui omnes et singuli quasi alterum Herodem eum timuerunt. Tunc ad instantiam abbatis et conventus fuit dies amoris captus inter partes et tentus in ecclesia de Langeport, nec valere potuit. Postea vero fuit dies secundus assignatus in capella beatæ Mariæ ad portam de Pipewella. Ad quem diem fuerunt ix. milites et alii diversi juris periti. Et tunc in nomine Domini fuit concordia talis inter partes facta, videlicet quod abbas et conventus darent dicto Roberto xl. lib. argenti, et ipse tunc fecit eisdem quandam confirmationem de fundatione abbatiae sigillo suo signatam pro se et hæredibus inperpetuum. Fuitque tunc abbas Thomas de Thokerington. Præfatus Robertus statim adivit guerram Scociæ cum comite Gloucestræ, et ibi cum domino suo solvit mortis debitum in die sancti Johannis Baptistæ anno gratiæ m.ccc.xiiij. Tantum de prima fundatione abbatiae sanctæ Mariæ.

MEMORANDUM quod apud Braybroke fuit aliquando quidam dominus qui tenuit in Braybroke et in parva Boudon feodum unius militis per servitium militare: scilicet apud Braybroke xxj. virgatas terræ, et apud Boudon xv. scilicet de honore de Huntingdon; et ille prædictus dominus tenuit prædictum feodum in capite de Symone de Foxton domino baroniæ de Foxton. Mortuo prædicto domino, descendebant prædicta tenementa jure hæreditario duabus filiabus suis, quarum senior vocabatur Emma, junior verò Awbreia. Seniore autem scilicet Emmam duxit in uxorem Hugo Senliz; qui quidem Hugo et Emma dederunt monachis de Pypewell illum locum in quo grangia de Braybroke sita est, una cum aliis tenementis prout cartæ eorum testantur. Et prædicta Emma prædictum donum viri sui post obitum ejusdem, scilicet in libera viduitate, carta sua confirmavit. Postea verò Henricus de Senliz, filius et hæres prædictorum Hugonis et Emmæ, eorum facta carta sua sigillo suo signata, in perpetuum et puram elemosinam confirmavit. Ista patent in libro cartarum capitulo septimo, folio primo et secundo. Omnia verò tenementa quæ habent prædicti monachi de dono prædictorum Hugonis et Emmæ et Henrici filii et hæredis eorundem in Braybroke, capitales domini confirmaverunt, videlicet Symon de Foxton, Ricardus filius ejus, et Ricardus filius ejusdem Ricardi, ut patet in cartulario quo supra fol. vj. Tantum dictum est de Emma.

Juniorem filiam, scilicet Awbreiam, duxit in uxorem quidam qui dicebatur Ingebaldus, qui genuit ex ea Robertum le May, et Robertus genuit Henricum de Braybroke, Henricus genuit Wiscardum Ledet filium suum et hæredem. Contigit medio tempore quod ultimus Ricardus de Foxton, de quo supra mentionem fecimus, genuit unicum filium nomine Agnetem, quam matrimonio duxit Willielmus Maydewill. Prædicti verò Willielmus et Agnes vendiderunt monachis de Pypewell, wardam, custodiam et maritagium hæredum Wiscardi Ledet de Braybroke pro xl. marcis argenti. Quam quidem venditionem prædicta Agnes de Foxton, post decessum supradicti viri sui, carta sua confirmavit, ut patet libro cartarum cap. xj. folio ejusdem xij. et inde est finis levatus, ut patet inter fines concordales, capite sexto. Mortuo interim Wiscardo Ledet de Braybroke, Waltero filio ejus et hærede infra legitimam ætatem existente monachi seisiverunt prædictum Walterum ratione venditionis prædictæ, cum omnibus tenementis suis, et vendiderunt wardam et maritagium ipsius Walteri dominæ Mariæ matri ejusdem Walteri, pro l. marcis, ut patet inter cartas de Braybroke, per quandam indenturam pluribus sigillis signatam. Iste Walterus genuit duas filias, scilicet Aliciam et Christianam, de quibus post mortem prædicti Walteri, habuerunt monachi iterato wardam et custodiam, et vendiderunt wardam istarum puellarum dominæ Emerencianæ uxori dicti Walteri, et matri eorum pro cc. marcis, ut patet quo supra.

De una istarum puellarum, scilicet Christiana, descendit dominus Thomas le Latimer; Thomas verò genuit Garinum Latimer. De alia filia dicti Walteri, scilicet Alicia, descendit dominus Willielmus Latimer le Riche, et dominus Nicolaus Latimer. Istæ duæ filiae prædicti Walteri divisiverunt inter se terras de Braybroke et parva Boudon. Alicia verò habuit terras de Boudon pro portione sua, quas terras dedit ipsa filio suo juniore, scilicet Nicholao le Latimer. Nicholao verò mortuo in Wasconiâ abbas Nicolaus seisivit redditus et tenementa quæ habuit in Boudon, et tenuit usque ad legitimam ætatem Johannis Latimer filii et hæredis prædicti Nicholai. Insuper dominus Willielmus Latimer filius et hæres dictæ dominæ Aliciæ vendicavit. Pippewell vendicavit. Tandem per sanum consilium fuit inter partes prædictas cordata ita, scilicet quod prædictus dominus Willielmus dedit abbati pro una vice x. marcas. Mortuo interim Johanne Latimer, iterum abbas seisivit tenementa sua in Boudon, et utitur jure suo per omnia, sicut prius, et videtur quod de similibus simile erat judicium, videlicet, sicut de Alicia et hæredibus suis, sic fiat de Christiana sorore sua, et hæredibus suis, scilicet homagium, maritagium, et relevium, &c.

Stoneley Priory in Warwickshire.

STONELEY, or Stanley in Ardern Priory, is stated by Tanner to have been translated from Radmore in Staffordshire, by King Henry the Second in 1154. Its history, however, shall be given as Dugdale has himself detailed it in his Warwickshire.^a He says, "The order of Cistercian Monks being propagated in England, towards the latter end of Henry the their request. To which proposal of hers, they, after some deliberation, assenting, the same place of Radmore was made an abbey, one William, the principal of those religious persons, being elected the first abbat there:^e unto whom Henry, duke of Normandy, son to the said empress, by his charter, granted and confirmed, not only the same Radmore with the appurtenances; viz. Melesho and Wirley for tillage and pasture, as also Hedenesford for pasture and pannage, with liberty to build a church, and such houses as might be fit for their habitation; but gave them the town of Canok, with the appurtenances, and the mill at Wirley, with all things belonging thereto.^f

"Which good work so begun wanted not the bounty of divers other pious men to carry it on; Osbert de Ardern giving them his lordship of Merston;^g William Croc all the right he had in Wirley, to the intent that they would receive him into their fraternity and vouchsafe his body burial there.^h Geoffrey de Clinton three yard land at Werlavestone, and one hide in Radway:ⁱ and Roger de Clinton, bishop of Chester, beforementioned, two hides more in the said town of Radway.^j

"Shortly after which, this new abbat and his monks, not yet well instructed in the Cistercian discipline, requested Hamon, the second abbat of Bordesley in Worcestershire, to send two of his convent to inform them therein. Which being accordingly done, there grew great friendship betwixt these two monasteries, the monks of Bordesley always giving courteous entertainment to those of Radmore whensoever they had occasion to visit their grange at Radway.^k Howbeit at Radmore they continued no more than twelve years: for, finding the foresters not only troublesome, but by their frequent visits, somewhat burthensome also, they became petitioners to King Henry the Second, on the 14th kal. of January, in the very first year of his reign, making use of his mother the empress, their patroness, to mediate, that he would be pleased to translate them to his manor of Stoneley in Warwickshire, and accept of what they had at Radmore in exchange for that place.^l Whereunto the king graciously

First's reign, found, in short time, many pious benefactors in several parts of the kingdom, who bountifully bestowed upon them very large possessions in such places as were most proper for them to seat themselves with least disturbance in their strict and holy rule of serving God: amongst which were the empress and King Stephen; who, though otherwise opposite to each other, yet, in this good work concurred, granting a certain desart, called Redmore, lying in the forest of Canok, in Staffordshire, a mile southwards from Beaudesert, unto Clement and Herve, two devout hermits, with others of their society: as also a certain land called Mellesho, for tillage and pasturing of cattle.^b Which concessions Roger de Clinton, then bishop of Chester, not only confirmed, but gave them liberty to betake themselves to what regular life soever, they, through God's direction, should make choice of; and to receive and instruct any such women, who, having devoted their lives to God's service, should do the like.^c

"But, after they had found what molestation they had by the foresters, who, riding frequently that way, much disturbed their devotions, they humbly besought the said empress that she would vouchsafe to change their seat.^d Whereupon, having a great affection to the Cistercian order, she told them, if they would undergo that Rule, she would grant yielding, they came from Radmore, and first seated themselves where the grange of Cryfield now stands, the inhabitants thereof then removing to Hurst:^a but finding inconvenience there, in regard it was so near the public road way, they made choice of another place, a little below the confluence of Sow and Avon, almost environed with the river;^b having that thick wood called Echels^c on the north, and then began the foundation of their church; whereof the first stone being laid id. Apr. anno 1154,^d scil. 1 Hen. II. the churchyard was consecrated by Walter Durdent, bishop of Coventry,^e with the assent of the prior and canons of Kenilworth, to whom the parish church of Stoneley appertained: upon condition that the said monks should no way diminish the rights due to the said church of Stoneley, but make just payment of all tithes to the same, for such grounds as they should till within that parish:^f all of which the said King Henry by his charter confirmed.^g

"And to the end that these monks should have Stoneley entire, the said king gave command by his precept to the sheriff of the county, to assign the freeholders there, as much land in value, in other places, by way of exchange for that they had here.^h But there being a custom among the Cistercian monks, that no new monastery of the same rule, should without licence of the next adjacent abbey of that order be erected; these, upon their translation hither, were constrained to come to an agreement with the monks of Combe; who conditioned with them, upon yielding such their licence, that if they had a mind to erect any granges, or remove the site of their abbey, the monks of Stoneley should not hinder them. Which agreement was made in the presence of the abbats of Waverley, Bordesley, and Meredale, in anno 1155, 1 Hen. II.ⁱ

"At the time when this monastery was so founded, there were in the manor of Stoneley sixty-eight villans, four bordarii (that is, freeholders), and two priests; all which held thirty carucates of land (as is expressed in Domesday Book); as also four bondmen, or servants, whereof each held one mess. and one quartrone of land, by the services of making the gallows and hanging of thieves: every one of which bondmen was to wear a red clout betwixt his shoulders, upon his upper garment; to plow twice a year, to reap as oft, that is to say, at the two bederipes; to give aid to the lord at the feast of St. Michael; to make the lord's malt, and to do other servile work.^k

"As for the particulars that the monks held in demesne, and otherwise, 7 Edw. I. I refer my reader to the record,^l not accounting it necessary to insert it here, having spoken so fully already of their possessions. But it seems that the king did not quit his total interest in Stoneley to the monks upon the foundation of this abbey: for I find that the sheriff of Warwickshire in 15 Hen. II. accounted 29s. 9d. for pannage of the woods:^m and in 19 Hen. II. received 40s. from those men which held the assarts.ⁿ As also in 27 Hen. II. 55s. for perquisites here.^o Nay his officers and foresters to the beginning of King John's time, did so insult, as that they alledged all was his, notwithstanding what King Henry his grandfather had given them by his charter before specified. And so far were the privileges which belonged to the monks within this their manor of Stoneley slighted, that upon any suit betwixt the tenants, or against the abbat, all writs were directed to the king's bailiffs; so that William de Tyso the then abbat, considering these grievances, and the further dangers to them which were imminent enough, repaired to the king, and for two hundred marks and two white palfreys got a confirmation of his father's charter,^p with a grant of the woods of Wethele, and the easarts at Hurst, for which they had wont to be paid yearly into the Exchequer 29s. which charter bears date 12th May, 5 Joh. and yet thought they not themselves sure: for in the 11th Hen. III. they gave the king fifteen marks to confirm his father's grant.

"But I come now to the chief of their other benefactors, resolving to speak more fully of them, and of what they gave in the particular places where the lands so given did lye. These were Stephen de Segrave who gave all his land of Bericote with the manor house.^q Geoffrey de Langley, the manor of Staverton.^r Hugh de Arden, lands in Rotley.^s Robert de Broc, lands in Radway.^t Sir Thomas de Ednesoure, Knight, all his lands in Hull juxta Wotton.^u Geoffrey Savage, and Sir William Whelton, Knight, Yartford miln^v (standing upon the little torrent near Gate-bridge). Richard Trussell, one mesuage in Loxley.^w Thomas de Arden, the church of Rotley.^x John de Mercote, lands in the said Rotley, and Radway.^y Robert de Waldene, moro in Radway.^z

"In all which, the privileges which these monks had, were very many and great: viz. free-warren, infangthef, outfanthef, weyfs, strays, goods of felons and fugitives, tumbrell, pillory, sok, sak, toll, theam, amerciements for murders, assise of bread and beer; with a mercate and fair in the town of Stoneley: which lordship was to answer for xii. before the king's justices or coroner: and the tenants thereof (that is freeholders) to plead the writ of right according to the custom of the manor; having assise of fresh force against such as should disseise them without a writ.^{aa} And moreover that the king's officers might not take distresses, nor make any attachment within the same, without the bayliff of the manor. As also that the lord and his tenants of the same manor should be free from payment to the county or hundred courts; from murders: aid to the sheriff, and coming to his turn; from all common amerciements of toll, pontage, passage, and murage throughout England; and from payment of the expences to the knights for the shire sent to parliament.^{ab} Which mercate, fair, and free-warren were granted to them by King Edward the First, as his charter, bearing date at Caernarvon 27th May, in the 12th year of his reign, testifieth; viz. the mercate on Thursday in every week; and the fair yearly to last for eight days, beginning on the eve of the Nativity of St. John Baptist.^{ac} But the tenants within the liberties of Stoneley, for as much as it was antient demense of the crown, were to pay tallage to the monks as oft as the king had tallage of the like manors: the particular sums then due from the town of Stoneley, and from the hamlets anciently belonging thereto, being these: Stonle. 20s. 6d. ob. q.; Fynham, 10s. 3d. q.; Hull, 19s. 7d. q.; Flechamsted, 18s. 9d. ob.; Canle, 16s. 4d. ob.; Melburn, 10s. 1d.; Crulefeld, 16s.; Hurst, 18s. 5d. ob.; Staverton, 19s. 7d. q.—Total 7l. 9s. 9d. ob.;^{ad} which aid in 36 Hen. III. upon the king's transfretation into Gascoign, the abbat of Stonle had, as appears by the king's mandate to the sheriff of this county.^{ae}

"As for the other memorable passages touching this monastery, or the abbats and monks thereof, they were these; viz. that Will. de Gyldeford, the ninth abbat, being a man of singular wisdom, and made penitentiary to Pandulph the pope's legate, was afterwards sent with legatine authority into Wales, which occasioned many superior abbats to malign him; so that, because he countenanced a shepherd belonging to the monastery to fight a duel, and to hang a thief that had privately stolen away some cattle of theirs, such advantage was taken against him, as that, being prosecuted for it, he was deprived in anno 1235, 15th Hen. III.^{af}

"Within ten years after which his deposal, the monks of this house sustained much loss by fire, whereby a great part of the abbey was consumed; towards the reparation whereof the king allowed them forty oaks out of his woods at Kenilworth, which the sheriff of this county had command to deliver.^{ag} And not long after this, viz. in 43 Hen. of the monks grew so exorbitant, that they fell to wandering, insomuch as the king sent forth his precepts to all sheriffs, and other his officers, to apprehend and deliver them to the abbat for chastisement according to their demerits, and as their rule required.^a

"The sixteenth abbat, Robert de Hockele, though a young man, yet being very sage and prudent, freed the house from many debts that were owing at the entrance of his government, and was a great builder; for he caused the stalls of the quire to be all new made; as also the carved-work under the steeple, with the great east window above the high altar, and the church to be new dedicated, and covered with lead:^b all which are now totally demolished. But the Gate-house, a fair and strong building, and also one his works, still standeth;^c on the front whereof, outwards, there is remaining yet a large escutcheon of stone, whereon three lions passant gardant are cut; with a lion passant gardant upon a helm set in the corner of the shield, according to the fashion of that time wherein he lived. Which badge he fixed here, in memory of King Henry the Second, their founder.

"But all that I have further to say of them is, that in 38th Edw. III. there was a complaint made against Thomas de Pipe, the then abbat, viz. that he granted estates to divers persons for lives, of several fermes and lands, without reserving any rent to be paid, to the great prejudice of the monastery:^d and this was alledged to be for the support of a concubine that he had, called Isabel Beushale, and his children by her, which were more in number, as the record says,^e than the monks then in the convent. And it was then also alledged, that were it not for these leases xx. might very well have been maintained therein. How he acquitted himself of this scandalous charge I know not; but certain it is, that the man was a person of notable parts, and deserved very well of the house: for he composed that excellent Leiger-book, being the transcript of their evidences, wherein are all things historically entred that concern this monastery; and very many particulars relating to the general story of the kingdom, especially of these parts, which are not elsewhere to be met with, whereof I have made much use in this present work; and for which his memory will be of good esteem with all that are lovers of history.

"By the Survey taken in 26th Hen. VIII. the revenue of this abbey was certified to be 151*l.* 3*s.* 1½*d.* over and above all reprises. Of which the sum of 4*l.* 5*s.* 4*d.* was then reckoned for the charge of eight quarters of rye made in bread, at 5*s.* the quarter; three quarters of malt in beer, at 4*s.* the quarter; and two hundred herrings, at 20*d.* the hundred: all which were yearly given in almes to poor and impotent people upon Maundy-Thursday, at the washing of their feet, by the decree of a general chapter of their order. And moreover 107*s.* 8*d.* per ann. for their charge in relief of poor people; viz. three bushels of rye weekly made in bread, being in all seventeen quarters and a half; and six quarters of malt made in beer, at 4*s.* the quarter. The yearly fee then to the principal officers being, to Henry Marq. Dorset, their high-steward, 53*s.* 4*d.*; to Robert Caster, gent. their general-receiver, 26*s.* 8*d.*; and to Thomas Gregory, auditor, 26*s.* 8*d.*^f

"So that, being in clear yearly value less than 200*l.* it was suppressed by act of parliament in the 27th Hen. VIII. whereupon the monks were, for the most part, disposed of to other religious houses that then stood undissolved, Thomas Tutbury, the then abbat, having a pension of 23*l.* per annum assigned to him during his life."^g

It is not necessary to specify the subsequent descent of the site here, except that it has eventually become the property of the family of Leigh.

An impression on red wax of the COMMON SEAL of this abbey, attached to a deed dated 32 Hen. VI. in the possession of William Hamper, esq. has been kindly communicated by that gentleman: the subject is the Virgin seated, crowned, and bearing in her right hand a sceptre, in her left is the infant Jesus naked, on each side of her is a female figure standing: the legend is SIGILL . ABB'TIS . ET . CONVENTVS . B. MARIE . D' STONLEY.

Stoneley is situated about three miles from Kenilworth upon the east. A spacious residence was raised upon the site of this abbey soon after the Dissolution, which has, itself, since given way to extensive alterations, and is the seat of James Henry Leigh, Esq. A gatehouse erected, before the year 1349, by Robert de Hockele, the sixteenth abbat, was the last principal remain of the ancient structure.

De Matilda Imperatrice.

[Ex registr. de Stoneley penes Thomam Leigh de Stoneley, mil. et bar. 1640.]

SUPRADICTA Matilda Imperatrix prædicti Henr. regis filia, dedit Deo et ecclesiæ de Rademora locum Heremi in foresta de Kanc, et Meylusho sub forma quæ sequitur.

Matilda Imperatrix Henrici regis filia, et Anglorum domina, archiep. episcopis, abbatibus, comitibus, baronibus, iusticiariis, vicecomitibus, ministris, et omnibus fidelibus suis, Francis et Anglis, salutem. Sciatis me dedisse et concessisse Deo et sanctæ Mariæ de Rademora, et fratribus ibidem Deo servantibus in perpetuam elemosinam, pro statu regni et pro anima patris mei regis Henrici et pro anima matris meæ, et antecessorum meorum, et pro salute viri mei, et mea, et liberorum nostrorum, locum Heremi sua in foresta de Kanoc, et totam landam de Melesho ad culturam fratum, et pasturum animalium sine nimia exartatione nemoris. De Rege Stephano.

[Ibid.]

—Qui quidem Steph. rex dedit et confirmavit Clementi, et Herveio, et eorum fratribus, locum et fundationem prioratus de Rademora, et pasturam de Melesho, prout continetur in carta Rogeri Cestren. episcopi sub hac forma verborum.

'Rogerus Dei gratia Cestrensis episc. omnibus sanctæ Dei ecclesiæ filiis, tam prælatis quam subditis, de Staffordshyre, salutem et paternam benedictionem. Cum nostri ministerii hoc exigat, ut de bono fraternæ dilectionis proposito, congaudeamus, et in religionis incrementi efficaciam pro posse nostro propagare studeamus;

'Hujus rei gratia provocati, et dilatandæ caritatis zelo succensi, donationem et concessionem regis Stephani de loco heremi, quem Clementi, et Herveio, et sociis suis, in foresta de Kanoc ad serviendum Deo se dedisse et concessisse prædictus rex Steph. per breve suum nobis innotuit. Prædicti inquam regis devotionem attendentes prædictam donationem, et concessionem comprobantes, eundem locum Rademore videlicet ad serviendum Deo, et Melesho scil. ad victum, colendum, et ad pasturam prædictis fratribus præsentis scripti pagina confirmamus, et nostri sigilli munimine munivimus; et quod juris ecclesiæ nostræ in eodem loco habuisse dicebamus, totum eisdem fratribus pro Dei amore ex parte nostra dedimus et concessimus. Salva tamen et à nobis retenta episcopalis juris canonica justitia.

'Eisdem etiam fratribus concessimus, ut quaecunque vitam regularem et autenticam Deo inspirante subire voluerint, nostra licentia subeant et regulariter in futurum teneant. Si quas mulieres Deo devotas religiosas, et regularem vitam professas ad Dei cultum necessarias prædicti fratres congregare, Deo propitio, aliquando potuerint in divina doctrina eas suscipiant, et nostra licentia et concessione eas regulariter doceant et regant. Huic nostræ sanctioni etiam adjecimus, et pastoralis cura prohibemus, quod nulla ecclesiastica sive secularis persona eisdem fratribus de Rademora aliquam injuriam vel contumeliam aliquatenus faciat, sed eidem loco religionis justa servantibus, et eisdem fratribus aliqua bona pro Dei amore impercientibus sit pax divina, et benedictio nostra, et ecclesiæ nostræ concessa beneficia. Valete in æternum. Amen.'

Quæ non adquevit petitionem eorum nisi habitum suum vellent et concederent mutari, et præclaro ordini Cisterciensi quem illa plurimum diligebat incorporari. Qui, per aliquod tempus secum deliberantes, ad ipsam redierunt, et sub conditione propositâ petitionem suam optinuerunt: et sic locus heremi de Rademora mutatus est in abbatiam, promotus ibidem Willielmo ejusdem loci priore in abbatem anno Domini Abbey of Coggeshall, in Essex.

OGGESHAL, sometime called Coxhall Abbey, is usually said to have been founded by King Stephen and his Queen Matilda.^a Leland, however, speaks of Stephen alone:^b and a Lansdowne manuscript of Matilda alone as the foundress.^c The foundation-charter certainly runs first in Matilda's name, the king, and Prince Eustace appearing only as secondary persons:^d the reason probably was, that Coggeshall was one of the great estates which Matilda possessed in the shape of patrimony, as heiress of the house of Boulogne.^e This too must have been the reason why the king, and William, earl of Boulogne and Warren, their other son, thought it necessary severally to confirm this and other grants.^f

The date of the foundation of Coggeshall, is placed in different years by different annals. Those of Parco Lude speak of 1137 as the year.^g Weever, from the chronicle of St. Augustine, Canterbury, says in 1140.^h Leland, in 1141.ⁱ Dugdale, from a Cottonian manuscript, which will be quoted in the Appendix, and Tanner, in 1142.^j Weever and Newcourt say this house was for white monks of the CLUNIAN ORDER; but the Cluniacs were black monks; and we have such evidence as cannot be shaken, that it was of the CISTERCIAN.^k

Matilda endowed this monastery with the manor of Coggeshall in as full possession, in point of privileges, as it had been held by her father, Earl Eustace.^l Morant says, that she moreover granted to the monks an exemption from toll and other customs throughout all the lands belonging to her and her son Eustace both in England and at Boulogne.^m

King John, Morant adds, on the 10th Jan. 1243, gave the monks of Coggeshall leave to enclose their wood here, and convert it into a park; for which they paid him an acknowledgment of forty marks.ⁿ

Subsequent to this they appear to have been enriched by other benefactors, for a like licence was obtained by them from King Henry III. to enclose their woods of Tolleshunt Mayer, Tolleshunt Tregoz, Innsworth, Chiltendich, and Warlegh Settmoll.^o

Ralph de Coggeshall gave the monks here, in 1276, sixty acres of arable land.^p

William de Hamberstane, with some other persons, in the 51 Edw. III. gave them the manor of Tyllingham Hall, with its appurtenances in Childerditch, Dodingherst, and Southwelde, to support a light before the principal altar of their church when high mass was celebrated.^q

According to the taxation of 1291, the rents produced by the possessions of this abbey amounted to no less than 116*l.* 10*s.* 11*d.* per annum.^r

The ecclesiastical survey of the 26th Hen. VIII. being lost for the county of Essex, there is no other return of Coggeshall than what appears in the "Liber Valorum," thus, "*MONASTERIUM DE COGGESHALL, in temporalibus et spiritualibus clare valet 251*l.* 2*s.* Decima inde 25*l.* 2*s.* 2*d." Speed gives the sum of 298*l.* 8*s.* as the value, evidently meaning the gross income.

Abbot and convent founded a chantry in their church, for one of their monks to pray daily for King Edward III. Philippa his queen, and their children; in consideration of which, that king granted them and their successors, 11th Jan. 1344, a hogshead of red wine, to be delivered in London by the king's gentleman of the wine-cellar, every year at Easter.

By virtue of a licence from King Henry IV. dated 27th Jan. 1407, Joan de Bohun, countess of Hereford, Margaret, wife of Sir Hugh de Baden, William Bourghier, William Marney, Nicolas Hunt, Kts. Robert Riketon, Edmund Peverell, Henry Frank, clerk, Geoffrey Colvill, and John Norman, chaplain, founded here a chantry, for one monk to pray daily for the souls of the said Hugh, Margaret his wife, and Thomas Coggeshall: and they endowed it with ten pounds per ann. issuing out of 2 messuages, a fulling-mill, 240 acres of arable, 11 acr. of meadow, 46 acr. of pasture, 2 acr. of wood in Springfield and Sandon, called Springfield Barnes and Sandford Barnes.^s

HENRY was abbat at the time of the Surrender.^b

Coggeshall Abbey was surrendered to the crown Feb. 5th, 1538.

The same year King Henry VIII. granted the principal or chief site of this Monastery or Abbey of Coggeshall, alias Coxhall, and the church, rectory, and advowson of Coggeshall and Childerdich; and the manors of Coggeshall, Childerdich, Tillingham, and Keuton-hall, Lions, Tolshunt major, Chedingsell, Tutwyke, Bouseys, Holfield-grange, and Busheygate-house, to Sir Thomas Seymour, brother of Edward Duke of Somerset; who, 12th May, 1541, exchanged them with the king.

The scite of the abbey and the abbey farm belonged in Morant's time to Mrs. Hannah Bullock, the widow of Josiah Bullock, Esq. of Falkborne Hall, and in this family they still continue.

No proper Chartulary of Coggeshall Abbey is at present known to the Editors of the Monasticon.^d

The COMMON SEAL, on white wax, appendant to the Surrender in the Augmentation Office, is round. The subject of it is the Virgin and Child seated under a rich canopy, with a groupe of females praying; on each side of the Virgin, in base, is a double shield, one bearing the arms of France and England quarterly, the other the arms of the abbey, three cocks. Legend, SIGILLUM . COMUNE . ECCLIE . MONASTERIJ . DE . COGGESHALL.

Leland mentions the following manuscripts as existing in the LIBRARY of this Monastery.

"Vita Davidis Regis Scotiæ per Ailredum abbatem Rivallensem, ad Henricum Secundum.

"Stephanus Langton de pœnitentia sub persona Magdalenæ.

Revesby Abbey, in Lincolnshire.

EVESBY Abbey was founded, according to the Annals of Peterborough in 1142, according to the Annals of Parco Lude in 1143, by William de Romara, earl of Lincoln; and was dedicated to St. Mary and St. Laurence.

The charters relating to this monastery given by Dugdale are six in number: three from William de Romara, the founder, jointly with William his son and Hawise his countess;^a one from William de Romara his grandson;^b a confirmation from Ralph earl of Chester;^c and another from King Richard the First in the tenth year of his reign, reciting the possessions as given by different benefactors.^d

The value of the temporal possessions of this abbey in the different deanries of the diocese of Lincoln, as they stood in 1291, will be found in the note below.^e mains of whose family, being two co-heiresses, it was purchased by the ancestor of the late Right Hon. Sir Joseph Banks, Bart. whose widow is the present possessor.

The Cottonian manuscript Tiberius E. VIII. fol. 28, formerly preserved the pedigree of the founders of this monastery out of the Records of the abbey, signed by the abbat and his monks, but it is not now to be found there.

No REGISTER of this abbey is at present known to the Editors of the Monasticon; nor are there any Minister's Accompts of it in the Augmentation Office.

No COMMON SEAL of this House has been yet met with; but an impression of a seal used by one or more of its abbats is appended to an Instrument in the Duchy Office of Lancaster, in Somerset-Place. It represents an arm holding an abbat's crozier, having on its dexter side three stars, on its sinister side one star. The inscription round it is, SIGILLUM . ABBATIS . D' . SC' O . LAURENTIO. The Instrument is without date: the abbat's name Radulphus.

The present mansion-house of Revesby Abbey is, comparatively speaking, a modern building. There are no very considerable remains of the ancient abbey. Part of an old mansion, which now forms the offices, is traditionally stated to have been the residence of the abbats.

Abbey of Cumhyre, in Radnorshire.

UMHYRE, Comehere, or Combehire Abbey, was founded by Cadwathelan ap Madoc, in 1143; and, according to Leland, was intended for sixty monks.^a Like most of the Cistercian Abbeys, it was dedicated to St. Mary. The charters of Llewelin Prince of North Wales in 1209, and of King Henry the Third, in 1232, sufficiently explain its early endowment; and preserve the names of various benefactors to it.^b

Matthew Paris relates that, in 1231, when Llewellyn ravaged the lands of the barons upon the borders of Wales, a monk of Cumhyre betrayed the garrison of the castle of Montgomery into the hands of the Welsh prince; which Henry the Third hearing, while upon his march to defend the country there, burnt a grange belonging to the monks, and threatened destruction to the abbey itself. The abbat, however, quieted his indignation by the payment of three hundred marks. "Abbas loci ut ædificia, sumptuosis valde laboribus constructa, salvaret, trecentas marcas regi numeravit, et sic ejus quievit indignatio."^c

The annual rental of Cumhyre Abbey in 1291, as we gather from the entries in Pope Nicholas's Taxation, amounted to 36l. 2s.^d

In the reign of Henry the Fourth this abbey suffered materially in the warfare which was carried on by Owen Glendwr.^e

According to a Manuscript in the Library of Benet College, Cambridge, here were, in the 26th of Henry the Eighth, only three monks; at which time the gross amount of the revenues was even less than in the time of Edward the First, amounting to no more than 28l. 17s. 4d. per annum; the clear income to 24l. 19s. 4d.^f

The site of this House was granted in the 37th Henry VIII. to Walter Henly and John Williams.^g In after times it became the property of Sir Hans Fowler, who died in 1771. The owner in 1815 was his descendant, Thomas Hodges Fowler, Esq.

Tanner has preserved but four references only to Records relating to this monastery, viz. "Cart. 15 Joan. n. 3. Cart. 16 Joan. p. 2, m. 3, n. 13. Pat. 11 Edw. II. p. 2, m. 5, vel. 6. Pat. 17 Edw. III. p. 2, m. 23."

In its splendor Cumhyre Abbey was delightfully situated in a fertile valley surrounded by mountains. At present traces of its foundations only are to be seen. From these, the chief part appears to have formed a continuous building, two hundred and thirty-five feet in length, by seventy-three feet in width; a great portion of which was occupied by the abbey church. Vestiges of other buildings are to be seen contiguous. Some of the columns and arches were removed to Llanidloes church, and applied to the repairs there in 1542. Other fragments were removed to Cumhyre Chapel.

Abbey of Boxley, in Kent.

OXLEY Abbey is stated in the Rochester Chronicle to have been founded in 1144 by William de Iprè, earl of Kent.^a The Annals of St. Werburga and Parco Lude, however, which are followed by Bishop Tanner, date the foundation in 1146;^b and Leland, in one place, reputes King Richard the First to have been the founder.^c

Its original inhabitants were Cistercian monks from the abbey of Clarevalle in Burgundy.^d William de Iprè, the founder, afterwards became a monk himself at Laon, in France.^e In some later Records, this abbey, from the famous rood or cross here, had the name of "Abbatia S. Crucis de Graciis."^f

King Richard the First, in the first year of his reign, A.D. 1189, gave to this abbey the manor of Boxele with its appurtenances; which gift King Henry the Third, in his 37th year, confirmed by his letters of inspeximus, adding from himself the grant of a weekly market at Boxley.^g

The liberties and privileges of this abbey, as they were enjoyed by the monks in the 7th of Edward the First, are fully stated in the Placita de Quo Waranto. The abbat, it appears, claimed all the liberties, seriatim, which were confirmed by King Henry the Third; together with free warren in all his lands in Kent and Surrey. The jury, however, returned that the free warren was confined to the manor of Boxley.^h

The valuation of the possessions of this monastery, as they were returned in Pope Nicholas's Taxation in 1291, will be found in the note below.ⁱ

Twice in the 23d Edw. I. once in the 24th, and twice in the 28th Edw. I. the abbat of Boxley was summoned to parliament; but not afterwards.^k

In the reign of King Richard the Second, according to Stevens, the revenues of this abbey were placed at 218*l.* 19*s.* 10*d.*, of which 98*l.* 19*s.* 7*d.* were in the diocese of Canterbury.^l This was exactly the gross valuation of the revenue of Boxley in the 26th of Henry the Eighth; the clear income at that time amounting to 204*l.* 4*s.* 11*d.* per annum.^m

have occurred to the Editors of the Monasticon.

LAMBERT is named as the first abbat.ⁿ

JOHN, prior of Robertsbridge, was made abbat in 1216.^o

RICHARD SHEPEY received the benediction as abbat Feb. 9th, 1415.^p

ROBERT RAYFELD was abbat in 1494.^q

JOHN DOBBS, the last abbat, surrendered his house to the king Jan. 29th, 1537, 29th Hen. VIII.^r At the Dissolution he had a pension of fifty pounds a year. One of the monks had a pension of four marks; six had 4*l.* each; and one, 2*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* The five last pensions were still paid in 1553.^s

King Henry the Eighth, by indenture dated June 14th, in the 32d year of his reign, exchanged with Sir Thomas Wyatt, of Allington, for other premises, the house and site of this monastery. These premises in the 34th Henry the Eighth were again vested in the crown; and were again granted out to Sir Thomas Wyatt, the son of the preceding, in the 38th Henry the Eighth. In the first of Queen Mary, the site of Boxley abbey, with the manor, became forfeited in consequence of the second Sir Thomas Wyatt's treasons. The manor was restored to his widow, but the site still remained vested in the crown.

August the 10th, 11 Eliz. the queen granted the site and mansion of the monastery of Boxley to John Astley for thirty years. In the 13th Eliz. George Wyatt, son of the second Sir Thomas, was restored in blood by act of parliament; after which, he became possessed of this seat, and resided here, having the fee of it granted to him by the crown. Henry Wyatt, grandson of George, left an only daughter, who married Sir Thomas Selyard, Bart.; the co-heiresses of whose son, Sir Thomas Selyard, sold the site to the Austens, whose descendants own the site at present.^t

No REGISTER of Boxley abbey is at present known to the Editors of the Monasticon.^u

Cistercian Nunnery of Sinningthwaite, in Yorkshire.

SINNINGTHWAITE Priory, in the deanry of the Ainsty and archdeaconry of the West Riding of Yorkshire, was founded about the year 1160 by Bertram Haget, and dedicated to the blessed Virgin. Haget, it appears, gave the place where the monastery was erected, which was confirmed by Roger de Mowbray, his lord,^a and by Godfrey de Ludham, archbishop of York, who took the nuns under his protection, denouncing a malediction against those who should injure them, and a blessing to their benefactors.^b

Pope Alexander the Third, in the fourteenth year of his pontificate, A.D. 1172, granted to Christiana, then prioress, and to the convent, a confirmation of their then possessions, with what might afterwards be given to them; and enjoined that none of the brethren or sisters, once professed, should depart without licence, exempting them, as usual, from paying tithe for what they occupied or tilled at their own costs;^c which Pope Lucius the Third, on the 3d kal. Dec. in the 4th year of his pontificate, A.D. 1185, confirmed to Agnes prioress of Sinningthwaite, prohibiting any one from committing theft within their cloisters or granges.^d This Pope Gregory the Eighth likewise confirmed.^e

The nuns of Sinningthwaite had lands, rents, and other possessions in Adwaldeby,^g Bedale,^h Berwic upon Teyse,ⁱ Bilton,^k Boroughbridge,^l Elnewic,^m Esholt,ⁿ Farnham,^o Ferry,^p Helagh,^q Hoton,^r Lofthouse,^s Mensington now Menston,^t Sinningthwaite,^u Tockwith,^x Torp,^y Useburne,^z Winthouthait or Winnolfuethait,^a Wittington,^b Wombwell,^c and York.^d

They had the advowson also of the church of Bilton given to them by Gundreda the daughter of Bertram Haget.^e

Burton says, "As the nuns hereof were of the Cistercian Order, they thought themselves to be exempt from any visitation of the diocesan, or his commissary, or any other deputed for that purpose: for we find in A.D. 1176, 4 Edw. I. that they appealed to Pope John XXI. against Walter Gifford, archbishop of York, who died A.D. 1179; but the event seems not to have been in favour of the nuns, because I have met with an original deed, dated kal. (1st) of Nov. A.D. 1282, 10 Edward I. wherein William Wickwane, Walter's successor, in the fourth year of his pontificate, mentions the visitation of Walter, his predecessor, and that of his own, laying down very strict rules to be observed by these nuns." p. 325. Abbey of Esseholt, in Yorkshire.

was a small Priory of about six Cistercian Nuns^b in the latter part of the reign of King Henry the Second, or the SCHEWOLDE, Essold, Esseholt, or Esholt, in Ayre-dale, in the deanry of the Ainsty and archdeaconry of the West Riding.^a A place of this name was confirmed to the Nuns of Synningthwait in a bull of Pope Alexander III. dated A. D. 1172, as has been already shewn in Sinningthwaite, but Burton and Tanner agree that that might be another estate, or before any Religious House was here founded: for here beginning of that of Richard the First, dedicated to St. Mary and St. Leonard, or, as others, to St. James.^c

Dugdale, in the former edition of the Monasticon, made Esseholt a Cell to Sinningthwaite; and, indeed, the only Instrument which he gave relating to it was the bull above alluded to.^d But no mention whatever of such dependence occurs in any of the deeds of either house, in the archiepiscopal Registers of the See of York, or in the Valor of the 26th of Henry VIII. Esseholt, moreover, as will hereafter be seen from the Registers of the See of York, had always distinct elective Prioresses. About the time of the Dissolution this priory was said to have been founded by the ancestors of Christopher Ward.^e

Among their possessions, the nuns of Esseholt had the advowson of the church of Belton, in the Isle of Axholm; with lands and rents at Burley, Esseholt, Guiseley, Haukeworth, Idle, Oteley, and Yadon, or Yedon.^f

10th, 1453. Joan, relict of Roger Ward, sen^r. of Gevendale, by her will, proved March 29th, 1474, directed the same." Burton, p. 140, from the Registers of York.

^g Compare the different Instruments in the Appendix. Nine of these are grants of lands and possessions made to the Nuns of Esseholt by several private persons; one a release of all debts due to the Prior and Convent of Neuburgh; a presentation of the Prioress and Convent of Esseholt to the parish church of Belton; an exchange of lands between these nuns and William, the son of Jordan de Ydel: a grant of four pounds of wax to them yearly, for the term of sixty years; the last will

^b Tann. e MS. Corp. Christ. Coll. Cant. Six enjoyed pensions in 1553.
^c In some of the Instruments which are appended to the present account, St. Mary only, and, in others, St. Leonard only occurs.
^d This Instrument, in the present edition of the Monasticon, is placed as Num. VII. in the Appendix to Sinningthwait.
^e See Burton, and Tanner, from Speed. "Sir Simon Ward, Kn^t. ordered his body to be buried here, by his will, dated in 1383. Sir John Ward, Kn^t. ordered the same for himself, by his will, proved Aug. VOL. V.

The gross amount of the revenue of Esseholt in the 26th Hen. VIII. was 19*l.* 0*s.* 8*d.* The clear sum 13*l.* 5*s.* 4*d.*^a

The site of this house was granted, in the 1st Edw. VI. A.D. 1547, to Henry Thompson, gent. It afterwards passed into the family of Calverley; and about A.D. 1754 was sold to Robert Stansfield, Esq.

The following ABBESSES, or, as they are styled, PRIORESSES of ESSEHOLT, occur in the York Registers.

JULIANA DE LA WODEHALL was confirmed as prioress 8 id. Dec. 1300.^b

JOAN DE HERTLINGTON was the next prioress; upon whose resignation

ISABELLA DE CALVERLEY was elected 11 kal. Oct. 1317.^c Another

ISABELLA DE CALVERLEY was confirmed in the office of prioress July 26th, 1353.^d

ELIZABETH LASYNBY was confirmed August 19th, 1475.^e

JOAN WARD occurs in 1480;^f upon whose resignation another

ELIZABETH LASINGBY, or LASYNBY, was elected. She received confirmation as prioress Aug. 30th, 1497.^g

AGNES FRITH received confirmation Nov. 17th, 1505.^h

MARGARET ROCHE was confirmed in her office as prioress Nov. 4th, 1507.ⁱ Upon her resignation,

ELIZABETH PUDSEY was confirmed March 19th, 1512.^k

No REGISTER of Esseholt is at present known.^l

No mention of this priory occurs in the Taxation of P. Nich. IV. Rot. Hundred. vol. i. p. 105.

No COMMON SEAL of this house, nor any Seal of its prioresses, have been met with.

The priory of Esseholt is situated in the parish of Guiseley, five miles from Bradford and Otley; and on or near the site is the seat of the proprietor, Joshua Crompton, Esq. who married the granddaughter and heiress of Robert Stansfield, Esq. A few pointed arches in some of the offices alone remain to attest that a religious house once occupied the site.

Abbey of Woburn, in Bedfordshire.

WOBURN ABBEY was founded, to the honor of the Virgin Mary, in 1145, by Hugh de Bolebec; as appears from Instruments in the Appendix.^a Henry the Second's Charter of Confirmation enumerates various other persons as early benefactors;^b and Dugdale has preserved a separate charter of Hugh Maleth bestowing upon the monks his land at Suaneburne.^c Still, however, the endowment must have been scanty, as in 1234 this monastery was so poor that the establishment was for a time broken up, and the monks dispersed into different convents till the debts which they had contracted could be discharged.^d

The following are the names which have come down of the

ABBATS of WOBURN.

ALAN appears to have been the first.^f He was brought from the abbey of St. Mary at York.

PETER occurs A.D. 1200.^g

RICHARD, A.D. 1217.^h

ROGER, A.D. 1233.ⁱ

ROBERT DE STOKES was elected A.D. 1297.^k

JOHN DE ESSEBY was elected A.D. 1458.^l

ROBERT CHARLET occurs A.D. 1463.^m

ROBERT HOBBS, abbat of Woburn, who first occurs in 1524, with the prior of the same house, and the parson of Pudingtone, were executed at Woburn in the 28th of Hen. VIII. A.D. 1537.^o

The revenues of this House in the 26th of Hen. VIII. amounted in gross income to 430l. 13s. 11½d.; the net receipts to 391l. 18s. 2½d. per annum.

The site was granted in the 1st Edw. VI. to John Lord Russell, whose descendant the Duke of Bedford still possesses it.

References to DOCUMENTS relating to Woburn Abbey will be found in the note below, where they are placed for the purpose of compression.^p

No impression from the COMMON SEAL of this abbey has fallen in the way of the Editors of the Monasticon, nor has a single seal occurred to them of any of its abbats.

No part of the BUILDINGS of Woburn Abbey now exist. Cole, in one of his manuscript volumes, says, "The duke of Bedford has, this year, 1747, determined to pull down the old abbey house in his park, and build another more suitable to his taste." The present mansion house at Woburn was built soon after by Flitcroft. Cole conjectured that the pulpit in the parish church of Woburn, so remarkable for ornamented carving in the Gothic taste, came originally from the Abbey-church.

MEDMENHAM Abbey in Buckinghamshire was a Cell to Woburn.

Merebal, or De Mura valle Abbey, in Warwickshire.

EREVAL ABBEY has been so fully accounted for by Sir William Dugdale in the History of Warwickshire, that we shall make no apology for transcribing the particulars of his statement.^a “Westwards from Ather-ton, scarce a mile, stands Miravall, of which there is no particular mention in the Conquerour’s Survey, in regard it was involved with Grendon (lying on the other side of the river) whereto it then belonged as an out-wood, and therewith became pos-sess by Henry de Feriers, a great man in these parts (as I shall shew anon), whose grandson Robert Earl Ferrers, having a reverend esteem of the Cistercian monks, which in his time began to multiply in England, made choice of this moun-tainous and woody desert (as fittest for solitude and devotion) to found therein a monasterie of that order; which was begun accordingly in the xiiiith year of K. Stephen’s reign;^b and being propagated with monks from Bordesley Abbey in Worcestershire^c had, by reason of such its situation, the name of Miravall attributed thereto; the lands wherewith he endowed it being these; viz. all his forest of Arden (id est, his out-wood in that part of the woodland, which then bore the name of Arden), and also what he had in Whitting-ton, together with the mannour of Overton (now called Orton on the Hill in com. Leic.), as also Herdwike in the Peake of Derbyshire, unto Cranokesdune; with common of pasture in Hertendon and Pillesburie, for sheep and other cattell, as the words of his charter do import.^d “But besides this, it had severall other benefactors; of which the principall were these; scil. Gerard de Limesi,

Walt. de Camvile, Raphe de Baskerville, and Pain de Baskerville, as K. H. II.’s charter, whereby he ratified their grants, manifesteth:^e To that about 30 H. II. there were the granges of More (now More-Barne), Broile, Seile, Litle Petling, the church of Overton (on the Hill), with the chapells of Gren-don, Twicrosse, Gopshull, and Baxterly (some in this countie and some in Leicestershire) belonging thereto, as the bull of Pope Lucius the third, whereby he confirmed them, doth manifest.^f Divers lands had these monks afterwards bestowed on them also through the countie of sundry other persons; viz. in Litle Sheyle by Henry de Appelby and others; in Overton subt. Ardern, by John de Overton and Rob. Stapleton. In Brantingthorp by Rob. de Branting-thorp and others: in Shepye by Nich. de Temple and others.^g In Hertingdon, as parcell of the mannour of Pillesburie, they obtained cxx. acres of land more, from Thomas Earl of Lancaster, in lieu of xxs. yearly rent, which they usually did receive at his exchequer of Tutbury.^h “In 2 Edw. III. they had a grant of two messuages, three shops, and xiiis. rent in Leicester, by Petronill Oliver of Leicester, to finde a priest for celebration of divine service in the conventuall church of Miravale, for the soul of her the said Petronill, her ancestors, and all the faithfull de-ceased.ⁱ In 11th E. III. they had more lands bestowed on them, lying in Overton, Peatling, and Brantingthorpe before specified, by sundry persons.^k In 18th Edw. III. they purchased xvii. messuages and divers lands in Atherston, Bentley, and Baxterley, with the moytie of the mannour of Baxterley.^l In 31 E. III. they had a messuage and a yard land in Bentley, bestowed on them by John de L’isle, then lord of that mannour, to find xv. tapers in the chapell of our Ladie, near the gate of the abby.^m In 10 Ric. II. they purchased six other messuages in Atherston, and certain rents in Whittington and Baxterley.ⁿ In 16 Ric. II. four messuages and certain lands in Tamworth, and Wilmecote, as also two messuages more in Atherston.^o And in 28th

Hen. VIII.^c preserved it from ruin, when the lesser Houses went to wrack in 27 Hen. VIII. But in 30 Hen. VIII. it was overwhelm'd in the generall deluge, being surrendered to the king's use, by the then abbot and convent, as by their publick Instrument,^d under the conventuall seal, dated 13 Oct. the same year, whereunto their names are particularly subscribed, doth manifest; whose pensions during life, as they were by patent granted to them, I have here also added.

"After which, viz. 2 Dec. 32 Hen. VIII. was the site hereof, with the lands and woods adjacent, together with the New-House-Grange, and Pinwell-Grange, in com. Leic. As also Owsthirn-Grange in this countie, granted to Sir Walt. Devereux, kt. Lord Ferrers of Chartley, and to the heirs male of his body;^e so that there being a reversion in the crown, for defect of issue male, in 4 Edw. VI. he obtained another patent (being then arrived to the dignitie of Viscount Hereford) for the same site, and the other lands, to himself and his heirs generall.^f Which Walter disposed thereof to Sir Will. Devereux, kt. his younger son, as it seems; for he was that patcht up some part of the ruins here, and resided thereon as I have heard; and by his testament^g bequeathing it to Joan his wife for life, gave the remainder to Walter Vicount Hereford (his nephew) and his heirs: which Walter (afterwards created earl of Essex) left issue Robert, earl of Essex, attainted in 43 Eliz.; whose son and heir Robert, in 1640, possessed the site, and much of the lands. The COMMON SEAL, an impression of which on red wax is in the possession of William Hamper, Esq. had for its subject the Blessed Virgin, sitting with the Infant on her lap, both crowned, between two slender pillars under a Gothic canopy; on her right side a hand holding a crosier, on her left a star surmounting a crescent; legend, s. HENRICUS rex Angliæ, et dux Normanniæ et Aquitaniæ, et comes Andegaviæ, archiepiscopis, episcopis, &c. salutem. Sciatis me concessisse et confirmasse, pro anima regis Henrici, et aliorum antecessorum meorum, et pro salute animæ meæ, et matris meæ imperatricis, et reginæ uxoris meæ, et puerorum meorum, Deo et sanctæ Mariæ et monachis Mirevallis, totam donationem illam, quam comes Robertus de Ferrariis illis dedit, in elemosinam, ad quandam abbatiam construendam ordinis Cisterciensis. Quare volo et firmiter præcipio, ut præfati monachi habeant et teneant omnes terras suas, cum omnibus appendiciis suis, de cuiuscunque feudo sint, et omnes possessiones suas, benè et in pace, quietè et liberè ab omni consuetudine seculari; sicut aliqua ecclesia, in tota terra mea meliùs et liberius tenet. Præterea volo et firmiter præcipio ut sint quieti per totam terram meam, de theloneo, et de scires, et de hundredis, et de wapentachiis, et de kingeld, et de denegeld, et de murdre, et infangentheof, et de omnibus aliis secularibus infestationibus. Concedo itaque et confirmo cum tali libertate, quali Robertus comes de Ferrariis dedit et concessit eis, videlicet, totam forestam suam de Ardena, et quicquid habuit in Wintona et Overtonia, et Leam. Et totam terram quam Gerardus de Limese eis dedit; et quicquid Walterus de Canvilla concessit eis de terra sua; et quicquid Radulphus de Baschervilla, et Paganus de Baschervilla concesserunt eis; et quicquid hæredes Roberti comitis de Ferrariis, vel quicunque alii justè et rationabiliter dederunt, ad incrementum ejusdem abbatie, vel quicquid emerint, aut escambierint ad aisiamenta sua, in bosco et plano, in pratis et pasturis, in aquis et stagnis, in molendinis et minariis, et in omnibus aliis rebus. Hanepole, or Hampole, Priory,

HANEPOLE Priory was built by William de Clarefai and Avicia de Tany, his wife, about the year 1170, for fourteen or fifteen Cistercian Nuns: and was dedicated to the Virgin Mary. Burton, in the Monasticon Eboracense, has given an alphabetical list of the places where the lands of this monastery lay, with the names of the respective donors. These were:

- The church of Adwyk or Athewyk given by Albrede de Lisures, and afterwards appropriated; with free warren in Adwyk: the grants of both were confirmed by Ralph, son of Ralph de Tili, and Roger, his brother, by Sibilla de Clarefai, daughter of William de Clarefai and Avice de Tancia his wife.^a
- Free warren in Brampton, near Doncaster.^b
- The mill, together with the church of Bretewell, and three oxgangs of land.^c
- A moiety of the town of Clayton, held by a rent of the Vesey family.^d
- The town of Hanepole, with free warren.^e
- A manse or dwelling in Lincoln.^f
- A messuage and one oxgang of land in Marr, given by John Bossewill, or Rossewill.^g

The church and mills of Melton, by Avicia de Tanai and Sibilla de Clarefai:^h and An annuity of a pound from Plomtree, near Scroby.ⁱ

PRIORESSES of HAMPOLE.

AGNES DE PONTEFRACTO, a nun of this house, was confirmed prioress 2 kal. Mart. 1312.^k Upon whose death MARGARET DE HECKE succeeded. Her election was confirmed by the archbishop of York, 2 id. Mart. 1319.^l ELIZABETH FAIRFAX succeeded, according to Burton, after 1380.^m MARGARET BARCESTRE:ⁿ upon whose death MARGARET NORMANVILLE succeeded, May 11th, 1445.^o Upon whose resignation ALICE CLAREL, sub-prioress, succeeded, and was confirmed in the office Nov. 28th, 1452.^p ELIZABETH RAWDON was the next prioress. Upon her resignation, ISABELLA WHATELEY succeeded. Her election was confirmed Sept. 23, 1483.^q ELIZABETH ARLEY succeeded upon Whateley's death. She was confirmed in the office Jan. 10th, 1503.^r Upon Elizabeth Arley's death AGNES YUCHE was confirmed May 5th, 1512.^s Burton calls her Agnes Inche. ISABELLA ARTHINGTON was confirmed prioress April 27, 1518.^t She was the last of the list. She surrendered her monastery to the king Nov. 19, 31 Hen. VIII.^u Willis

In the 26th of Henry the VIII. the gross income of this monastery amounted to 83*l.* 6*s.* 11*d.* the net income to 63*l.* 5*s.* 8*d.* The site with the demesnes of the House were granted, 6 Edw. VI. A.D. 1552, to Francis Aislaby.

In 1278 Archbishop Giffard wrote to the Prioresses of Hampole, Appelton, Syningthwaite, and the rest of the houses of the Cistercian Order in the diocese of York, that they should admit the Minorites and Preaching Friars for their confessors (who, he says, "in ecclesia Dei fulgent velut splendor firmamenti"), notwithstanding the inhibition those nunneries had received from the abbat of the Cistercian Order, who, he adds, "in vos nullam habeat jurisdictionem ordinariam, vel etiam delegatam."^c

The following are Tanner's references to manuscripts and records relating to Hampole:

"Vide in Collect. Dodsworth, vol. viii. fol. 149, duas cartas ineditas de prato de Smedehall. vol. ix. fol. 318. bullam P. Innocentii, confirm. ecclesiâs de Adwick, Melton, et Gretonwelle.

The fragment of an impression of the Common Seal to a conventual lease in the Augmentation Office, 21 Hen. VIII. represents, as far as can be conjectured, a bird: no part of the legend remains but the words UM . COMMUNE

Burton gives the following account of the situation and remains of Hampole in his time, A. D. 1758.

"This nunnery stood in a pleasant vale lying east and west, in a fine country, near to the high-road leading from Wakefield to Doncaster. At present there is an old hall, which seems either to have been part of the priory, or to have been built out of its ruins, on the north side of the village, wherein is an old bow window on the south side, on the top of which are four escutcheons in stone; in one are two hands in chief, two birds in bass, and a crown or heart in the middle; in another a fess between three escallops; and in a third five fusils in fess; the fourth defaced. The Chapel stood on the north side of the hall, betwixt that and the little beck; and the ground is now called Chapel-Green."^d

Abbey of Vaudey, or de Valle Dei, in Lincolnshire.

Abbey to a more pleasant place in the parish of Edenham, called Vaudey, or De Valle Dei, given them by Jeffry de Brachecourt, or by his lord Gilbert de Gant, earl of Lincoln, by the charity of whom and other benefactors the Abbey was amply endowed.

Jeffrey de Brachecourt's charter to this monastery is a curiosity. He gives all his possessions in Brachecourt to the monks, on condition of their supplying him and his wife, during their lives, with all things necessary for their diet and clothing, linen and woollen, and as far as diet only went for two servants. The quantity and quality of the diet for himself and his wife, the same as for two monks. The servants to fare as if they were the servants of the convent. The clothing for Jeffrey was to be griseng or halberget, and lamb-skins; the dearest for his wife was to be bluet, and lamb-skins also.^a

In King Richard the First's charter of confirmation, which will be found in the Appendix, the possessions of this House are enumerated to a very large extent. It was granted at St. Alban's, Sept. 7th, in the first year of his reign. In this Instrument, beside William, earl of Albemarle, Gilbert

de Gant, Roger Fitz Reinfrid, the Countess Alicia de Gant, Robert de Gant, and Gundreda his wife, Adam de Amundevill, Robert de Gant, and Alicia Parnell his wife, Baldwin Fitz Gilbert, William Fitz Walding, William Fitz Alger, Simon de Rochford, and Roger de Moubray, appear as principal benefactors.^b

The subsequent endowment of Vaudey, by other benefactors, will be seen by a comparison of King Richard's charter with the Transcript of the Valor Ecclesiasticus of the 26th of Henry the Eighth.^c

ABBATS of VAUDEY.

GUARINUS occurs as the first abbat.^d

WILLIAM occurs A.D. 1219.^e

A. and

NICHOLAS also occur as abbats.^f

In the Taxation of 1291 the Abbey of Vaudey is twice mentioned among the spiritualities of the diocese of Lincoln: viz.

"Decanat. de Frameland. Ecclesia de Bokemynst'r cum duabus marcis receptis de Valle Dei pro decimis 16l.

In the 25th Hen. VIII. the net income of this monastery amounted to 124l. 5s. 11½d.; the gross revenue to 177l. 15s. 7½d.^h

At the Suppression here was an abbat and thirteen monks.ⁱ The site was granted in the 30th of Henry VIII. to Charles, duke of Suffolk.

Swine, Swinhey, or Swina Abbey, In the Deanry of Holderness, in Yorkshire.

WINE ABBEY, founded by Robert de Verli, before the end of the reign of King Stephen, was dedicated to the Virgin Mary. Its establishment was for a prioress and fourteen or fifteen nuns.^a

Erenbroch de Burton's charter to this House, bestowing upon it a carucate of land in Freistingthorp; Pope Alexander's bull, granting to the nuns exemption from tithes; and Hugh de Pusac's charter as treasurer and archdeacon of York, confirming the grant of the church of Swine by Robert de Verli, are given by Dugdale in the Appendix;^b with the convention between the nuns and Alexander de Hilton concerning nine bovates of land in Swine.^c

Burton enumerates the possessions of this House alphabetically, in Beningholme East and West, Biford, Drypoll Grange, Duvethorp, Friestingthorp, Hedon, Holme in Spaldingmore, Lanthorp Grange in Swine, Lunde on the Wolds, Riston, Skirlow, Sutton, Swine, Thorkilby, Thorpe in Holderness, Wilstorpe, and Wolherg or Walburgh.^d

The principal benefactors beside Robert de Verli, were Hawise de Surdevile, Peter, son of Anketin, Isabel de Spineto, Erenburch de Burton, Richard Long of Hedon, Gilbert, son of Astin, Walter Skirlaw, bishop of Durham, Nicholas de Chawincourt, Richard Holme, Peter de la Hay, Ralph de Amundevil, and Isaac, clerk to William, earl of Albemarle.^e

In Pope Nicholas's Taxation, A.D. 1291, among the spiritualities of the diocese of York, the church of Swine, appropriated to the abbey, is rated at 53*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*: and the temporalities of the prioress of Swine at 48*l.* per annum.^f

From an entry in one of the archiepiscopal registers of York, relating to a dispute between the prioress and nuns of the abbey, and the parishioners of Swine, we learn that some time before 1308 the church and monastic buildings here were destroyed by fire.

The following are the names of the

JOSIANA DE ANELAGBY, or ANGLATBY, succeeded; who in 1303 had licence, on account of ill health, to absent herself from her monastery: a little scandal, also, appears to have been attached to her character.^k

JOANNA DE MOUBRAY succeeded in 1308.^l She resigned, on account of infirmity, in 1309.^m

JULIANA DE ANLAGHBY, probably the next prioress, resigned in September 1320.ⁿ

MATILDA WADE was the next prioress. Upon her resignation

JOHANNA KELK was elected. She received the archbishop's confirmation March 4th, 1482.^o On the death of Joan Kelk

BEATRICE LOWE succeeded. She was confirmed in her office Dec. 22, 1498.^p

CECILIA ELAND was confirmed prioress Sept. 23, 1506.^q

ELEANOR DENE received confirmation March 8th, 1520.^r

DOROTHY KNIGHT was the last prioress. She surrendered her house to the king Sept. 9th, in the 31st Henry VIII. when a pension was allotted to her of 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* which was still payable in 1553.^s

The revenues of this house in the 26th of Henry VIII. appear to have been rated at 134*l.* 6*s.* 9½*d.* gross income: the net produce of the rents was 82*l.* 3*s.* 9½*d.*^t

According to Burton, the site of Swine Abbey was granted by King Henry the Eighth, in 1540, to Sir Richard Gresham, knt.^u Be this as it may, another grant was made of the site by the same king to Sir Richard Gresham in the 35th year of his reign, the abstract of which will be seen in the note below; including numerous other lands elsewhere.^x How the sight of this monastery came again to the crown is not thall, Elizabeth Arte, and Elizabeth Grimston 2*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* each; Elizabeth Ellysbye, Cecily Swale, Mary Bankes, Dorothy Thomlinson, Elizabeth Tyas, Alice Nicholson, Dorothy Stapleton, and Elizabeth Patrick, each 2*l.*

An impression of the COMMON SEAL of this Nunnery, on red wax, is attached to the surrender still remaining in the Augmentation Office: it is oval, representing the Virgin crowned, sitting, and having in her lap the infant Jesus, in a niche; underneath is a nun praying. The inscription is S. PRIORIS. SCE. MARIE. DE. SVINA.

No traces of the Buildings of the Abbey of Swine were extant even when Burton wrote.

ALEXANDER episcopus servus servorum Dei, venerabili fratri Eboracensi archiepiscopo, et dilecto filio Lincolnensi episcopo, salutem et apostolicam benedictionem. Significaverunt nobis dilectæ filiæ nostræ moniales de Swina, et de Cotum, quod cum eis, sicut fratribus Cisterciensis ordinis indultum sit de clementia sedis apostolicæ, ut de laboribus suis, quos propriis manibus, vel sumptibus excolunt nemini decimas solvere teneantur, quidam ecclesiastici viri capitulum ipsum prava, et sinistra interpretatione pervenerunt asserentes labores novalia intelligi, et sic contra privilegium apostolicæ sedis prædictæ, moniales decimarum exactione gravantur: quoniam igitur horum interpretatio ab intellectu nostro et aliorum qui id sanè intelligere volunt est penitus aliena, cum secundum capitulum illud à solutione decimarum, tam de terris quas deduxerunt ad cultum, quam etiam de terris cultis quas ipsæ propriis manibus vel sumptibus excolunt liberæ sint, et immunes, fraternitati vestræ, et discretionī vestræ, per apostolica scripta præcipiendo mandamus, quatinus à prædictis monialibus quæ in episcopatibus vestris consistunt de laboribus vel de terris suis, quas propriis manibus vel sumptibus excolunt, decimas nullatenus exigatis nec ab ali-

Si qui autem clerici vel laici contra privilegia sedis apostolicæ eas decimarum exactione gravaverint, laicos excommunicationis sententia percellatis, et clericos contradictione et appellatione cessante, ab officio suspendatis, et tam excommunicationis quam suspensionis sententiam faciatis, usque ad dignam satisfactionem inviolabiliter observari. Abbey of Bruerne, in Oxfordshire.

BRUERNE, or Brueria Abbey, in Oxfordshire, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, was founded by Nicholas Basset, in 1147.^a Very few particulars of the History of this House have reached us. Its most important charter is that which Dugdale has given in the Appendix to the present account, dated in 1234;^b whence we learn that King Henry the Second, King Richard the First, and Roger earl of Warwick, were amongst its early benefactors.

Abbey of Roche, or de Rupe, In the Deanry of Doncaster and Archdeaconry of West Riding, IN YORKSHIRE.

ROCHE ABBEY was founded by Richard de Builli and Richard Fitz Turgis, or de Wikerelai, A.D. 1147, and dedicated to the Blessed Virgin Mary. The respective charters of these joint founders are given in the Appendix of Instruments: the lands of Eilrichetorp, it appears, formed the earliest endowment.^a

John, the son of Richard de Builly, aforesaid, confirmed his father's grant.^b

Richard de Boyvil took his oath, by the truth, by the baptism he had received, and by his knighthood, that, on St. Giles's day, in the year 1241, his lady Ydonea de Builly had freely and deliberately given to the monks of Roche all the manor of Sandbec, with whatever was on or appertained to it.^c

Maud Luvetot, relict of Gerard de Furnival, gave these monks all her land in the territory of Tatewich.^d

Edmund Lacy, constable of Chester, confirmed all donations made in his barony of Pontefract, his constableness, his barony of Tikehill, and his socage of Snaith.^e

William, earl of Warren, granted to the monks here the tithe of all his eels and fisheries at Hoffeld, Thorne, and Fislak.^f

John Lyvet, son and heir to William Lyvet, made over the estate, right, and title, which he had in the advowson and patronage of Roche Abbey, to Richard Barry, citizen and merchant of London. This deed is dated in the 51st of Edw. III.^g

After another grant, which has been already referred to, Dugdale has given a long account of the lords of the manors of Elreton and Tadewyke; lands in one of which at least belonged to the Abbey of Roche.^h

Haelesia, countess of Eu, confirmed to the monks the seat of their abbey, the town of Aggecroft, the wood of Lundric, and all their possessions in the barony of Tikehill.ⁱ

Pope Urban III. by his bull dated in 1186, ratified all grants made to these monks, and exempted them from tithes.^k

Burton has given references to various other charters granted to this monastery, of lands of inferior consequence. The following he gives as the alphabet of their possessions: Aggecroft-grange, Alvarlay, Anes or Anhes, Anestan, Arneldthorpe, Arnethorpe now Armthorpe, Ashoure, Balne, Barneby-grange, Bilham, Botyldewellewange, Bradewelle or Braithwell, Bramley, Bramwith, Brawith, Brantclive, Bridlington now Burlington, Buggethorpe, Carleton in Linderic co. Nott. Cattewic, Chatterworth co. Derb. Conesbury now Consborough, Cuddleworth, Ehus, Eilrichetorp, Farewad, Fishlae, Flikesburch, Frithebec now Firthbeck, Goderic-Ridding, Hatfield, Hatewic, Helchby now Hellaby, Holme, Hoton-Livet, Hoton-North, Innessby, Lacton or Laghton in Le Morthing, Lindric, Loversal, Lumby, Malteby, Maniesh in Pecco, Marr, Mikelbrug or Mikelbring, Mulewrae, Neusom, Nottingham, Oversle, Oustrop, Rawmarsh, Riseby, Rokesby in Lindesay, Sandbec, Scauceby, Serlby in Nottinghamshire, Sezacres, Smetheton, Stainton, Styrup now Tristrop, Tatewic or Todewick, Thirnesco, Thorne, Tick-

hill, Tortheworthe or Torworth, Ulcotes, Waddesworth, Walkeringham, Well, Wellengly now Willingley, Wilgsic, Winttingham, and some small possessions of land at York.^l

Other benefactors, beside those already named, of consideration, were Richard de Vernun, William, earl of Ferrars, Nicholas de St. Poll, Henry de Arnethorpe, Robert son of Glai, John earl of Warren, Andrew de Lutterel, and Robert Fitz Pain.^m

In the 12th Hen. III. the king granted the monks here free warren in Roche, Arnethorpe, and Brentclive.ⁿ They had also a grant of confirmation from King Richard the Second, who to soc, sac, thol, theam, and infangtheof, exempted them from payment of toll throughout the kingdom.^o

ABBATS of ROCHE.

DURAND was the first abbat of Roche: he is called Frater Durandus in the "Successio Abbatum," printed in the Appendix, which Burton has interpreted into FRANCIS DURAND. He became abbat in 1147; and ruled the monastery twelve years.^p

DIONISIUS succeeded in 1159. He also ruled twelve years.^q

ROGER DE TIKEHILL became abbat in 1171. He ruled the monastery eight years.^r

HUGH DE WADDEWORTH succeeded in 1179: and ruled five years.^s

OSMUND, cellarer of Fountains, was the next abbat. He succeeded in 1184, and ruled thirty-nine years.^t

REGINALD, who became abbat in 1223, presided fifteen years.^u

RICHARD, who became abbat in 1238, presided sixteen years.^v

HENRY CUNDAL was the last abbat: at the time of the Dissolution he had a pension granted to him of 33*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*^a which he still enjoyed in 1553.^b He, with seventeen monks, surrendered this monastery to the king June 23, 1539.^c

The only spiritual possession belonging to Roche Abbey named in Pope Nicholas's Taxation, is the church of Haytefeld, which was appropriated, entered as of the annual value of 46*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* The total of the temporals amounted to 138*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.*^d

The site was granted in the 38th Hen. VIII. to William Ramesden and Thomas Vavasor.^f

No REGISTER of this Monastery is at present known to the Editors of the Monasticon.^g

For the SEAL, see Pegge on the Matrices of Conventual Seals, in the Archæologia of the Society of Antiquaries, vol. v. p. 349.

The RUINS of Roche Abbey are placed in a deep and narrow vale; they are not extensive; the chief remain being the ruin of the church, the architecture of which bespeaks the time of Edward the Second or Edward the Third. The abbey gateway, at a short distance, north-west from the church, appears to be of later origin; the arches, low and obtuse, designating it as of a date little earlier than the reign of Henry the Seventh.

The present owner of the site is the earl of Scarborough.

DUNSCROFT in Yorkshire was a CELL to ROCHE ABBEY. Of this Cell the Editors know little more than is in Bishop Tanner's Notitia Monastica; who says,

"Vide De la Pryme's History of Hatfield, MS. penes Joh. Warburton Somerset Heraldum, p. 85, 89.

"Sigillum hujus monasterioli æri incisum sumptibus Edw. Rowe Mores arm."

Nasmith adds in the margin below, "MSS. Notes of the late learned doctor Tanner. With the situation of this Cell I am unacquainted, but from the MS. History of Hatfield above referred to, it may be conjectured to have been placed in or near the parish of Haytefeld in the diocese of York, the church of which was given 19 Edw. III. to the Abbey of Roche, for the support of twelve additional monks, as MS. Dodsworth, vol. viii. p. 211.

It has been since ascertained that Dunscroft, which now contains farm-houses only, is in the township and parish of Hatfield.

ANTE tempus Willielmi Bastard in Angliam erat quidam dominus integer de maneriis de Elreton, et Tadewyks, qui vocabatur Symon filius Thorn. In cujus tempore venit Willielmus Bastard conquestor. Qui Symon habuit tres filias, et hæredes; videlicet Mariam, Matildam, et Cassandram. Quæ Maria fuit data et desponsata per conquestorem, cuidam Humfrido de Bassingburne, ac militi comitis de Westmorlandia. Et habuit dictus Humfridus, cum dicta Maria in hæreditate, totum dominium de Elreton, cum omnibus wardis, releviis, eschaetis, &c. De quibus domino Humfrido et Maria, venerunt duo filii, videlicet Mathæus, et Edwardus. Cui Mathæo, dicta Maria mater ejusdem, dederat et concesserat omnes terras, et tenementa quæ habuit in Elreton cum pertinentiis, excepto Galfrido Topynge nativo suo, cum sequela sua, cum uno tofto et crofto, et duabus bovatis terræ, quæ idem Galfridus tenet de ea in villenagio in eadem villa; habendum et tenendum prædictas terras et tenementa eidem Mathæo et hæredibus suis de corpore suo legitime procreatis de eadem et hæredibus suis; reddendo inde annuatim sibi, ad totam vitam suam viginti libras argenti ad terminos, in carta sua ei inde confecta contentos. Et etiam si obierit prædictus Mathæus, sine hærede de se legitime procreato, quod prædicta tenementa remanerent Edwardo fratri suo, et hæredibus suis de corpore suo legitime procreatis. Ita tamen quod si dictus Edwardus obierit sine hærede de se legitime procreato, quod ex tunc dicta tenementa dictæ Mariæ et hæredibus suis revertentur in perpetuum. Postea idem Mathæus, cum assensu et confirmatione Mariæ matris ejus, omnia prædicta tenementa, quæ habuit ex dono matris suæ prædictæ ut prædictum est, excepto bosco suo in eadem villa, dederat et concesserat per scriptum suum cyrograffatum, domino Asculpho de Clesby, et Asculpho nepoti suo, tenenda ad terminum vite eorum Asculphi et Asculphi, vel alterius eorum diutius viventis, tantum, sicut in scriptis cyrographatis, inter præfatum Mathæum, Asculphum, et Asculphum continetur. Qui verò prædictus Mathæus habuit tres filios, scilicet Hugonem, Andrigdam, et W. sed fuerunt extra matrimonium geniti. Tunc infra prædictos annos, discessit prædictus Mathæus ab hoc seculo. Et sic desiit sanguis dicti Mathæi de corpore suo legitime procreatus. Tunc venit superstes, et succedit in hæreditate junior frater, videlicet Edwardus. Qui Edwardus genuit duas filias et hæredes, scilicet Isabellam et Julianam. Prædicta verò Isabella senior soror, disponsata fuit Roberto, ac filio et hæredi Thomæ de Stanlay. De quibus venerunt tres filiae, scilicet Ydonia, Avicia, et Isabella, in matrimonio legitime procreatæ, quæ quidem Ydonia et Avicia infra duodecim annos, ab hoc seculo migraverunt ad Dominum, et tertia filia, scilicet Isabella, remanens ut hæres, desponsata, fuit W. ac filio T. Baldinsun, de quibus venerunt tres filii, et duæ filiae, scilicet Robertus, Nicholaus, Willielmus, Alicia, et Juliana, in matrimonio legitime procreati. Item Juliana junior soror desponsata fuit cuidam armigero, nomine Roberto, ac filio domini Willielmi de Haringeton. De quibus venerunt duo filii, et tres filiae in matrimonio legitime procreati; scilicet Jacobus, Andreas, Frethsand, Alicia, et Isabella, et sic remanet totum dominium de Elreton rectis hæredibus, E. filii Mariæ, ac uxoris domini Humfredi de Bassingburn.

Item de secunda sorore, scilicet Matilda, quæ fuit data et desponsata per dictum conquestorem cuidam Radulfo Tortemayns, ac armigero domini Lovetofte. De quibus Radulfo et Matilda, venit alius Radulfus Tortemayns filius et hæres, qui vendidit domui de Rupe parvam Tadewyke, et quicquid ad villam pertinet. Et de illo secundo Radulfo, venit W. Tortemayns filius et hæres, qui vendidit manerium de Tadewyke Radulfo Horebiry militi, de quo Radulfo venit dominus Johannes Horbiry filius et hæres, qui iterum vendidit prædictum manerium Edwardo Wastenays, qui modo est.

De tertia sorore, scilicet Cassandra, quæ fuit desponsata cuidam armigero, per prædictum dominum Lovetofte, W. de sancto Paulo nomine, de quibus W. et Cassandra, venit Nicholaus de sancto Paulo filius et hæres. Qui W. et Nicholaus contulerunt domui de Rupe totam terram suam inter Botyldewelewange, et grangiam, et totam dominationem, et omnia servitia pertinentia de septem bovatis terræ, et etiam totam terram et boscum et redditum quæ dirationavit de Michaele de Mawoners. Sallay, De Monte S. Andree, or Sawley Abbey,

In Craven, in the West Riding of Yorkshire,

SALLAY ABBEY was founded, according to Tanner, A.D. 1146-7,^a by William de Percy the third.^b By his first charter he endowed this place with lands in Sallaym, Dudeland, and Helwinesthorp, beside one carucate at Rimington;^c and, by a second grant confirming the same added Crochum and Stainton.^d Matilda de Percy, countess of Warwick, the daughter of William, sets forth in a charter which she granted to this House, that the monastery having stood above forty years in the place where it was founded, and being reduced to extreme want through the ill temperature of the air, which suffered nothing to thrive upon the ground, it had been resolved either to remove or destroy it: wherefore, to prevent its ruin, and that her father's charity might not be lost, she gave to the monks the church of Tadcaster, with the chapel of Heslewood, an annual pension from the church of Neuton, and one carucate of land at Catthor.^e This her grant was confirmed by Agnes Percy her sister,^f who by another deed gave to the monks two plough-lands at Litton, and liberty of grazing for six hundred sheep;^g confirming by a third grant the church of Tadcaster.^h Following these, in the Appendix, will be found another charter of William de Percy, called his fourth, again confirming his own and other benefactions.ⁱ A later confirmation from Henry de Percy, in the 7th of Edward the Second, has an earlier place.^k

The other grants given by Dugdale in the Appendix to this monastery are of a minor kind: they are from Robert, the sewer of William de Percy, Roisia de Kimbe, William Vavasor, Malger Vavasor, Richard Oterington, Robert Lacy, John, constable of Chester, and Henry de Puteaco or Pudsey.^a Confirmations from Robert, archbishop of York, and King Stephen, are also given,^b with a genealogy of the Percies from an ancient parchment formerly preserved in the tower of St. Mary's church at York.^c

In the Taxation of Pope Nicholas the Fourth there are two entries only relating to this monastery; one, of the church of Tadcaster appropriated to Sallay, valued at 36*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* the other of the temporalities of the monastery, amounting to 54*l.* 10*s.*^d

No return of Sallay occurs in the Valor of the 26th Henry VIII. except as follows:

"Decanatus de Craven.

"Monasterium Beatæ Mariæ de Sawley valet clare in spiritualibus et temporalibus per annum 147*l.* 3*s.* 10*d.* Decima inde 14*l.* 14*s.* 4*d.* ob." Speed places the gross amount at 221*l.* 15*s.* 8*d.*^e

BENEDICT is mentioned as the first abbat.

GALFRIDUS DE ESTON, A.D. 1186.

ADAM, t. Rob. de Lacy.

STEPHEN, 1210.

WARINUS, probably early in the 13th century.^f

H.^g apparently in the same century. He was perhaps the same person with HUGO, whom Whitaker, Hist. of Crav. p. 56, mentions in 1265.

B. occurs abbat in 1277.^h

THOMAS occurs abbat in 1278; and again 7 Dec. 1290.ⁱ

JOHN made his profession of obedience as abbat March 25th, 1303.^k He was probably the same person with

J. DE HOVEDEN, who occurs in the deeds of the 4th of Edw. II.^l Hoveden was absolved with some of his monks from a sentence of excommunication 13 kal. April, 1314.^m

JOHN DE HETON received benediction from the archbishop 6 non. May 1322.ⁿ Apparently another

JOHN occurs in the 45th Edw. III.^o

WILLIAM TRAFFORD was the last abbat. He was hanged at Lancaster for his opposition to the measures of the crown, in the suppression of the monasteries, in 1538.^w

No COMMON SEAL of this monastery has occurred to the Editors of the Monasticon. The arms will be found in the initial letter of this account. The house was dedicated to the Virgin Mary.

Copious extracts from the REGISTER of Sallay Abbey, now preserved among the Harleian manuscripts, Num. 112, will be found in the Appendix: and a detailed account of its contents below.^x

Tanner's references to other books, manuscripts, and records relating to this monastery are also given in a note.^y

The site of Sallay was granted in the 30th Hen. VIII. to Sir Arthur Darcy, knt. It belongs at present with the manor and demesnes to Lord Grantham.

Great part of the nave and transept of Sallay Church are yet standing. It was originally built in the form of a cross, without aisles. The gateway of the abbey is entire, converted into a cottage: and in the walls of the adjoining houses are several well-cut shields of Percy, Lacy, &c.

[Ex regist. de Sallei fol. 2 a.]

UNIVERSIS sanctæ matris ecclesiæ filiis, tam præsentibus quam futuris, Mathildis de Percy comitissa de Warwic, filia Willielmi de Percy et hæres, salutem. Noverit universitas vestra, quod pater meus abbatiam quandam Salleiam nomine fundavit in Cravena, in terra nebulosa et pluviosa, ita quod segetes jam albæ ad messem, per consuetudinem in culmo computrescant, et ubi conventus per quadraginta annos et ampliùs, propter aeris intemperiem, inedia, et omnium necessariorum inopia, attritus est, quod paupertatis eorum universitas, in contumeliam, et opprobrium patris mei, et omnium hæredum suorum redundat. Tandem verò cognita eorum paupertate, et causa paupertatis, per considerationem domini Clarevallensis abbatis et abbatum visitatorum, provisum fuit, ut memorata abbatia aut penitus destrueretur, aut per advocatum ejusdem loci, in aliquo ei, unde honestè sustentari possit, misericorditer provideretur. Inde est quod spiritu Dei provecta, et tacta dolore cordis intrinsecus, præfatæ abbatiae destructione, tùm super prædictæ abbatiae destructione tùm super prædicti conventus miseria, et tam victus quam vestitus inopia intollerabili; nolensque elemosinam patris mei pro toto deperire: invocato nomine qui quidem Willielmus fundavit abbatiam de Sallay et genuit Alanum, Matildem, et Agnetem, et sepultus est apud Whiteby. Alanus obiit sine hærede de corpore suo vivente patre suo, propter quod hæreditas dividebatur inter Matildem et Agnetem. Et Matilda prædicta fuit dispensata Willielmo comiti Warrewyk et qui obiit sine hærede de corpore suo exeunte vivente Agnete sorore sua; et prædicta Agnes fuit dispensata cuidam militi curiæ domini regis dicto Goselino Lovayn fratri Ducis Brabantie. De qua genuit Henricum et Ricardum fratrem ejus. Qui quidem Ricardus quia vir animosus erat intravit in purpartiam matris suæ vivente matre sua de consilio regis et permissione matris suæ sine aliquo jure hæreditario, et petebat totam hæreditatem sororis matris suæ prædictæ, et sic tenuit ad vitam suam. Et prædictus Henricus in vita Agnetis matris suæ genuit Willielmum, cui post mortem Agnetis aviæ suæ et Ricardi avunculi sui descendebat tota hæreditas integraliter; et iste Willielmus sepultus est apud Sallay. Et idem Willielmus genuit Henricum de Percy, Walterum, Willielmum, et Ingeramum. Et idem Henricus hæres et primogenitus ipsius Willielmi genuit Willielmum, Johannem, et Henricum, et sepultus est juxta patrem suum apud Sallay. Willielmus primogenitus obiit sine hærede de corpore suo, et descendit hæreditas Johanni tanquam fratri et hæredi, qui quidem Johannes obiit sine hærede, et sic descendebat hæreditas prædicto Henrico fratri suo, qui dedit abbatiam de Sallay advocacionem ecclesiæ de Gairgrave, et sepultus est apud Fontes. Et iste Henricus genuit Henricum et Willielmum. Qui quidem Henricus dispensavit Idoniam de Clifford, de quo genuit Henricum, et Willielmum, et Ricardum, Alianoram, Matildem et Isabellam. Iste Henricus primogenitus dispensavit Mariam filiam domini Henrici comitis Lancastrie. De qua natus est Henricus primogenitus suus, decimo die mensis Novembris, anno Domini millesimo trecentesimo quadragesimo primo, et Thomas secundus filius.

Deprædatio et Combustio Abbatie de Salleya per Scotorum exercitum.

[Ex Chron. de Whaley. V. de cart. 55 H. III. membr. 8.]

SANCTISSIMO patri in Christo et domino, domino J. divina providentia sacrosanctæ Romanæ ac universalis ecclesiæ summo pontifici, suus devotus filius E. Dei gratia rex Angliæ, &c. cum devotione pedum oscula beatorum. Cum non modicum arbitremur esse pietatis obsequium, honestos viros, religiosorum mores, et pia opera, digno testimonio veritatis extollere, ac pauperum ministrorum Christi defectus, et inopias maximas personis dignis et potentibus, sub spe recuperationis habendæ studiosius intimare, hinc auribus vestræ pietatis, fidei relatione, referimus per præsentem, quod monasterium de Salleya in Cravene, in Anglia, ordinis Cisterciensis, Eboracensis diocesis, quasi in abjectionibus, et ultimis totius regni nostri finibus, versus mare Hybernicum, in patria scilicet mirabiliter silvestri, et montuosa, ac nimia tempestatum frequentia, ferè sterili et infructuosa fundatum et scituatum, ex multis causis, et variis eventibus infortunis, maximè tamen, præ crudeli et inhumana omnium bonorum suorum mobilium deprædatione, ac quorundam locorum suorum horribili nimis combustione, quam in eos malignus Scotorum exercitus, per totam illam patriam (nobis absentibus) diffusus, nuper exercuit, ad tam profundam paupertatem, et inopiam desperatam, præter omnimodam occasionem suam, sint deducti, ac sine spe respirationibus suppeditati, ut nec ad suam propriam sustentationem, sicut deteret religiosos viros, et oporteret; nec ad confluentium ad eos, pauperum peregrinorum, et hospitem caritativam administrationem nisi citius eisdem subveniatur, de cætero, valere poterint vel sufficere; quod nobilis vir dominus Henricus de Percy miles, et baro præfati patronus monasterii oculata fide, perpendens et dolorosa pietate cordis commotus, intrinsecus, suique conventus expirationem, et progenitorum suorum elemosinam in alendis pauperibus, peregrinisque suscipiendis, non sustinens deperire, inspirante Deo, abbati et conventui monasterii prædicti, jus patronatus, et advocacionem ecclesiæ de Gergrave in spe appropriationis impetrandæ, pro dictis piis operibus finaliter sustinendis, liberaliter contulit, et concessit. Ad quam tandem semel vacantem, et scriptis nostris confirmatam, præfati abbas et conventus, ut veri patroni, et advocati legitime præsentarunt. Quapropter vestræ piæ paternitati, cum affectione, et humilitate qua possumus, devotè supplicamus, et attentè, quatenus dictorum monachorum nostrorum defectus, et extremas paupertates oculis vestræ bonitatis et compassionis intuentes, eisdem in sua petitione coram vestra dominatione prosequenda, intuitu Dei, et istarum precumstrarum instantia, ad præsens si placet, favorabiles existere dignemini, et gratiosi, ut dictam ecclesiam in proprios usus optinendam, cedente, vel decedente rectore, de gratia vestra speciali, vestra clementia eisdem concedere dignetur, et gratiosè conferre.

John Danere admitted for ever to partake of the prayers and good works of the monks of Sallay, and a mass to be constantly said for him and his relations.

[Stevens, Contin. Monast. vol. ii. pp. 49, 50.]

BE it known to all men by these presents, that we brother John abbat of Salley, and the convent of the same place, of the Cistercian order, in the diocese of York, considering in our beloved in Christ, John Danere and his progenitors, the charitable subventions made to our monastery, and the sincere ever availing devotions conceived in the same monastery, for the reverence of the glorious Virgin, in honor of whom it is founded, and the great confidence of their salvation which they have placed in our prayers, being excited by these pressing stings of charity, we have with unanimous consent, of our own will, gratis, and of our free motion, granted to the aforesaid John, to partake of all the good works which the goodness of our Saviour shall vouchsafe to perform by us, or the monks of the said house, to the end of the world. Adding, and of our special grace, that some monk of our house shall for ever be assigned to celebrate, especially for the aforesaid John and his kindred, William Barthaël, Thomas Malghum, John Malghum, Anabella Mhalghum, all their progenitors, and the souls of all faithful departed, excepting those weeks and times when the aforesaid monk is obliged to say his masses according to the rule of his order. And lest our aforesaid charitable grant should be obstructed, forgotten, or which God forbid, totally omitted by our successors, we do firmly oblige ourselves, and our successors, to observe the same in future times for ever, under the determination of the divine judgement, and being liable to be compelled by our visitor, and by any other ordinary superior judge of our order aforesaid. In testimony whereof we have affixed our Common Seal to these presents. Given in our Chapter House, on the feast of St. Peter ad Vincula, in the year of our Lord 1377.

Rufford, Ruchford, Rutherford, or Rumford Abbey,
IN NOTTINGHAMSHIRE.

RUFFORD ABBEY was founded by Gilbert, Earl of Lincoln, according to the Manuscript Chronicle of Louth Park, in 1146, according to the Chester Chronicle, cited in the Appendix, in 1148.^a It was dedicated to the honour of the Virgin Mary, and was supplied with inhabitants by a colony from Rievaulx Abbey.^b This monastery was at first endowed with all the lands of Rufford, and thirty acres upon the bank of the river Trent, as also the lands of Cratel, and others at Barton and Wilgeby.^c Robert de Gaunt, the brother of the founder, in a shorter charter, testified that his brother had given to the abbey all his lordship of Hicring.^d The other benefactors were Hugh, the son of Ralph de Wilchebi, Thomas, son-in-law to Robert Filioll, John Burdon, Thomas de Bella-aqua, Avicia, the daughter of Amice de Stoke, and Gilbert de Stoke, who gave various smaller parcels of land, which will be found enumerated in their respective charters.^e All these grants, with some others mentioned in his charter, were confirmed by King Henry III.^f Another confirmation is extant of the 21st of Edw. III.^g

The House and Site of Rufford Abbey, with all buildings and lands belonging to it, viz. three hundred and four acres of arable, and six hundred and forty of pasture, and sixty of meadow, and three water-mills, with the whole fishing, were, by indenture, under the Great Seal of the Court of Augmentations, bearing date March 20th, 28 Hen. VIII., demised to Sir John Markham, knt. and his assigns, for twenty-one years from the feast of St. Michael, then next following, paying 22*l.* 8*s.* per annum. In the 29th, however, of King Henry the Eighth, the same king, by his letters patent, exchanged this house and site, together with other lands, with George, Earl of Shrewsbury, for certain castles, lordships, and manors in Ireland. The possession of the site afterwards descended to the Saviles.^b

An Impression on green wax of the SEAL of the abbat of Rufford is attached to an Instrument without date, in the Office of the Duchy of Lancaster; it represents an abbat, with his crozier in one hand, and a book in the other; the legend is SIGILLUM : ABBATIS : RVFFORDIE.

Subsequently to the Dissolution a mansion-house of considerable size was erected upon and engrafted into the REMAINS of Rufford Abbey. This edifice, preserved with religious care, still belongs to the Savilles, the present owner being the Hon. and Rev. John Saville.

Saltrey or Sawtrey Abbey, in Huntingdonshire.

IMON Earl of Northampton, in 1146, brought hither a convent of Cistercian monks from the Abbey of Warden or Sartis in Bedfordshire, erecting a monastery for them here to the honor of the Virgin Mary.^a The earl endowed this monastery with the church of this place, all his lands here, and his fisheries at and about Witlemare, all which had belonged to him and his ancestors from the time of King Canute, and which had been exempted from all kinds of burthens by King William the Conqueror, King William Rufus, and King Henry the First.^b Malcolm King of Scotland also passed his grant as earl of Huntingdon for the said lands of Saltrey. This charter is dated at Roxburgh.^c

A Particular of other donations to this monastery, with the limits of the different lands, will be found, with the two preceding charters, in the Appendix:^d followed by the adjustment of a controversy between the abbats of Ramsey and Saltrey concerning their rights in Witlemere and Hulbemere, of the 3d of Rich. I.^e

An enumeration of the possessions of this monastery, as recorded in the Taxation of Pope Nicholas, A.D. 1291, will be found in the note.^f

The COMMON SEAL of this abbey was round, and the subject of it was the blessed Virgin with the infant Jesus on her lap, seated on an ornamented chair, under a rich gothic canopy between two pilasters, the centre of the seal diapered, the other parts plain, on the dexter side a vine, on the sinister a flower-pot, the legend thus: SIGILLVM. COMVNE. ABBATHIE. DE. SAUTREE. An impression of this seal on red wax is in the possession of Dr. Prattenton of Bewdley; it is attached to a conventual lease, dated in the eleventh year of Edward the Fourth.

At the Dissolution here were an abbat, twelve monks, and twenty-two servants.^a The revenues amounted in the gross to 199*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.*; the net income to 141*l.* 3*s.* 8*d.*^b

The site was granted in the 29th of Henry VIII. to Richard Cromwell, alias Williams.^c

The ABBEY BUILDINGS of Saltrey have been long destroyed.

OMNIBUS sanctae matris ecclesiae fidelibus Simon comes de Northampton salutem. Notum sit tam praesentibus quam futuris me dedisse et concessisse et praesenti carta confirmasse Deo et sanctae Mariae de Saltreia et monachis ibi manentibus, de ordine Cisterciensi, in perpetuam elemosinam, ad construendam abbatiam, tam ecclesiam ejusdem villae cum omnibus pertinentiis suis, (eamque pro hoc versus Rotbertum Lincolliae episcopum et personam ejusdem ecclesiae perpetualliter de me adquietavi ne quis in posterum inde contra eosdem monachos malignandi haberet facultatem aut quoquomodo eos inquietandi perciperet occasionem:) quam totam terram meam de ipsa Salterea et in bosco et in plano, et marisco et piscariis versus Witlemare et in ipso Witlemari, sicut juratum est ad feudum meum pertinere, et ab antecessoribus meis à tempore Cnut regis usque ad hoc nunc tempus meum habitum et libere possessum fuisse, et sicut idem Cnut rex ipsum mariscum singulis villis juxta mariscum in illa parte positus proprium mariscum dividi jussit et constituit per Turkillum Danensem qui ipsam Saltereiam ab eodem rege Cnut sibi datam, certis terminis ac divisis tam in bosco et plano quam in marisco usque in Witlemare et piscariam in Witlemare habuit et possedit in vita sua. Ita scilicet ut unaquaque villa usque ad terminos et divisas ejusdem Turkilli circa eandem Saltereiam in marisco tantum de marisco ipso ad usus proprios propriè haberet quantum firma terra cujusque villae mariscum contra se positum tangeret, et sicut pater meus Simon comes et mater mea Mathildis comitissa et sicut avi mei Wallevus comes et Judeta comitissa post conquestum Angliae diebus suis ipsam Saltereiam eisdem terminis ac divisis quibus Turkillus Danensis per donationem regis Cnut eam habuerat, in bosco et plano et marisco certis divisis usque in Witlemare et piscationem in Witlemare jure haereditario habuerunt et possederunt, cum omnibus libertatibus quas habuit villa eadem temporibus praedictorum antecessorum meorum, et omnibus aliis appendiciis suis, per terminos ac divisas suas, sicut fideles homines mei liberi et senes et in eadem villa nati, coram Alexandro Malfe per cujus manum praedictos monachos de tota Salterea insaisiavi juraverunt et propriis corporibus probare voluerunt, praedictos antecessores meos et sub ipsis se et patres suos à tempore Cnut regis ipsam meam Saltereiam integre tenuisse, sicut et idem Alexander Malfe scripto suo quod de eorum juramento atque responso fieri volui, ne oblivioni traderentur, testatur.

His itaque terminis ac divisis dedi prædictis monachis totam Saltereiam meam, cum omnibus libertatibus et appendiciis suis et rebus prænominatis, et concessi et præsentì carta confirmavi, quibus eam habuerunt et possederunt antecessores mei prædicti. Quare volo ut hæc omnia habeant et teneant et possideant, in puram et perpetuam elemosinam bene et in pace quiete et honorifice pro salute animæ meæ, et patris mei, et matris meæ, et uxoris meæ, et liberorum meorum, et omnium parentum meorum, libera et quiete et soluta de omni terreno servicio, et omni temporali exactione et omni seculari consuetudine versum me et hæredes meos et omnes homines, sicut et ego vel pater meus et mater mea, seu Wallevus comes et Judeta comitissa, vel quisquam antecessorum meorum cujuslibet regis tempore ipsam Saltereiam meliùs et quietiùs, propiùs ac liberiùs, longiùs et latiùs, per terminos prænominatos tam in bosco et plano, et marisco et piscaria in Witlemare, unquam habuimus et tenuimus, et ante conquestum Angliæ, vel post, jure hæreditario possedimus.

Sciendum vero quod Willielmus rex Angliæ adquisitor, per neptem suam Judetam, comitissam, quæ villam illam specialiter amavit et frequentavit, ipsam Saltereiam ab omnibus regiis consuetudinibus absolvit, etiam de murdris et danegeldis, et omnibus aliis, sic et filii ejus post eum rex Willielmus et rex Henricus, unde nec siram petit nec hundres, fractos pontes non restaurat, ad foresta dissoluta vel facienda nova non adjuvat. Ad bellum commune nec hominem, nec arma, nec sustentationem aliquam præbet. Vicecomitum vel justiciariorum seu præpositorum aut forestariorum quorumlibet regis ministrorum nullus præter forestarios et ministros antecessorum meorum à tempore quo Wallevus comes neptem regis Willielmi Judetam in matrimonio accepit, et præter ministros nunc meos de bosco sive de bestiis seu de rebus quibuslibet ad Saltereiam pertinentibus terminis prædictis comprehensis, se quicquam intromisit. Prædictorum etenim tempore regum antecessores mei omnes cujusque generis bestias agrestes infra terminos prædictos inventas liberè capiebant. Canum in ea pedes nunquam truncabuntur. Qui cum quadriga vel traga aut onere per licentiam forestarii de bosco fuisset egressus, inter boscum et illius hominis domum eum nullus inde inquietare vel disturbare ausus fuit per viam. Reos infra terminos prædictos interceptos ad siram vel hundres non mittit sed infra se præsentem curia domini sui iudicium de eis facit et justitiam. Optinuit enim eadem comitissa Judeta ab avunculo suo rege Willielmo concedentibus hoc post eum filiis suis regibus Willielmo et Henrico, villam illam cum multis aliis libertatibus habere in se sake et soke, tol et tem et infanganthef, nichilque consuetudinis temporalis vel serviçii secularis cuiquam hominum exhibere, nisi tantum dominis suis antecessoribus meis et michi illorum nunc hæredi. Si quis verò in posterum de quibuslibet horum sive de fossatis suis quæ jussi eos facere circa loca et habitacula sua, et de abbacia sua usque in Witlemare, seu ad quamlibet aquarum quæ mariscum quem eis dedi à marisco abbatum de Burch et Torneia et Rameseia dividit, infra terminos prænominatos prout sibi viderint melius congruere, prædictos monachos inquietaverint, ego et hæredes mei eos et hæc omnia eis warentizabimus et manu-tenebimus et defendemus sicut de eo debemus quod me jubente fecerunt in suo proprio et meo feudo. De placitis etiam omnibus quæ de horum quovis contra eos emergerint, ad baronatum meum eos defendere pertinet. Hanc autem donationem et libertatem et confirmationem Deo et sanctæ Mariæ et prædictis monachis versus omnes homines warentizabimus. Hoc autem totum factum est per manum abbatis de Sartis. NUM. III.

De Fundatione ejusdem et Terrarum Bundis.

OMNIBUS sanctæ matris ecclesiæ fidelibus Alexander Maufe salutem. Sciant omnes hoc scriptum attestationis meæ videntes audientesque, quando dominus meus Simon comes Northamptoniæ dedit monachis ordinis Cisterciensis pro construenda abbacia, in perpetuam elemosinam, totam terram de Saltereia in bosco et in plano et in marisco per proprias divisas cum omnibus aliis pertinentiis et libertatibus et quitantiis et omnibus aliis rebus prout meliùs et liberiùs et largiùs ipsam Saltereiam tenuit ipse et habuit, vel pater ejus Simon comes, vel avus ejus et avia, Waldevus scilicet comes, Judeta comitissa, et sicut Thurchillus Daneys cum Hurogonda uxore sua et alii prædecessores sui habuerunt et tenuerunt, et sicut Wilferus rex qui monasterium de Burch fundavit cartâ suâ quam de illa fundatione fecit mariscum cum stagnis et lacis, Chelwremare et Witlemare et aliis quamplurimis ad hoc pertinentibus dimisit, ipsam Saltereiam monachis prædictis dedit per proprias divisas, et carta sua confirmavit. Unde idem Simon comes monachorum paci et quieti et libertati providens, ut quamdiu hoc sæculum duraverit sciatur quomodo ipsam Saltereiam vel ipse vel antecessores ejus liberiùs et longiùs et largiùs tenuerit, præcepit mihi et Ricardo Walensi, qui per ejus præceptum prædictos monachos de ipsa Saltreya insaisavimus et tradidimus, ut faceremus homines ejusdem villæ jurare, quod verum dicerent, quibus terminis et divisis et libertatibus ipsi vel patres eorum sub dominis suis ipsam Saltreiam tenuerunt: sicque illi jurantes et post juramentum consilium secum habentes, et nominatim Levetus villæ præpositus qui prius juravit, et Humfridus de Huptona, et Willielmus de Aspes, et Lambertus et alii quamplures, post juramentum sic responderunt. Patres nostri qui in hac villa fuerunt tempore Turkilli Daneys et Huregundæ terram istius villæ istis terminis et divisis et libertatibus in bosco et plano et marisco, et Wittlesmere tenuerunt, sicut nos ab eis audivimus; et nos eorum filii sub Waldevo comite et Judeta comitissa, et Simone comite qui filiam prædictorum Waldevi et Judetæ cum toto feudo, per donationem regis Williel. qui Angliam adquisivit, in matrimonio accepit, et sub David rege Scotiæ, qui eandem eorum filiam Matildam post mortem Simonis comitis domini sui in matrimonium accepit, tempore regis Henrici, et huc usque sub domino nostro Simone comite, priore Simonis comitis filio, tenuimus, et ita terram istam supradictis dominis tentam esse et teneri debuisse, modo quem lex patriæ servaret, præsto essemus dirationare, si opus esset, et securè dirationare poterunt qui eam post nos tenuerint et habuerint.

His scilicet terminis tam de tota terra quam de toto bosco quæ vocatur Ewingeswode et marisco, et parte de Withlesmere, quibus terminis et divisis prædictorum dominorum tempore, et patres nostri et nos Saltreiam tenuimus; scilicet de Slakemare ut antiquitus dicebatur, quod ibi possunt quatuor domini super terram suam sedere, et de uno scuto comedere, inde usque ad summitatem collis corda tendatur, et quercus omnes quæ extra cordam inde ad divisum supra collem prætensam fuerint ad Saltreiam sint pertinentes; et sic per magnum divisum quod est inter Saltreiam et Saltre ultra collem usque ad permedium pontis parvi de Saltreia; et inde usque per medium locum qui dicitur Stonehille in directum, et inde in directum usque ad Grundlemare per medium, et inde in rectitudine qua corda tendi potest usque in exteriorem locum Swerdeshorde super Withlesmere.

Hoc est divisum antiquitus constitutum inter paludem de Saltre, et inter paludem de aliis villis a parte occidentali; ibi scilicet in Swerdeshorde super Withlesmere homo ad hoc electus infra aquam quò profundius poterunt intrare pedibus debet, et tunc amiratum unum octo pedibus longum de diverso se tota vi lanceando propellere, et quantum transnavit cum addito adhuc ultra spatio quadraginta pedum, quo signum fieri debet tantum de Withlesmere usque Chel-frebecche versus austrum cum omni in ea parte adjacenti marisco, inter comit. est quod habuit Turkillus et Huregunda, Waldevus comes et Judeta comitissa, Simon comes cum eorum filia Matilda. Rex etiam David cum eadem Matilda unam naviculam piscantem in Withlesmere dirationatam. Præter hæc omnes piscatores ejusdem maris, qui retia sua in hac parte maris siccabant, de captura sua sæpius in anno prædictis dominis præsentationem congruam faciebant. Hoc et oculis nostris tam de navicula quàm de piscatione et præsentatione vidimus, et sic ab orientali parte de Withlesmere, id est ab exitu versus Ramesiam per Cheluremerebeche usque ad Cheluremere, et inde per Ulbermerelada usque per de foris Ulbemere et Birchmere, scilicet ad exitum ejusdem Birchmere versus Walton, et ab illo exitu per transversum paludis usque ad tertium hassocum a firma terra, et in aquilonari fine de Hygeney, et sic per omnem tertium hassocum à firma terra circa Hygeney per denes-Hutshites usque in interiori fossato Edwini heremitæ versus Hygeney, ultra quod prædictus heremita pontem vertentem fecit: nam exterius quidem fossatum in marisco de Saltre pro pastoribus domum suam comburere volentibus cepit, sed prohibentibus et fugantibus eum inde hominibus de Saltre non profecit donec Berengarius Engayne illud fossatum exterius in marisco de Saltre ei pro numine suo facere permisit; et sic per illud interius fossatum usque in Hygeney-lade, et per Hygeney-lade usque ad Wilevestoc super Hygeney-lade prope terram, et sic per omne tertium hassocum usque ad Walton-holm, et sic per divisum quod est inter terras de Saltre et Walton usque ad boscum per intra Fisseresmere.

De his divisis hic nominatis sciendum est, quod tempore regis Henrici primi orta est inter nos et homines de Walton discordia, unde die constituto ad Wylawe convenimus, et alternatis rationamentis utentes, et nos nostris et illi suis consiliis adquiescentes, ne inde lis vel discordia oriretur inter nos, ita terminos nostros certificavimus; hominem unum statuimus pro signo in medio divisi sub bosco contra Fisseresmere, et alium ad Strache et tertium ad Walton-holm, et quartum ad Wilevestoc super Hygeney-lade, et sic de homine primo per singulos ad quartum in directum ambulantes, et sicut ambulavimus sic divisum inter nos et illos esse concessimus, cum prænominatis divisis inter mariscum nostrum et suum ultra Hygeney versus maria, sicque nos et illi ad Wilawe bene pacati discessimus. De Fisseresmere verò circa boscum, sicut Judeta comitissa illud boscum circumcludit sepe, et est de ipso Fisseresmere per divisum inter boscum de Saltre, et boscum de Waltone usque ad amulingum de Waltonbacch, et inde in directum rectitudine qua tenditur corda usque ad Pillescodeshude, et de Pilles usque ad Holstock ad Derneley-gate, et inde usque ad Stangate, et inde usque ad Grenehyrst, et inde per Stangate usque Copmanfordemere, inter boscum de Copmanfordemere et boscum de Saltrey usque ad Epaselcroft, per quercus exteriores, et inde per viam quæ dividit campos de Saltrey et Copmanfordesmere usque ad Slakemere.

Hiis terminis ac divisis quibus Turkillus Daneys Saltre certificavit et munivit, qui quia et censu suo et expensis suis tantum de marisco usque in Withlesmere per divisas prænominatas, et partem de Withlesmere et piscationem, ut prædictum est, sibi adquisivit, et disaisavit, et in vita sua cum pace tenuit, quantum de sicca terra habuit, et post eum

tenuerunt et habuerunt per easdem divisas benè et in pace et absque omni diminutione prædicti domini Waldevus comes et Judeta comitissa, Simon comes et eorum filia Matilda comitissa, David rex Scotiæ cum eadem Matilda, et sub ipsis patres nostri et nos usque ad hunc diem eam tenuimus liberam et quietam versus omnes homines de omnibus servitiis et exactionibus universis præter tantum versus dominos nostros prædictos, libera et quietam extitit hucusque villa sub ipsis de omnibus regni consuetudinibus et exactionibus, et de murdis et de danegeldis, ne quis schyram vel hundred petant vel ad pontem fractum de Hunteodon pro restauratione quicquam exhibuit, rei in ea inventi infra eam judicabatur, et iusti omnia patiebantur, canum pede in ea nunquam truncabantur, vicecomitum vel justiciariorum seu præpositorum aut forestariorum quorumlibet regis ministrorum nullus, præter forestarios et ministros prædictorum dominorum nostrorum, de bosco sive de bestiis se quicquam intromisit.

Scientes quod Willielmus rex Angliæ adquisitor pro neptis suæ comitissæ Johetæ amore, Saltreiam quam illa specialiter amavit et frequentavit, ab omnibus regis consuetudinibus absolvit, et omnibus exactionibus liberam et quietam esse fecit et concessit. Hoc idem fecerunt et concesserunt post eum filii ejus rex Willielmus et rex Henricus; unde et prædictorum tempore regum domini fundi cervos et cervas et omnes agrestes bestias infra terminos prædictos inventas eorundem regum concessione, et donatione, retibus et canibus et modis quibus volebant, libere capiebant, sed et infra terminos inventas et extra eorum venationem egressas libere persequabantur et capiebant, ubicunque attingere poterant. Hanc libertatem habebant domini fundi non solum a David regis tempore, sed etiam a conquestu Angliæ, quando de bosco nostro homines cum quadrigis vel tragis seu oneribus per licentiam forestariorum exibant inter boscum et eorum domum, nullus eos inquietare vel viam prohibere ausus fuit prædictorum tempore regum, infra prædictas divisas per regem Cnut a Turkillo Daneys in sicco et marisco constitutas, et a Waldevo comite et Joeta comitissa, et Simone comite et Matilda comitissa, et David rege et eadem Matilda comitissa, et domino nostro Simone comite liberè habitas et possessas liberè potuimus falcare et fodere, et per forestam domini nostri ligna cædere, et omnia nobis necessaria perquirere: extra verò hos terminos hoc, sine aliarum villatarum licentia, facere non potuimus, sicut nec ipsi infra nostros sine nostra licentia potuerunt, nec in marisco plusquam in bosco; sic enim Turkillus per regem Cnut constituit, ut nulla villata in alterius marisco foderet vel falcaret sine licentia; villis enim singulis juxta mariscum positas, per jussum regis Cnut ipse mariscum divisit, et quantum unaquæque villa de marisco in proprium habere debuit; ut videlicet quantum uniuscujusque villæ sicca terra de marisco tangeret, tantum usque ad terminos manerii sui de Saltre prænominatos, unaquæque villa in proprium haberet, tam pro pastura ad pascendum, quam ad falcandum et fodiendum. Pastores verò nostri super exteriores hassocos versus Walton inter pratium et mariscum debent stare et animalia sua usque ad pedes suos venire permittere.

Pro nimis verò et multis perturbationibus quæ per pastores inter villas acciderant, milites vicini hoc nostro tempore convenerunt; scilicet, Berengarius Engayne, Hervæus le Moygne, et Eustachius de Waltone, et dominus de Cunytune, et dominus de Glattone; et ut pastura eis esset omnibus communis, id est, cornu sub cornu pro pace et concordia inter se tuenda, per se sine scitu et permissu aliorum dominorum concesserunt. Hoc autem sciendum, quod homines abbatis de Thorney nihil omnino habere debeant in australi parte de Withlesmere sive Cheltiremerebeche vel Chelunmere nec quicquam proprium ibi unquam habuerunt. Robertus vero abbas de Thorney jure loquens, cum de comunione pasturæ verba apud aliquos movisset, die statuto convenerunt contra eum ad Withlesmerewilen validi et homines de Saltrey, Hervæus le Moygne cum suis de Saltrey, et ex singulis villis ex hac parte positas multi alii qui cum in aquilonali parte de Beche sedens inde abbas ille causaretur, ut nostrorum in australi parte Beche sedentium rationamentis et veris antiquitatis ostensionibus suis causatio adnullaretur, in hoc gaudebant, quod eorum rationamentis suum esse mariscum in parte tantum aquilonali usque Chelunmerebeche advertit; sicque discedenti ab omni causatione, vera rerum ostensione deinceps omnino cessanti, Hervæus le Moygne pater Oliveri dixit abbati Roberto, de aliorum paupertate hic tuas divitias non potes multiplicare; sicque discessit, et quia tunc rerum veritatem didicit, ejus causatio inde adnoluta remansit, nec inde nos ultra convenire voluit. Præter hoc nullis prædictorum dominorum temporibus nunquam inde causationem à quoquam hominum audivimus, neque patres nostri à tempore Turkilli Daneys. His itaque terminis et libertatibus tenuerunt et habuerunt Saltereiam prædicti domini nostri usque ad diem hunc, et hæc ita fuisse, si fuisset opus propriis corporibus probaremus, et securè probare possunt, qui eam post nos habituri, et possessuri sunt. Post juramentum quod prædicti homines sub bosco ad Stangate fecerunt, hoc responderunt. His igitur terminis et divisis et omnibus libertatibus jussu domini mei Simonis comitis, monachis de Saltreia in saisinam tradidi in perpetuam elemosinam possidendis, et in abbatiam construendam. Sed quoniam nova vetera a memoria expellunt, et per veterum negligentiam alii aliena sibi quasi in juris possessionem convertunt, ne monachos nuper insaisiatos aliquis de his, quæ infra terminos prænominatos perceperunt inquietet, in monasterio de Burch, quod quidem multis annis antequam Thorneya vel Ramesia vel Croylandia fundata fuit, quæsitum est, et in carta Wlferi regis, qui illud fundavit, inventum, quomodo mariscus etiam ab initio christianitatis fuit divisus, in qua carta confirmante papa Agathone præcepit idem rex ut abbas de Burch, et habitatores Huntingdoniensis provinciæ debeant et mariscum et aquas medium parti. Cum enim terminos eorum ab aqua quæ Bradenea nomine vocatur, usque ad Pakkelode descripsissent, præcepit et sic in medium partitis stagnis plurimis et immensis paludibus cum habitatoribus Huntingdonensis provinciæ, una cum stagnis et lacis Chalveremere et Whitelemere et aliis plurimis ad hæc pertinentibus, cum terris quoque et mansionibus quæ jacent in australi parte Chalveremere. Manu igitur mea monachos de Saltrey insaisavi, et insaisatione illa præsentiscripto sigillo meo signato in ævum contestor, unde et hæredibus meis præcipio quod de his quæ dicuntur loco mei pro tuitione monachorum securè faciant, quicquid ego, si opus fuisset facere debuissim. Huic juramento et responso et insaisationi et traditioni præsentis testes in villa tunc fuerunt Malgerus presbiter, Ricardus Walensis, &c.

Cirographum de Lada Monachorum apud Walton.

[Ex registro de Ramesey, fol. 38 b.]

HÆC est finalis concordia facta in curia domini regis apud Hunteton in octavis assumptionis beate Mariæ, anno regni Ricardi tertio, coram Gaufrido filio Petri, et Osberto filio Hervæi, et Willielmo Ruffo, et Michaele Beleth, et Willielmo filio Ricardi, et Simone de Pateshill justiciariis domini regis, et aliis fidelibus domini regis ibi tunc præsentibus, inter abbatem de Ramesia, per Walterum de Stivecle senescallum ejusdem abbatis positum in loco suo in curia domini regis ad lucrandum vel perdendum, et abbatem de Saltreia et conventum utriusque loci per Rogerum celerarium de Saltreia, et fratrem Willielmum monachum positos in loco ejusdem abbatis in curia domini regis ad lucrandum vel perdendum, de marisco inter Withlesmare et Ulbemare, unde placitum fuit inter eos in curia domini regis, scilicet quod omnes ladæ quas monachi de Saltreia fecerant in illo marisco obstupabuntur, excepta illa magna lada quæ vadit de Withlesmare versus Saltreiam, quæ remanebit aperta, per quam ipsi monachi de Saltreia adducent lapides et cætera necessaria ad constructionem monasterii sui et aliarum officinarum suarum, et monachi de Saltreia habebunt unam parvam casam tantum super ipsam ladam, in qua adductores lapidum quiescere possunt cum opus fuerit, et nullam aliam casam nec domum in marisco illo facient præter illam solam, nec arbores plantabunt, nec curtilagium, nec ladas nec trencheias ulterius facient ibi, nec patientur ut piscatores sui intrent in maras monachorum de Ramesia piscandi causa. Pratum quoque quod Willielmus Brito falcare solebat quietum remanebit abbati et monachis de Ramesia. Ita quod omni tempore quo prata in defensione esse solent et debent, fratres Saltreie averia sua ab illo custodient, nec illud scienter depasci sinent. Custodient etiam averia sua ne dampnum faciant in retibus piscatorum de Ramesia, quæ suspendi solent juxta maras de Hulbemare et de Withlesmare, et si dampnum fecerint fratres de Saltreia, solvent dampnum, sicut piscatores de Ramesia probare poterint per testes et per juramentum.

Kirkstall Abbey,

In the Deanery of Skyrak, and West Riding of Yorkshire.

KIRKSTALL ABBEY has had its history so copiously treated by Dugdale, Stevens, Thoresby, and Burton, that little additional matter of importance can be expected from Sir William Dugdale's present editors.

Henry de Lacy, A. D. 1147, placed at Barnoldeswick, on the Lancashire side of Yorkshire, a convent of Cistercian monks from Fountains, who, having struggled with great inconveniences for several years, at last desired to be removed to a place in Aierdale, called Kirkstall, which their founder procured for them of William of Poictou, and where they settled and began to build a fine abbey, A. D. 1152, to the honor of the blessed Virgin Mary.

The details of the foundation of this monastery at both places will be found in the Appendix, Numm. I. II. together with two charters of Henry de Lacy, Numm. III. IV. and a history of the Lacies as patrons of the abbey.^a

Hugh Bigot, earl of Norfolk, claiming the monastery of Bernoldeswic as its superior lord, was first prevailed upon to let it be held by the abbey by a payment of five marks per annum, but afterwards remitted the payment, and gave the land to be held freely by the monks.^b

During the time of the first abbat, that is before the year 1182, the church of Kirkstall, the two dormitories, one for the monks and the other for the lay brethren, the refectory, the cloister, the chapter-house, and the requisite offices for the establishment appear to have been completed: a progress not often made, it is probable, in so short a time in the construction of a large monastery.^c

Burton has given an alphabetical list of the places wherein the lands of this monastery lay, together with the names of the donors. The places were Adle, Aldefeld,

By inquisition taken 7 Edw. III. it was found that the monks of Kirkstall had been unjustly dispossessed of lands appertaining to their manor of Bernoldeswick, the gift of their founder, Henry Lacy, lord of Blackburnshire, by Henry Lacy, Earl of Lincoln; which Blackburnshire afterwards falling to the king, the said lands had also been unjustly detained by the crown; wherefore the jurors thought they might, without prejudice to any person, be restored to the monastery.^b are given in the note below, from Stevens's Continuation of Dugdale, for the sake of compression:^c but as the exact dates of their appointments are omitted, it seems necessary

Thoresby's Lives of the

^a Num. VII.

^b See Num. V. Besides the Deeds quoted by Stevens from Mr. Thoresby's Manuscripts (see the Numbers in the Appendix XIII. to LII.) he has given the following, in an abridged form in English.

"William, the son of Hugh Lelay, gave to the Knights Templars six plow-lands at Horsford, with their tofts, which gift was confirmed by his son Hugh; and brother Aimeric of St. Maura, minister of the Templars in England, with the consent of his brethren in Yorkshire, resigned and quitted claim to the same six plow-lands to the abbat and convent of Kirkstall.

"William, the son of William, the son of Hugh Lelay, gave to God and St. Mary and the monks of Kirkstall all the land he had at Horsford, with the men on it, and all their followers, in perpetual alms, without any service or demand; and William, the father of the aforesaid William, by his deed confirmed the said gift of his son. By another deed, William, the son of Hugh Lelay, grants to the said monks two carucates of land at Horsford. There follows another deed of Hugh Lelay, the son of William, granted by William as aforesaid.

"By another deed William Lelay gave to the same convent, together with his body to be buried, 10 plow-lands, with their appurtenances at Horsford, being all his land at Horsford, except the six plow-lands he had given to the Templars, and which we have seen above they also gave to the said monks, with all the men on them and their families, and all their chattels, free from all service and demand. Adam, the son of Adam, the son of Hugh Lelay, gave to the same monks two carucates of land at Horsford, with appurtenances within and without the town. All these several deeds are without date, but witnessed by many persons.

"Adam Fitz-Peter gave to the nuns and canons of St. Gilbert, of Sempringham, at Haverholm, one carucate of land at Horsford, and two carucates of land and a mill at Kikeley, all which the said nuns and canons made over to the monks of Kirkstall, who were to pay them 4*l.* a year for the same, and this contract was confirmed by the donor Adam Fitz-Peter, which three deeds may be seen where we speak of the Order of Sempringham.

"Walter Fitz-Nigell, of Horsford, gave to the monks of Kirkstall eleven acres and one rood of land in the territory of Horsford, and all the land of Nethergill, and one house with a garden, &c.

"William Pouill gave to the same monks one toft in the town of Horsford, with a house standing in it.

"Robert Pouell gave to them two plow-lands, with their appurtenances, in the town and territory of Horsford.

"Robert, the son of William Britton, of Pouill, gave to the same monks half an acre of land at Horsford.

"Vincent Bracewell, and his wife Sibill, gave to the same monks one acre of land in the territory of Horsford.

"Ralph Maleverer granted and confirmed to the same monks all the land they had at Horsford, with the appurtenances belonging to his fee of the gift of Robert Fitz-Hubert for ever.

"Nigell, of Horsford, gave one essart at Horsford.

"Thomas, the son of Nigell, of Horsford, assigned Thomas Green, of Horsford, and his heirs and assigns, to pay for him and his heirs for ever to the same monks 4*s.* 6*d.* out of 5*s.* the said Green and his heirs were to pay to him and his heirs for two plow-lands.

"William Horbery and John Chapman granted and confirmed to the monks all the lands, tenements, meadows, woods, and pastures, with their appurtenances, which they had in the town and territory of Horsford, of the gift and fee of Hugh Green.

"Note that this deed is dated the 7th of April, in the year of our Lord 1392, and the 15th of King Richard the II*d.* after the conquest, whereas all the others before have no dates.

"Adam, the son of William le Vute, gave to the same monks all his meadows, with appurtenances, at Welkar —, in the territory of Horsford.

"Adam, the son of William Huritte, gave two acres of land in the territory of Horsford, on the east side of that town, at the place called Windeketecliffe, with their appurtenances.

"Elizabeth, the daughter of Thomas Bendy, of Horsford, gave a messuage, a toft, and two plow-lands, with the meadows, woods, and pastures, and their appurtenances.

"Roger Cook, of Kirkstall, gave to the monks of the same place two messuages and two plow-lands and seven acres, with all their appurtenances in the town and territory of Horsford.

"Maude, the daughter of Hugh Burre, released and quitted claim to the abbat and monks of Kirkstall of all demands or suits she might have on the lands and tenements, &c. which her father, Hugh Burre, once held in the town and territory of Horsford. This release dated at Kirkstall, on the feast of the Assumption of the blessed Virgin Mary, in the year of our Lord 1306."

^c Stevens, Contin. vol. ii. p. 37, speaking of the former edition of this work, says

"The Monasticon, vol. i. p. 854. in the history of the foundation of this monastery, mentions only Alexander, Ralph, Lambert, and Helias, whom he makes the fourth, but in the manuscript, communicated by that learned antiquary Ralph Thoresby, of Leeds, in Yorkshire, Esq. I find Turgisus the fourth abbat, and Helias the fifth. I shall therefore give them in the same order I find them in the said manuscript, saying the less of the first of them, in regard that so much is said of him in the Monasticon.

"1. ALEXANDER, prior of Fountains, was the first abbat of Kirkstall, and underwent all the toils and difficulties of a new foundation, coming from his settled monastery to establish this with 12 monks, and 10 lay-brothers, on the 14th of the calends of June, in the year 1147, Henry Murdac, who had before been abbat of Fountains, being then archbishop of York, and a great favourer of this new monastery. Alexander governed the monastery 35 years, a true abbat not only in name but in reality, and being in a good old age, dying was succeeded by the venerable

"2. RALPH HAGETH, before monk of mountains, prior of the same place, a religious man, and renowned for all sanctity, a lover of justice, and most zealous for his order. Being made abbat, he began to act vigorously according to his power, having indeed a good will, but not so much regarding the poverty of the house, much extending himself beyond what a small competence would allow. He found the house neither very wealthy nor involved in debt, and likely to do well and prosper in its way, if providence were not wanting. He wanted not temptations in his government; God, as is believed, so ordering, that he might learn by a little how to act in greater matters. Many tribulations came upon him; contentions abroad, apprehensions at home, mortality among the cattle, tearing away of his possessions, want of necessaries, scarcity of victuals. About this time was taken away the grange of Mickelthwayte, the greatest and best support of the monastery, for King Henry, being ill advised by his counsellors, in hatred to Roger Mowbray, caused them to be dispossessed, that grange having been before of his fee, and he gave the grange, with its appurtenances, and all the fee of Collingham and of Bardsey, to Adam Bruis, in exchange for the castle of Danby, which the said king had before taken from him. There was therefore no small trouble among the brethren; some interpreting the unlucky events of things according to their fancies, charged all cross accidents, and the whole misfortune of the house on the abbat, blaming him for the loss of the grange, and their being robbed of some sacred vessels, viz. a gold chalice, and the text of the gospels, which he, with a good intention, had given to gain the king's favour, and recover the grange; but his conscience being clear, he patiently bore whatsoever was cast upon him, and by his great faith overcame the assaults of adverse fortune. At length the monks were dispersed about into the neighbouring houses of the order, as well by reason of the difficulties they were reduced to by poverty, as chiefly because they hoped by these means to incline the prince to compassion; but this was in vain, for the king's heart was hardened, and he always protracted that affair with empty promises, till being snatched away, the abbat lost all hopes, and he the power of showing mercy. The abbat therefore coming to himself, relied on the advice of his brethren, and moderated the expenses as was requisite, he more diligently managed the affairs of the house; nine years he lived at Kirkstall, continually struggling with the difficulties of poverty, and being thence translated, took upon him the government of the church of Fountains. His successor was

"3. LAMBERT, a man of extraordinary innocency and simplicity, and one of them that were sent out of the house of Fountains under the abbat Alexander; having been 42 years in the order, he never had any hand in their temporal affairs, but always leading the life of the cloister, sate with Mary at the feet of our Lord, to hear the word of him. When made abbat, he ordered no temporal affairs of himself, but committing all to God, relied on the advice of the brethren, and the Lord was with him. There was in those days peace among the brethren, with virtuous

concord, a sufficiency in temporals, in spirituals a pious and religious emulation. But that he might not want some temptation for his advantage, it happened that a certain knight, by name Richard of Eland, claimed to himself the grange of Clivacher, and the abbat understanding that the knight justly claimed it, he resigned the said grange to his patron Robert Lacy, having the village of Akerington given him in exchange. This village, removing the inhabitants, he converted into a farm or grange, to serve for the use of the monastery, if he had possessed it in peace; but some wicked neighbouring inhabitants, whose predecessors had formerly been possessed of Akerington, by the instigation of the devil, burnt the grange with all its furniture, and cruelly murdered three lay-brothers, viz. Norman, Umfridus, and Robert, who managed the grange. The abbat grieved at this unlucky accident, recommended the souls of the deceased to God, and committed their bodies to the grave. Then repairing to Robert Lacy, the patron of his house, he recommended his cause to him with tears. That noble man being provoked by such great presumption, took in hand the malefactors, and banished not only them, but all their relations, till falling down at the abbat's feet, by permission of the lord Robert Lacy, they made satisfaction to God and the brethren for so enormous a sin; they also swore to abjure the said grange, for themselves and their successors, resigning to God, and the monks, all the rights they had therein, and giving money over and above for the damage they had there done. Peace being made with their adversaries, the abbat rebuilt the grange that had been destroyed, and having fitly finished all things, he also finished his course in a good old age, the 30th year of his stewardship. Upon his death succeeded

"4. TURGESIUS, abbat of holy memory, a man of singular abstinence, and most severe chastiser of his body, being always clothed in sackcloth, to suppress the unlawful motions of the flesh by harsh clothing, carrying in his mind those words of the Gospel, 'They that wear soft clothing are in kings' houses.' His garment at all times was but one cowl, and one tunic, without any addition; he had no more in winter and no less in summer. Thus he yielded to neither season, so that you would neither think him to be chilled with the cold, nor inflamed with the heat. In the dead of winter, when the sharpness of the cold was most vehement, he never took care for any defence against the hardness of the weather; he would not wear socks upon his feet, nor permit straw to be laid for him to lie on. He stood at the night watches, when we having double garments on were almost frozen stiff, as if he felt no uneasiness, and we say that he repelled the cold of the season with the ardour of the inward man. No man pleasanter than he, none more temperate; he never tasted wine, unless in those parts where no other drink can be found. There is no need to talk of flesh, fish he permitted to be set before him, for the sake of those that sate by him, only to look at, not to eat. He was frequently weeping and in compunction, when discoursing he seldom refrained from tears; never at the office of the altar without devotion, never said mass without tears, whereof he shed so great a flood, that he did not seem to weep but to rain down tears, inasmuch that the sacerdotal vestments he wore could scarce be used by any other. Having spent nine years at Kirkstall, and returning to Fountains, he made an happy end, and rested in peace. The Monasticon wants this abbat, and makes his successor the fourth, whom the learned Mr. Browne Willis has also followed; but this is as we have found it in the ancient manuscript above mentioned, and so we proceed to his successor,

"5. HELIAS, of worthy memory, formerly monk of Rupe, an industrious man, and well versed in temporal affairs, having taken upon him the charge of the government, had enough to do according to time and place, to gather what had been scattered, and to preserve what had been gathered, and the Lord was with him. Nor did he want tribulation at his first promotion; for the noble Roger Lacy, patron of the monastery, being ill advised by some persons, conceived so much anger against the said abbat, that he would not vouchsafe to see nor admit him into his presence; but the Lord, in whose hand are the hearts of princes and their counsels, assuaged his passion and rancour, and converted it into perfect favour and affection, for he afterwards was very familiar and intimate with the abbat, and not a little promoted the affairs of the house. The abbat therefore relying on the grace of God and his patronage, had recourse to King John about the grange of Mickethwaite, which his father King Henry had formerly taken from the monks. He was assisted by Roger Lacy, constable of Chester, and all the great men of the court who were his friends; but the king would not by any means consent to grant the grange, unless he would take the manor, an appurtenance whereof it was, to a farm as a fee. Being reduced to this necessity, he took the aforesaid grange, with the manors of Coltingham and Bardsey, to farm as a fee at the king's hand, paying yearly fourscore and ten pounds, as the king's charter testifies. In his days the rock of Adle was added to the monastery of Kirkstall, and the town of Allerton, viz. half a knight's fee, with some other places. In his time also was taken away the grange of Hoton, by the violence of King John, and the land of Thorpe, granted to one Laurence, clerk of Witon.

"6. RALPH, of NEWCASTLE, succeeded him, and died in the reign of King Henry III. on the 9th of the ides of April.

WILLIAM DE LEDES, March 6th, 1269.

"7. WALTER was the next, in the reign of King Henry the III., and died on the 2d of the ides of October.

"8. MAURICE succeeded in the year 1222, and died in the year of our Lord 1249, on the 7th of the calends of April, in the reign of King Henry the III.

"9. ADAM succeeded him on Friday sevensnight after Easter, the same year.

"10. HUGH MICKELAY was created the 17th of the calends of April, 1159, and died on the calends of June, 1262, in the reign of King Henry the III. His successor was

"11. SIMON, created the 15th of the calends of June in the same year, died the 13th of the calends of March, 1269, and the 53d of King Henry the III. He was succeeded by

"12. WILLIAM LEEDES on the 2d of the nones of March, being then a Thursday, the same year, and was abbat till the Assumption of the blessed Virgin Mary, in the year of our Lord 1275. After whom

"13. GILBERT DE COTLES was created on the morrow after the octave of the Assumption of the blessed Mary, the same year, was abbat three years, one month, and four days. He was also created a second time, on the second of the ides of December, and was abbat till the feast of St. Peter ad Vincula 1280. Then

"14. HENRY KARR was chosen, on the eve of St. Andrew the apostle, the same year. And next

"15. HUGH GRIMSTON was created on the day of St. Lambert bishop, in the year of our Lord 1284, and died in the year 1304, on the calends of May, the 32d year of the reign of King Edward the First. The state of the house of Kirkstall at the time of the creation of the lord Hugh Grimston, abbat, on the day of St. Lambert, bishop and martyr, anno Domini 1284, imprimis, draught oxen 16, cows 84, yearling and young bullocks 16, asses 21, sheep none. The debts which are certainly due, by a recognizance made before the Barons of the Exchequer, 4402l. 21s. 7d.* Besides the writings, lying in the custody of the society, of James de Fistolis of 500 marks; besides one writing, in the hands of the abbat of Fountains, of the abbat Henry of 50 marks; besides 59 sacks of wool, and 9 marks due to Bernard Talde; and besides the acquittances in the hands of John Saclden for 340 marks. In testimony whereof we the brothers, and Henry, called abbat of Fountains, have affixed our seal in these presents.

"The sum of all the debts 5248l. 15s. 7d. besides 59 sacks of wool.

"The following appears to have been the state of the abbey of Kirkstall at the visitation on the Sunday next before the feast of St. Margaret the Virgin, in the year 1301. Imprimis, draught oxen 216, cows 160, yearlings and bullocks 152, calves 90, sheep and lambs 4000. The debts of the house 160l. In testimony hereof Richard abbat of Fountains affixed his seal.

"16. JOSEPH BRIDESAL succeeded Hugh Grimston in the year of our Lord 1304."

"Thus far we have followed the manuscript of Mr. Thoresby; we must now borrow the following abbats from the second volume of that great antiquary Browne Willis, Esq.'s History of Abbeys, p. 276: they are as follows.

"Mr. Willis makes Joseph Bridesal, last abovementioned, the 15th abbat: the reason of the disagreement has been above shown to be his omitting (as the Monasticon does) Turgesius, the fourth abbat. And now again, Mr. Willis says that this Joseph Bridesal was substituted abbat in the room of Hugh Grimston, who he also tells us was created abbat in the year 1304, and either died or surrendered the same year; whereas it appears by the aforesaid manuscript of Mr. Thoresby, that Grimston was elected abbat in the year 1284, and died in 1304. Thus mistakes seem to be rectified, and we go with Mr. Willis's catalogue, wherein the next abbat is

"17. ROGER DE LEEDES, confirmed abbat the 15th of December, 1349. He was succeeded by

"18. WILLIAM GRAYSON, and he by

"16. THOMAS WYMBERSLEY, confirmed in this abbacy the 6th of April, 1468, vacant by the death of his predecessor Grayson. Here must of necessity be another error, for Roger Leedes is set down confirmed in the year 1349, then succeeds William Grayson, and next to him this Thomas Wymbersley in 1468; by which the two abbats Leedes and Grayson must be made to hold that dignity from 1349 to 1468, that is for the space of 119 years, which is not only improbable, but almost impossible; so that in all likelihood the catalogue must be there imperfect. But we will proceed to the next, who was

"20. ROBERT KELYNBECK, elected the 21st August, 1499. He presided not above two years, and was then succeeded by

"21. WILLIAM STOCKDALL, on the 10th of December, 1501, and he by

"22. WILLIAM MARSHALL, on the 5th of December, 1509, and he by

"23. JOHN RIPLEY, the 21st July, 1528, the last abbat, whose name I also conceive, was Browne, for one John Browne is said to have surrendered this convent, 22d November, 1540, 31 Henry VIIIth, and to have had a pension of 66l. 13s. 4d. per annum assigned him at the Dissolution, which he enjoyed anno 1553."

* The 21s. are so in the manuscript, that is, thus, xxis. Perhaps there may be one x too much, and then it would be but 11s.

ROGER DE LEDES was made abbat Dec. 15th, 1349.

JOHN DE THORNBURG, according to Whitaker in his History of Craven, occurs in 1378.

JOHN DE BARDSEY occurs in 1396, and again in 1399.

In 1291, the temporalities of this monastery appear to have been valued at 68*l.* 5*s.* 8*d.*^b

Tanner says that a later time it was endowed, according to Dugdale, at 329*l.* 2*s.* 11*d.* per annum; according to Speed, at 512*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* No return, however, of its possessions occurs in the Valor so often quoted.

time, says, "By the ruins it appears to have been a stately fabrick. There were at the east end of the church seven altars, as appears by the distinct chapels, three on each side of the high altar; but to what saints dedicated, I cannot learn; nor is there any assistance from the chronicle of Kirkstall, as it is called in Sir John Cotton's famous library, which was only so denominated because it once belonged to Kirkstall library, but has nothing in it relating to the same. The roof has been off the church ever since the dissolution of the house; but the dortor, or dormitory, and some other places that have been converted to private uses, are covered. The tower also, which was built in Henry the Seventh's time, is perfect, the stone smooth and good. Whatever was the primitive state of the place, (for the Cistercian monks always founded their monasteries in places that had never before been cultivated or inhabited), it was afterwards a most pleasant seat, adorned with gardens, dovecotes, &c. and whatever was either for use or ornament, and all conveniently seated on the banks of a delicate river, calm and clear, which perhaps has contributed to the general misnomer of the place, which is frequently called Christall instead of Kirkstall, not only by the vulgar, but some persons of more liberal education, and by that name printed in the best maps that were ever made for the county. Some historians also, and particularly Baker, Bale, and Selden, confound this place with Kirkstede in Lincolnshire, as may be seen in the Monasticon; and the animadverter on Baker has not taken notice of this error; the true name being Kirkstall, from kirk a church, and stall the seat."

The following is Doctor Whitaker's account, in the second edition of the History of Craven, 4to. 1812:

"Among the monastic remains in the north of England, Kirkstall may claim the second place, whether it be considered as a feature in a landscape, or as a specimen of architecture. In the former view, it must perhaps yield the palm to Bolton; in the latter, indisputably to Fountains.

"The lead and timber only were removed at the Dissolution; and nearly the whole building yet remains, with few additions to the structure of abbat Alexander; and fewer losses by removal or decay.

"The whole exhibits that struggle between the Norman and early Gothic styles which took place in the reign of Stephen. The windows are single, round-headed lights; the doors are of the same shape, adorned with zig-zag or rectangular mouldings; the columns of the church massy, but clustered with pointed arches and with Saxon capitals, each varying in pattern from the rest. The cloister quadrangle, with the various apartments surrounding it, is nearly entire. The original refectory (for there is another of much later date) has been a magnificent vaulted room, supported on two fine cylindrical columns, each of a single stone. The chapter-house is partly of the original structure, and partly an enlargement, little prior to the Dissolution. The tower, according to the practice of the twelfth century, was carried at first little higher than the roof; and a lofty and graceful addition made to it, apparently about the time of Henry VII. so loaded the columns on which it stood, that, about twenty years ago, the north-west pillar suddenly gave way, and drew after it an enormous ruin of two sides of the whole tower; which has, perhaps, contributed to the picturesque effect of the whole. The cloister court was the monks' cemetery."

ANNO M.cxlviij. incarnationis Dominicæ, homo quidam nobilis, Henricus de Laceio nomine in territorio Eborac. monasterium ordinis nostri suscepit construendum, assignat locum, erigit officinas, et mittitur ad eum monachorum conventus sub abbate Alexandro. Iste Alexander unus erat ex primis patribus nostris, frater uterinus domini Ricardi abbatis de Fontibus, qui apud Claram-Vallem (ut dictum est) quievit in pace. Inter hos monachos ego Serlo emissus sum, homo jam decrepitus, ut ipse vides, et ætate confectus. Locus habitationis nostræ primò Bernolswic dicebatur, quem nos mutato nomine, montem S. Mariæ fecimus appellari. Mansimus ibi per aliquot annos multa perpessi incommoda famis et frigoris, tum quia turbato regno bona nostra multoties diriperent grassatores, tum propter aeris inclementiam, et imbrium importunitatem, qui in finibus illis, ut nosti, et fruges destruunt et habitatores reddunt egenos. Displicuit proinde nobis locus habitationis nostræ, et abbatia in grangiam redacta, de assensu et consilio Henrici fundatoris nostri, ad locum alterum migravimus, qui nunc Kirkstall nominatur. Anno xv. foundationis monasterii de Fontibus, xiiij. kal. Junii emissi sumus sub Alexandro xij. monachi et x. conversi.

NUM. II.

[Ex MS. in bibliotheca Bodleiana, inter codices per Willielmum Cantuar. archiep. collatos. G. 9. fol. 129 a.]

FACTUM est post mortem Henrici regis Angliæ filii Willielmi cognomento Bastardi, ut regnaret pro eo Stephanus Blesensis, nepos regis ex sorore sua. Tumultuante siquidem milite et turbato regno diadema sibi imposuit, fretus auxilio Henrici Wintoniensis episcopi fratris sui.

Fuit autem in his diebus in provincia Eboracensi vir quidam magnarum rerum et inter procures regni notissimus, et nominatissimus, nomine Henricus de Lacy, et factum est ut egrotaret diebus multis. Compunctus homo sub flagello Dei votum fecit, Domino quod abbatiam construeret ordinis Cisterciensis in honore gloriosæ virginis et matris Dei Mariæ. Convaluit, et voti sui non immemor, abbatem de Fontibus mox fecit accersiri, revelat ei propositum, ostendit votum et ad abbatem construendam villam quendam nomine Bernolswyk cum appendiciis suis donatione solempniter facta ei assignat et carta sua confirmat.

Erat autem prædicta villa de feodo Hugonis Bigot comitis de Norfolc, quam prædictus Henricus tenuerat, reddendo comiti annuatim quinque marcas et unum accipitrem de soragio. Sed jam multis annis cessaverat à solutione. Suscepit abbas munus oblatum de manu viri, ignorans rem esse litigiosam, et missis fratribus officinas humiles erexit secundum formam ordinis, novum nomen loco imponens montem sanctæ Mariæ. Officiis igitur de more dispositis, anno incarnationis Domini m.cxlviij. ordinatus est in abbatem ejusdem loci venerabilis dompnus Alexander prior de Fontibus, et ipso die videlicet xiiij. kal. Junii de monasterio Fontanensi emissus cum monachis xij. et conversis x. ad abbatiam novam quæ mons sanctæ Mariæ dicebatur. Erat tunc temporis Eboracensis archiepiscopus bonæ memoriæ Henricus Murdac abbas quondam de Fontibus qui locum ipsum cum pertinentibus et ecclesiam ejusdem loci solutam et quietam et ab omni calumpnia liberatam monachis ibidem Deo servientibus pontificali auctoritate concessit et confirmavit.

Fuit autem ecclesia de Bernolswick antiqua nimis et ab olim fundata, habens villas parochiales quatuor, videlicet Martonam, et aliam Martonam, Bracewellam, et Stokam, excepta villa de Bernolswick et duabus villulis appendentibus Elswynetrop et Broceadene, quas amotis habitatoribus jam dicti monachi possidebant. Convenerunt parochiani ad ecclesiam de more diebus festis cum presbitero et clericis et erant molesti monasterio et fratribus ibidem commorantibus. Volens igitur abbas quieti monachorum et paci providere, licet minus consultè, à fundamento ecclesiam ipsam evertit reclamantibus clericis et parochianis. Facta est itaque quæstio non levis de tam insolita presumptione, clericis siquidem qui rector erat et persona ecclesiæ ipsam molestè ferens eversionem, abbatem et monachos coram metropolitano in jus trahebat. Tandem partibus in præsentia archiepiscopi constitutis, hinc inde ad sedem apostolicam est appellatum, ubi in præsentia domini papæ terminatum est pro monachis, et parti adversæ silentium impositum. Pium enim videbatur et dignum favore ut ecclesia caderet dummodo abbatia pro ea construeretur, ut minus bonum majori cederet, et illa pars optineret in causa quæ uberiores proferret fructus pietatis. Face igitur reddita et lite sopita, utilitati monasterii fratres quietius insistebant, duplici tamen incommodo laborabant. Nam grassatores, quia tempus guerræ erat, bona eorum frequenter diripiebant et importunitas imbrium omni ferè anno fruges eorum suffocabat. Sex annis et amplius ibidem manserunt in paupertate continua et penuria victus et vestitus. Videns abbas quod locus habitationis suæ minus erat idoneus monasterio construendo, cogitare secum cœpit de sede mutanda et monasterio alias transferendo. Et contigit tempore quodam ut iterum agens pro negotiis domus suæ, transiret per vallem quandam tunc temporis nemorosam et umbrosam et nomen vallis Aierdale, id est vallis aquæ quæ vocatur Air, et invenit in ipsius vallis planicie fratres quosdam in habitu religionis hereticam vitam ducentes. Delectatus loci amœnitate divertit ad eos seiscitans ab eis de modo vivendi et forma suæ religionis, unde illuc advenerint, vel quis eis locum contulerit ad inhabitandum. Respondit ei unus ex eis cui nomen Seleth et ipse quasi magister eorum: Ego inquit natus in australi parte regni hujus, revelatione celitus ad me facta huc adveni. Nam cum essem in terra nativitatis meæ, facta est ad me vox per sompnum tertio dicens, Surge Seleth et vade in provinciam Eboracensem et quære diligenter in valle quæ vocatur Aierdale locum quandam qui dicitur Kirkestal, ibi enim prævidebis habitationem futuram fratribus ad serviendum filio meo. Et tu, inquam, dic quis sit filius tuus cui servire debemus. Ego inquit sum Maria et filius meus vocatur Jesus Nazarenus salvator mundi. Evigilans excogitavi mecum de revelatione facta quid agerem, et jactans Domino spem meam, relicta domo et domesticis meis nil cunctatus, iter arripui. Eaque ducente quæ me vocavit, ad hanc vallem quam vides non sine difficultate perveni, hic autem à pastoribus armentariis primò accepi, locum istum in quo nunc habitamus Kirkstall nominari. Solus eram diebus multis, radicibus victitans et herbis, et elemosinis quas mihi christiani caritatis intuitu ministrabant. Adjunxerunt se mihi postea fratres isti quos nunc vides me habentes pro regula et magistro, vitam ducimus in commune secundum formam fratrum de Leruth, nichil habentes proprium, victum et vestitum quæritantes labore manuumstrarum. Audiens hæc abbas cogitare secum cœpit de situ loci et circumstantiis ejus, de vallis amœnitate et aqua ibidem præterfluente, de silvis adjacentibus ad fabricas erigendas. Et visum est ei quod locus satis amœnus est et opportunus ad abbatiam inibi construendam. Cœpit igitur leniter monere fratres de salute et profectu animarum suarum proponens ei propriæ voluntatis periculum, paucitatem fratrum, discipulos sine magistro, laicos sine sacerdote, suadens eos ad majorem perfectionem et ad meliorem formam religionis. Et valedicens fratribus profectus est ad fundatorem monasterii Henricum de Lacy. Susceptus ab eo cum honore condigno suggerit ei de negotiis domus suæ, de paupertate fratrum et loci incommoditate, difficultates varias et gravamina, invenisse se locum valdè accommodum et amœnum, posse de facili rem illam in ejus dominium devenire. Miles autem qui erat dominus fundi illius vocabatur Willielmus Pictavensis. Igitur de communi consilio tractant secum abbas et fundator qualiter res ad effectum facilius et celerius perducatur. Abbas itaque heremitas conveniens alios ad se traxit ordini incorporandos, alii accepta pecunia suum ei jus cesserunt et habitationem.

Igitur Willielmus Pictavensis ad instantiam Henrici dictum locum heremitarum cum aqua et bosco adjacente per metas et certas divisas Deo et monachis contulit et carta sua confirmavit imperpetuum possidendum, sub annuo tamen reddito quinque marcarum sibi et hæredibus suis persolvendo.

Abbas itaque securus de sede ubi locus erat commodior, basilicam erigit in honore matris Dei semper virginis Mariæ et dispositis ex ordine humilibus officinis, monasterium suum, mutato nomine, Kirkstall nominavit. Anno Dominicæ incarnationis mclij. regnante in Anglia rege Stephano, præsidente sedi Eboracensi archiepiscopo Rogero, xiiij. kal. Junii, ipsa die Potentianæ virginis venit conventus monachorum de sede prima jam in grangiam redacta, ad locum qui nunc Kirkstall nominatur, locum nemorosum et frugibus infecundum, locum bonis ferè destitutum præter ligna et lapides et vallem amœnam cum aqua fluminis quæ vallis medium præterfluebat. Porro aqua illa discriminabat limites inter feodum Willielmi Pictavensis et feodum Willielmi de Ramevilla. Monachi ex aquilonari parte fluminis residentes, ex australi plaga nullam habebant possessionem. Sed favente Domino et abbate procurante terram à medio fluminis usque ad clivum montis per certas metas et divisas tandem sunt adepti. Accepto igitur ferro succiderunt silvas et novalia sibi novantes cum filiis Effraim fecerunt sibi locum ad habitandum et spineta condensa ad cultum redigentes anarum globam lætis frugibus luxuriare cogebant. Et vidit Dominus labores eorum et benedixit eis, et multiplicati sunt in brevi numero, fratrum et nomine possessionem. Abbas vero homo religiosus et prudens cum sollicitudine et sagacitate circa domus suæ promotionem modis omnibus invigilabat, et justis quantum potuit titulis dilatabat.

Interea mota est controversia super grangiam de Bernolswyk. Comes enim de Nortfolc Hugo cognomento Bigot eam sibi in dominicum vendicavit et in curia domini regis sibi dirationavit, et monachos pro defectu warranti per judicium curiæ fecit disseisiri. Consternatus abbas dampno rei familiaris adiit comitem ejusque pedibus provolutus movit hominem ad pietatem, tandem convenit inter eos ut ex donatione comitis grangiam cum pertinentiis susciperent tenendam de eo et hæredibus suis in perpetuam elemosinam, reddendo annuatim antiquam firmam v. scilicet marcarum vel palefridum ad valentiam et unum accipitrem. Sed tunc annuum redditum bonæ memoriæ rex Henricus fecit amoveri, movens diligenter et inducens comitem ut pro redemptione peccatorum suorum grangiam dictam cum pertinentiis in puram et perpetuam elemosinam Deo et monachis conferret, quod et factum est sicut carta prædicti comitis testatur et confirmacio regis quas inde habent, ita tamen quod in diebus suis hunc annum censum ei solverent, post decessum ejus liberi ab omni præstatione sint quieti imperpetuum.

Redit ergo abbas ad propriam domum cum carta comitis et confirmatione regis, et rebus prosperè peractis benedicatur Dominus in omnibus donis suis. Et aucta est domus in pecoribus in pascuis in terris et tenementis. Et hæc locorum nomina quæ favente Domino temporibus suis adquisivit.

Inprimis Bernolswyk cum Elstwythorp et Brocadene cum pertinentiis suis. In Clivacher unam carrucatam terræ cum pertinentiis suis, et pasturam equis et armentis amplam nimis, Aldefeld, Cokerick, Brerehay, Horsford, Alreton, Rondehaia, Mikilthwayt, Thorpe, messuagium in Eboraco, Hotonam et Besecra cum duabus grangiis vicinis abbatiae quæ sunt de feodo Willielmi Pictavensis.

In diebus illis erecta sunt edificia de Kirkstall ex lapide et lignis delatis. Ecclesia videlicet et utrumque dormitorium monachorum scilicet et conversorum, utrumque etiam refectorium, claustrum, et capitulum et aliæ officinæ infra abbatiam necessariae, et hæc omnia tegulis optimè cooperta. Officinas grangiarum ipse disposuit et omnia foris et intus sapienter ordinavit. Ampla nemora quæ favente Deo adquisierat ita diligenter adquisivit posteris profutura, ut nil unquam ad ædificandum inde sumeret, sed aliunde omnia comparavit.

Ablata est sub his diebus grangia de Mikilthway major et melior sustentatio monasterii. Rex enim Henricus malè suasus a suis consiliariis in odium Rogeri de Moubray eos fecit disseisari, quia grangia prædicta fuit de feodo ipsius, et ipsam grangiam cum pertinentiis et totum feodum de Colingham et de Berdeleya dedit Adæ de Brus in escambium pro castello de Daneby quod dictus rex ei ante abstulerat.

Successit ei abbas Lambertus, &c. Fuit in diebus illius pax inter fratres cum vicinis, &c. Sed ne viro deesset temptatio ad profectum, accidit ut miles quidam Ricardus nomine de Eland grangiam de Clivacher cum pastura sibi vendicaret. Intelligens abbas quod miles justè eum impetebat, advocato suo scilicet domino Roberto de Lacy ipsam grangiam resignabat data sibi villa de Alkerington in escambium. Hanc villam, amotis habitatoribus, redegit in grangiam usibus monasterii profuturam, si cum pace eam possederet, sed maligni quidam in vicinia habitantes quorum antecessores Alkeringtonam olim possederant, instinctu diaboli ipsam grangiam cum supellectile combusserunt, ei tres conversos, Normannum Unfridum et Robertum qui grangiam regebant crudeliter interemerunt. Contristatus abbas casu adverso, defunctorum Deo animas, corpora commendabat sepulturæ. Et Robertum de Lacy, advocatum domus suæ expetens causam suam cum lacrimis ei commendavit. Indignatus vir nobilis ad tantam præsumptionem, aggressus est ipsos malefactores, et tam eos quam omnem cognationem eorum exulare compulit, donec ad abbatis genua provoluti, de licentia domini Roberti de Lacy, Deo et fratribus pro tam enormi peccato satisfecerunt, ipsam etiam grangiam pro se et successoribus suis adjurare jurarent, quicquid juris in ea habuerunt Deo et monachis conferentes, data insuper pecunia pro dampnis quæ eis intulerunt.

Successit ei bonæ memoriæ abbas Helias monachus olim de Rupe, &c. Nec defuit temptatio initio creationis suæ. Nam vir nobilis Rogerus de Lacy, advocatus ipsius monasterii, malè suasus à quibusdam, tantam erga dictum abbatem concepit indignationem quod nec videre quidem hominem, nec in sua præsentia dignabatur admittere. Sed Dominus, in cujus manu sunt corda principum et consilia eorum, mitigavit motus ejus et rancorem illum in plenam gratiam et amorem convertit. Nam et abbatem ipsum deinceps familiarem habuit et privatum, et negotia domus non mediocriter promovit. Abbas igitur de gratia Dei et adiutorio illius confidens, convenit regem Johannem super grangia de Mikelthwayt, quam pater ejus rex Henricus olim monachis abstulerat. Adjuvabant partes ejus Rogerus de Lacy, constabularius Cestriae, et omnes magnates curiae qui amici ejus erant; sed rex nullatenus grangiam concedere adquevit nisi manerium in cujus pertinentiis sita erat ad feodi firmam accipere voluisset. Hac igitur necessitate inductus praedictam grangiam cum maneriis de Colingham et de Berdseya, ad feodi firmam de manu regis accepit, reddendo annuatim quater viginti libras et decem, sicut carta regis testatur.

Inventum est in chronicis abbatiae de Kirkstall, quod anno regis Henrici quarto, et anno Domini MCXCIII. mensis Augusti die xxj. viz. kal. Februarii, obiit bonae memoriae dominus Robertus de Lacy, secundus fundator monasterii de Kirkstall, et ibi sepelitur.

ad abbatiam construendam, et praedictam Bernolwesvic per has easdem divisas perpetuo possidendam eisdem monachis assignavi, scilicet per rivum qui vocatur Blakebroc et ita sursum ultra moram in directum usque ad Gailmers, et ita in directum usque ad caput de Eleslaghe et ita in transverso montem qui vocatur Blachou, et ita usque ad Oregile, et ita per Oregile sursum usque ad Pikedelawe qui vocatur Alainesete, et de Pikedelawe usque ad antiquum fossatum inter Midhop et Colredene. Inquisitio super eisdem divisis.

[Ibid. 7 Edw. III.]

INQUISITIO capta apud Eboracum die sabbati proxima post festum purificationis beatae Mariae virginis anno regni Regis Edwardi tertii post conquestum septimo, coram Willielmo de Denum, Johanne Giffard, Adam de Hoperton, et Thoma Deyvill, secundum formam commissionis domini regis eis inde directae, et huic inquisitioni consutae, in praesentia Petri de Saltmersh vicecomitis Eboraci ad hoc ex parte domini regis interessendi praemuniti, per Willielmum de Marton, Petrum Gilyot, &c. juratores electos et triatos. Qui dicunt super sacramentum suum quod quidam Henricus de Lacy quondam dominus de Blakeburneshire, et manerii de Bernolwesvic, in fundatione abbatiae de Kirkstall, per cartam suam dedit cuidam Alexandro tunc abbati ejusdem loci et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus manerium de Bernolwesvic cum suis pertinentiis per certas metas et divisas inter forestam tunc ipsius Henrici de Blakeburneshire et manerium illud factas, quae quidem metae et divisae in eadem carta continentur et in dicta commissione domini regis plenius annotantur. Virtute cujus donationis idem Alexander tunc abbas et successores sui abbates loci praedicti manerium praedictum cum pertinentiis per metas et divisas praedictas habuerunt tenuerunt et inde seisisi fuerunt pacifice ut de jure ecclesiae suae praedictae, et commodum et voluntatem suam ut in terris tenementis boscis pasturis et aliis ad idem manerium pertinentibus sine impedimento aliquorum seu alicujus fecerunt, quousque dominus Henricus de Lacy nuper comes Lincolniae tempore regis Edwardi avi domini regis nunc quendam Hugonem de Grymstun quondam abbatem loci praedicti praedecessorem istius abbatibus qui nunc est impedit et ipsum per dominium suum ejecit tam de solo quam de communa habendis circiter in octingentis et quadraginta acris bosci morae et pasturae de pertinentiis manerii praedicti infra dictas metas et divisas existentibus incipiendo ad caput de Ellersshaghe et sic usque Blachou, et de Blachou usque Oregile, et de Oregile usque Pykedelawe quae vocatur Alainesete et de Pykedelawe usque ad antiquum fossatum inter Midhop et Colreden, eaque occupando et ad forestam praedictam sic attrahendo quominus dictus Hugo tunc abbas et successores sui commodum suum de tenementis illis facere aut communam in eisdem habere potuerunt, minus justè. Et dicunt quod tenementa illa per hujusmodi impedimentum sic ad praedictam forestam tracta valent per annum triginta et quinque solidos, scilicet acra obolum et non plus, quia nullum extat ibi aliud proficuum capiendum nisi morosa pastura frisca pro grossis animalibus inde pascendis, et debilis existit.

Dicunt etiam quod idem nunc abbas nec praedecessores sui post praedictum impedimentum per dictum comitem praefato Hugoni abbati factum nullam communam in praedictis tenementis sic ad dictam forestam tractis habuerunt, sed inde hucusque minus justè impediti sunt. Et dicunt quod Thomas nuper comes Lancastriae et Alesia uxor ejus post discessum praedicti Henrici comitis, ac dominus Edwardus nuper rex Angliae pater regis nunc ad cujus manus praedicta foresta de Blakeburneshire post mortem ipsius Thomae devenit, per ministros suos, necnon et domina Isabella regina Angliae mater domini regis nunc, per Willielmum de Tatham custodem terrarum ipsius reginae de Blakeburneshire et Ricardum de Mercesden capitalem forestarium dictae reginae forestae praedictae, hujusmodi impedimentum de dictis tenementis sic ad forestam illam tractis continuaverunt versus ipsum nunc abbatem et prædecessores suos à tempore obitus prædicti Henrici comitis. Requisiti juratores qua de causa. Dicunt quod voluntariè et injuriosè et per vim domini. Et dicunt similiter jurati quod idem nunc abbas nec aliquis prædecessorum suorum jus quod habuit in prædictis tenementis ad forestam prædictam sic tractis, præfato Henrico nuper comiti nec alicui alii domino ibidem postea remisit quietum clamavit nec statum suum in aliquo inde mutavit. Et dicunt etiam quod non est ad dampnum seu præjudicium aliquorum nec alicujus si idem dominus rex nunc et præfata domina Isabella regina restitutionem eidem nunc abbati de tenementis prædictis sic ad forestam prædictam tractis habere faciant, eo quod tenementa illa sunt de pertinentiis manerii prædicti, et nullus habet jus in tenementis prædictis nisi dominus nunc abbas et successores sui ut de jure ecclesiæ suæ supradictæ. Et sciendum est quod Willielmus de Tatham custos terrarum prædictæ reginæ de Blackburnshire et Ricardus de Merclenden capitalis forestarius ibidem præmuniti fuerunt essendi captioni hujusmodi inquisitionis per Petrum Giliot, et Johannem de Bolington et non venerunt. In cujus rei testimonium prædicti jurati huic inquisitioni sigilla sua apposuerunt.

Historia Laceyorum.

[Ex codice MS. penes Ric. Lacy armiger.]

MEMORANDUM quod tempore Ethelbart regis Angliæ qui cœpit regnare anno Domini quingentesimo nonagesimo sexto, eo viz. tempore quo beatus Augustinus Anglorum apostolus missus per beatum Gregorium papam in Angliam, et fidem docuit Christianam, fuerat apud Whalley in Blackburnshire ecclesia quædam parochialis constructa, in honorem omnium sanctorum, in cujus quidem ecclesiæ cimiterio, erant cruces quædam lapideæ tum erectæ, et vocatæ à populo cruces beati Augustini, quæ sub eodem usque hodie ibi durant, appellataque fuerat tempore illo ecclesia prædicta, Alba ecclesia subtus lege. Infra fines autem et limites parochiæ ejusdem ecclesiæ continebantur tunc temporis tota Blackburnshire, et tota Boland, et sic annis plurimis perduravit. Posthæc, crescente fidelium devotione numeroque credentium augmentato in illis partibus, constructæ aliæ tres ecclesiæ parochiales in Blackburnshire, videlicet, ecclesia de Blackburn, ecclesia de Chepin et de Ribchester, parochiæque ecclesiarum earundem ab invicem distinctæ, et certis undique limitibus designatæ, prout usque in præsens continuè perseverant, et apud omnes de illis partibus innotescunt. Et quia parochia ecclesiæ de Blackburne tam sterilis tunc fuerat, et exilis quod ad sustinendum onera incumbentia sufficere non valebat, extitit per loci diocesanum de rectorum ecclesiæ de Walley licentia et assensu pro futuris temporibus ordinatio, quod rectores dictæ ecclesiæ de Blackburne perpetuis annis percipient quartam partem omnium proventuum ecclesiæ de Whalley predictæ, pro sua porcione sufficientius amplianda, quod et usque in præsens, tanquam jus ecclesiæ ejusdem obtinet. His autem temporibus, dum dictæ ecclesiæ taliter fuerant ordinatæ, non erant in Blackburnshire apud Clidherhow vel alibi castrum aliquod ædificatum, neque capella quæcunque præter ecclesias supradictas, nec dominus aliquis qui patronatum dictarum vel alicujus earundem ullatenus vendicaret; sed rector quilibet, terram et villam in qua ecclesia sua fuerat situata, tanquam dotem ecclesiæ suæ tenuit, et possedit, ipsamque ecclesiam sic dotatam, tanquam patrimonium suum, et hæreditatem propriam, successoremque sibi de filiis vel amicis suis, liberè inrogavit, interveniente duntaxat acceptatione seu institutione episcopi Lichfeldensis. Fueruntque dicti rectores de Whalley et Blackburne, præcipuè homines uxorati, et domini villarum, et illi quidem de Whalley, decani non personæ fuerant appellati. Ac per hunc modum ordinabantur ecclesiæ illæ, usque ad tempus regis Willielmi conquestoris, cognomento Bastard, scilicet per sexcentos ferè annos, et post tempus ejusdem regis, usque ad concilium Lateranense, prout ex antiquis et veracibus cronicis satis liquet. Quis dominium de Blackburnshire tenebat ante tempus dicti regis Willielmi sub certo cronicis non habetur, vulgaris autem opinio tenet et asserit, quod quot fuerant vel mansa seu maneria hominum, tot fuerunt domini, nedum in Blackburnshire, verum etiam in Rochedale, Totington, et Bowland, et toto convicinio adjacenti; quorum nullus de alio tenebat, sed omnes in capite de ipso domino rege. Post conquestum autem in unum dominium omnia sunt redacta; quod quidem dominium de Blackburnshire præfatus Willielmus rex conquestor dedit cuidam Ilberto de Lacy militi qui secum venerat de Normannia in conquestu suo, cum dominio et honore de Pontefracto, et alias terras multas, hæredibus suis jure hæreditario possidendas. Iste autem Ilbertus in castro suo quod fecerat apud Pontefractum, capellam quandam construxit in honorem sancti Clementis, per dominum Thomam archiepiscopum Eboracensem dedicari fecit, et in eadem capella cantariam quandam ordinavit, et canonicos ibidem, cum decano constituit perpetuò servituros; ipsamque capellam terris, redditibus, decimis garbarum et pullorum armenti sui, ac multis aliis dotavit, et capellam liberam eandem per dominum Alexandrum papam tertium universali tunc ecclesiæ præsentem decerni et fieri procuravit, prout in bullis ejusdem domini papæ plenius continetur. Iste Ilbertus Lacy genuit ex Hauisia uxore sua Robertum Lacy.

Robertus Lacy ex Matilda uxore sua genuit duos filios, Hilbertum et Henricum: et iste Robertus fundavit monasterium apud Pontefractum, in honorem Dei, beatæ Mariæ virginis, et beati Johannis apostoli et evangelistæ, transferens illud de loco ubi nunc est hospitale sancti Nicholai constructum in locum ubi corpus gloriosi Thomæ Lancastrensis jam humatum. Obiit tempore Willielmi Rufi regis et sepultus est in monasterio prædicto.

Nota quod prædictus Ilbertus cui prædictus Willielmus conquestor dedit dominium et honorem de Pontefracto et alias terras jure hæreditario possidendum, sepultus fuit ad dextrum cornu altaris sancti Benedicti, et uxor ejus ad sinistrum cornu ejusdem altaris sub lapidibus marmoreis. Ilbertus Roberti filius duxit Aliciam Gaunt, et obiit sine prole, qui sepultus ad sinistrum cornu altaris sancti Benedicti ejusdem inter sepulchrum Matildis matris suæ et murum, unde hæreditas transiit ad Henricum fratrem suum.

Henricus Lacy fecit dedicari ecclesiam monasterii ejusdem, anno Domini millesimo centesimo quinquagesimo nono, qui etiam fundavit monasterium sanctæ Mariæ de Kirkstall, ordinis Cisterciensis, primo apud Bernolwike, postmodum autem conventum eundem transtulit ad locum vocatum Kirkstall, scilicet tempore regis Stephani, anno regni ejus decimo tertio, et anno gratiæ millesimo centesimo quadragesimo septimo. Iste Henricus duxit in uxorem sororem Willielmi Vesci rectoris de Berwic, et genuit ex ea Robertum. Nescitur ubi sepultus fuit, creditur quod ipse in terra sancta obiit vij. kalendas Octobris.

Robertus Lacy patri suo Henrico successit, regnante Henrico rege secundo, qui quidem Robertus ædificare cœpit castrum de Clidherhow in Blackburnshire, in quo castrum construi fecit quamdam capellam in honorem beati Michaelis archangeli, in qua capella, per assensum et licentiam Galfridi tunc decani ecclesiæ de Whalley senioris, fecit divina celebrari, et tenentibus suis domesticis, ac pastoribus et forestariis sacramenta ecclesiastica ministrari, unde iidem tenentes sui domestici, pastores, forestarii, et alii servientes ejus distanter a prædicta ecclesia manentes possent in dicta capella per capellanum ibidem servientem ecclesiastica percipere sacramenta, et jura parochialia persolvere, prout alii parochiani infra dictam ecclesiam in diversis capellis alibi faciebant, et per consensum decani prædicti ad hoc facilius obtinendum, eidem capellæ nomine dotis terras et redditus assignavit. Dictus tamen Galfridus, et alii decani et rectores successores sui, de prædictis terris, redditibus, et proventibus dictæ ecclesiæ taliter assignatis una cum eadem capella, non obstante quod infra castrum domini fuit situata, tanquam de capella annexa, et rebus et proventibus ad suam ecclesiam de Whalley pertinentibus pro suo libito disponebant. Unde dictus Galfridus senior, eandem capellam, cum terris, redditibus, et proventibus prædictis, concessit cuidam Waltero capellano ad totam vitam suam, post mortem autem ejus Walteri, Galfridus decanus junior, filius, hæres et successor Galfridi senioris, eandem capellam cum pertinentiis ut jus et parcellam suæ ecclesiæ reaccepit et tenuit ut annexam. Dictus autem Robertus Lacy dedit monachis de Fontibus, pasturam in foresta sua de Marchesden, ad decem libras. Iste Robertus, de Isabella uxore sua hæredem non habuit, unde hæreditas ejus totalis venit post ejus mortem, ad hæredes domini Richardi constabularii Cestriæ, et domini de Halton, qui disposaverant sororem ejus, ex parte matris

Successit dicto Roberto, Albreda, vel Aubreia, filia Roberti Lisours, soror ex parte matris, unde et illa post mortem ipsius utramque hæreditatem, scilicet de Lacy et de Lisoures occupavit, unde et dominium de Blackburnshier, ac totalis hæreditas ejusdem Roberti, post mortem ejus ad hæredes domini constabularii Cestriæ et domini de Halton (qui desponsaverat dominam Aubreiam) descendit, et sic hæreditas dominorum de Lacy, et hæreditas constabulariorum Cestriæ sunt conjunctæ.

Richardus constabularius Cestriæ genuit ex prædicta Albreda duos filios, Johannem constabularium Cestriæ fundatorem domus de Stanlaw, et Robertum hospitalarem, et duas filias: scilicet Saram, et Aubreiam. Sara fuit data Roberto de Aldeworth, Aubreia data fuit Henrico Biset.

Johannes de Lacy dictus constabularius Cestriæ prout sui posterii propter conjunctionem hæreditatum supradictarum, semper se postmodum instilabatur, filius et hæres eorum, duxit in uxorem Aliciam Vere uxorem Willielmi Mandevill, et genuit Rogerum de Hell (à Vallensibus ita cognominatum, eo quod eosdem Wallicos regi Angliæ rebelles, tanquam inferni, undique devastavit) et alium filium nomine Eustachium et plures alios. Iste Johannes post mortem patris sui Richardi, fundavit monasterium de Stanlaw in Wirall in comitatu Cestriæ, anno regni regis Henrici secundi dicti filii imperatricis decimo quinto, anno Domini millesimo centesimo sexagesimo octavo. Post cujus foundationem idem Johannes profectus est in terram sanctam ad expugnandum inimicos fidei Christianæ, et in illa expeditione fuerat pro Christi nomine interfectus, et ut legitur in historia terræ sanctæ in obsidione civitatis Samy et Egypti, quod si Blandus vel Oliverus quorum fama per mundum dilatatur, interfuissent non potuissent, nec de jure tenerent reputari eorum facta ad majorem probitatem vel audaciam quam ipsius Johannis de Lacy animositatis invasionem. Quinto Idus Octobris anno Domini millesimo centesimo octuagesimo tertio obiit.

Cui successit filius suus Rogerus de Lacy, et licet jus hæreditarium dominorum de Lacy ad hæredes domini Richardi constabularii per modum prædictum translatus esset, iste tamen Rogerus primus fuit de progenie dicti Richardi, qui eandem hæreditatem corporaliter apprehendit. Hujus autem Rogeri tempore, quidam comes Cestriæ Ranulphus nomine, exiit in Walliam cum exercitu suo, et contigit quod deficiente exercitu, fugeret ad quoddam castellum, et ibi est à Wallensibus obsessus. Quod audiens idem Rogerus constabularius, qui non erat illa vice cum domino suo (nam remansit in Cestria) per nuncios idem comes ei mandavit necessitate compulsus quod quam citius ei faceret succursum. Qui continuo accessit sutoribus Cestriæ et histrionibus et festinato, cum exercitu suo venit domino suo facere succursum. Wallenses verò videntes multitudinem magnam venientium, relicta obsidione fugerunt; comes verò cum constabulario suo et exercitu exeuntes, venerunt, et pervenerunt ad Cestriam. Et propter hoc dedit comes antedictus Rogero constabulario dominationem et advocationem directorum sutorum et histrionum. Constabularius verò retinuit sibi et hæredibus sui dominationem sutorum et histrionum. Dedit verò senescalco suo, scilicet ex hæredibus dicti Hudardi, quas libertates hæredes eorum tenuerunt usque in præsentem diem.

Iste autem Rogerus habuit quendam fratrem nomine Richardum cui dedit villam de More, et hic postmodum fuit leprosus, et sepultus in capitulo canonicorum de Norton. Iste Rogerus de Lacy duxit in uxorem Matildam de Clare sororem thesaurarii Eborum ecclesiæ, de qua genuit Johannem, secundum constabularium, et comitem Lincolnæ. Hic dedit domui de Stanlawe advocationem ecclesiæ de Ratchdall, Brindwas, et quatuor bovatas terræ in Castleton. Item concessit monachis de Fontibus, quicquid ad eum pertinuit in Bradley ut patet in carta duodecima. Hujus autem Rogeri tempore, fuit apud Whalley decanus quidam Rogerus nomine, filius Galfridi decani junioris, qui quidem decanus propter constitutionem concilii Lateranensis (quod tunc temporis recenter fuerat celebratum) continentiam clericis imponens beneficiatis, primus rectorum seu decanorum de Whalley continenter vixit, et ad sacerdotalem se fecerat

ordinem promoveri. Consideransque quod beneficia ecclesiastica juxta ordinationem concilii supradicti non debebant ex tunc per successionem hæreditariam occupari, cuidam fratri suo Richardo postmodum domino de Tounley, saltem in parte sui patrimonii de Whalley providere volens, cum in toto non posset, dedit, eidem Richardo capellam beati Michaelis in castro de Cliderhow per assensum dicti domini Rogeri de Lacy, cujus consanguineus erat, una cum decimis, oblationibus, et proventibus eidem capellæ (ut præmittitur) assignatis. Dedit et eidem Richardo, jure hæreditario, quæ adhuc tenet. His ita dispositis, moritur dictus Rogerus de Lacy, anno Domini millesimo ducentesimo sexto, et regni Regis Johannis tertio, in festo sancti Remigii, et cum domina Matilda uxore sua sepultus est in choro monachorum de Stanlaw cum epitaphio.

Cui successit Johannes de Lacy (primus comes Lincolnæ) filius ejus et hæres, et duxit in uxorem Aliciam filiam Gilberti de Aquila, quâ defunctâ et sepultâ apud Norton, desponsavit idem Johannes Margaretam filiam Roberti Quincy comitis Wintoniæ nepotem Ranulphi comitis Cestriæ, et per illam factus est comes Lincolnæ anno Domini millesimo ducentesimo vigesimo primo, et regni Regis Henrici tertii quinto, et genuit ex ea Edmundum de Lacy comitem, constabularium Cestriæ, sed non comitem Lincolnæ, quia obiit ante matrem suam. Iste Johannes dedit monachis de Stanlaw advocationem medietatis ecclesiæ de Blackburne Stanyges, manerium de Hordern, Newton, et Calderstach cum molendino. Item confirmavit monachis de Fontibus quicquid habent de Jordano del Rid, et quicquid habent de dono Rogeri de Lasci patris sui ut patet in cartis Edwardi primi, de Bradley. Hujus autem Johannis tempore, dominus Rogerus decanus de Whalley, volens eidem domino et cognato suo placere, jus patronatus totius ecclesiæ suæ de Whalley sibi et suis hæredibus confirmari imperpetuum et transferri, cessit rectoriæ et decanatu ecclesiæ prædictæ, solum sibi retinens (per assensum episcopi) ejusdem ecclesiæ vicariam; unde dictus dominus Johannes de Lascy comes Lincolnæ, ad personatum dictæ ecclesiæ de Whalley præsentavit quendam clericum suum Petrum de Cestria, qui quidem Petrus extitit primus ejusdem ecclesiæ persona nominatus, atque ad præsentationem ejusdem domini ab episcopo Liechfeld Alexandro admissus ad eundem personatum, et institutus canonicè et inductus. Obiit Johannes primus comes Lincolnæ xj. kalend. Augusti anno Domini millesimo ducentesimo quadragesimo, et regni regis Henrici tertii vigesimo quarto, sepultusque est apud Stanlaw cum epitaphio.

Cui successit Edmundus filius ejus constabularius Cestriæ, sed non comes Lincolnæ, quia mater ejus supervixerat ei. Natus erat anno Domini millesimo ducentesimo vigesimo nono, et anno decimo tertio regni Henrici tertii. Vixerat post mortem patris tredecim annis, desponsaverat dominam Aleciam filiam marchionis de Salves in Italia, cognatam reginæ Angliæ ex parte Sabinensi, quam in juventute sua duxerat in uxorem. Mater verò prædictæ Aliciæ uxoris Edmundi (mortuo marchione de Salves viro suo) desponsata fuit. Johannes primus comes Lincolnæ mutavit cognomen prædecessorum suorum, in cognomen fundatorum nostrorum, cujus cor.

De quo Edmundo processit Henricus de Lacy comes Lincolnæ, de quo Henrico processit Alicia, quæ desponsata erat Thomæ filio comitis Lancastriæ, qui quidem Thomas feoffatus erat cum dicta Alicia filia Henrici Lacy, in omnibus terris, &c. Et si contigerit eos obire sine hæredibus de corporibus suis, tunc hæreditas dictæ Aliciæ remaneret rectis hæredibus dicti Thomæ: et sic hæreditas dicti Henrici de Lacy reversa est ad quendam Henricum comitem Leicestriensem fratrem dicti Thomæ. De quo Henrico processit Blanchia, quæ desponsata erat Johanni de Gaunt filio Edwardi tertii regis Angliæ, de quibus Johanne et Blanchia processit Henricus rex Angliæ quartus, de quo processit Henricus quintus, de quo processit Henricus sextus rex Angliæ, &c.

HONORIUS episcopus, &c. venerabilibus fratribus Cantuariæ sanctæ Romanæ ecclesiæ cardinalis et Eborum archiepiscopis, et eorum suffraganeis, ac dilectis filiis aliis ecclesiarum prælatis per Cantuariæ et Eborum provincias constitutis, salutem, et apostolicam benedictionem. Cum abbates Cisterciensis ordinis tempore consilii generalis ad comminationem fælicis memoriæ Innocentii papæ, prædecessoris nostri, statuerunt, ut de cætero fratres ipsius ordinis (ne occasione privilegiorum suorum ecclesiæ ulterius gravarentur) de alienis terris et ab eo tempore acquirendis, si eas propriis manibus aut sumptibus colent, decimas persolverent ecclesiis quibus ratione prædiorum antea solvebantur, nisi cum eisdem ecclesiis aliter ducerentur componendum. Idem prædecessor noster, quia sperabat ut ecclesiarum prælati promotiores et efficaciores existerent ad exhibendum eis de suis malefactoribus justitiæ complementum et eorum privilegia diligentius et perfectius observant, statutum hujusmodi gratum habens et ratum, hoc ipsum ad alios regulares qui gaudent similibus privilegiis extendi voluit mandavit. Sed quo dolentes referimus, in contrarium res est versa, ex inculcata querela abbatum ipsius ordinis frequenter audivimus, nonnulli ecclesiarum prælatis, et alii clerici eorum privilegia temere contempnerent, et contententes malitiose ipsorum pervertere intellectum eosdem multipliciter inquietant. Nam cum sit ipsis indultum ut de novalibus quæ propriis manibus aut sumptibus excolunt, sive de ortis et virgultis et piscationibus suis, vel de suorum animalium nutrimentis, nullus ab eis decimas exigere vel extorquere præsumat, quidam perverso intellectu consulto dicentes quod non possunt nec debent intelligere nisi de his quæ sunt ante generale consilium acquisita, ipsos super his multiplici exactione fatigant. Nos igitur eorum quieti, paterna sollicitudine providere volentes, universitati vestræ per apostolica scripta firmiter præcipiendo mandamus, quatenus abbates et fratres ejusdem ordinis a præstatione decimarum tam de possessionibus habitis ante consilium generale quam de novalibus sive ante sive post consilium acquisitis, quæ propriis manibus aut sumptibus excolunt, necnon de ortis et virgultis, pratis, pascuis, nemoribus, molendinis, salinis et piscationibus suis, et de suorum animalium nutrimentis singuli vestrum omnino servetis immunes, contradictores per censuram ecclesiasticam appellatione postposita compescendo. INNOCENTIUS episcopus, &c. dilectis filiis abbatibus atque conventibus monachorum Cisterciensis ordinis in Cantuariæ et Eborum constitutorum provinciis salutem et apostolicam benedictionem. Significastis nobis, quod cum vobis a sede apostolica sit indultum, ut de ortis, virgultis, pratis, pascuis, nemoribus, salinis, molendinis, piscationibus, ante et post consilium acquisitis, et de vestrorum animalium nutrimentis, nullus a vobis decimas exigere vel extorquere præsumat, injuncto nihilominus ab eadem sede venerabilibus fratribus archiepiscopis, episcopis, et aliis ecclesiarum prælatis per regnum Angliæ constitutis, ut vos et alios præfati ordinis regni ejusdem immunes a præstatione decimarum hujusmodi conservarent; nonnulli tamen ecclesiarum prælatis et clerici provinciarum ipsarum, dicentes, dictam indulgentiam ad acquisita post concessionem ipsius aliquatenus non extendi, vos super hoc multiplici molestatione fatigant; nos igitur credentes præfatam indulgentiam ad acquisita postmodum extendendam, ut nullus vos super hac hujusmodi occasione fatiget auctoritate præsentium inhibemus. Carta Henrici Comitis Lancastriæ confirmatoria omnium Immunitatum Monachorum de Kirkstall, in Manerio de Bernoldeswick et in Chacea de Blackburnshire.

[Ibid.]

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus ad quos præsens scriptum indentatum pervenerit Henricus comes Lancastriæ, Derby, Leycestræ, et Lincolnæ, ac seneschallus Angliæ, salutem in Domino. Noveritis quod cum Henry de Lacy dudum dominus de Blakeburnshire et de Bernoldeswick per cartam suam dedisset et concessisset monachis ordinis Cisterciensis ad abbatiam construendam manerium de Bernoldswick cum pertinentiis in com. Ebor. necnon quandam placeam vasti infra liberam chaceam ipsius Henrici de Lacy de Blagburnshire in com. Lanc. habendam per certas metas et bundas, &c. in carta prædicta contentas, viz. per rivum qui vocatur Blakebrooke et ita sursum ultra moram in directum usque ad Gailmers, et ita in directum usque ad caput de Eleessaghe, ita in transversum montis qui vocatur Blakow, et ita usque ad Oxegill, et ita per Oxegill sursum usque ad Pikedlaw, et de Pikedlaw usque ad antiquum fossatum inter Midhope et Colredene. Ad postmodum pro eo quod quidam domini de Blakeburnshire, qui pro tempore extiterunt, metas et bundas prædictas nimis obscuras existimantes, multotiens clameum suum in quandam partem vasti infra dictas metas et bundas apposuerunt; clamantes etiam puturam ad quatuor forrestarios et garcionem et equos suos pro uno repastu quolibet die Veneris per annum. Religiosos viros abbatem et monachos de Kirkstall super possessione sua manerii et vasti prædictorum istis occasionibus impetierunt, et multipliciter gravari et inquietari fecerunt, sicque eo prætextu contentiones et discordia retroactis temporibus super præmissis oriebantur indebite ut accepimus. De Decimis ut habetur in Registro quodam ad Abbatem de Kirkstal pertinente.

SCIANT insuper posteri et successores nostri quod omnia prædicta asserta debent semper imposterum censi novalia, quia quod semel est novale semper erit novale quantum ad decimarum solutionem vel retentionem. Et ex consequente dummodo novalia fuerint in manibus religiosorum erunt libera et immunia ab omni et omnimoda solutione decimarum prout manifeste patet in jure, videlicet, titulo de decimis capitulo ex parte, et titulo de privilegiis capitulo consultationem; ac etiam titulo de novalibus, capitulo quid per novale. Et ex hoc liquide patet, quod de omnibus præscriptis debemus imperpetuum esse immunes a solutione decimarum. Et erunt etiam duæ aliæ causæ propter quas debemus esse immunes a decimis solvendis pro dictis assertis ut manifeste patere potest. Primo per hoc quod omnia loca in quibus prædicta asserta in terram arabilem et defalcabilem redacta fuerint, monasterio nostro data sunt et concessa ante concilium Lateranense, prout evidenter patet per cartas et feoffamenta et feoffatos nostros monasterio nostro inde facta et concessa. Et est alia causa propter quam debemus esse immunes ac firmarii nostri a solutione decimarum præscriptorum assertorum prout clare patere potest per quandam compositionem ab antiquo tempore inter nos et priorem Sanctæ Trinitatis Eborum rectorem ecclesiæ parochialis de Ledes inde pro judice confectam. Et quod firmarii nostri debent esse immunes a solutione decimarum de hujusmodi assertis patet aperte per quoddam speciale privilegium ordini nostro concessum per Bonifacium papam octavum cujus tenor hic inferius est insertus.

Bonifacius episcopus servus servorum Dei dilectis filiis universis abbatibus et abbatissis et conventibus ordinis Cisterciensis tam præsentibus quam futuris, salutem et apostolicam benedictionem. In ecclesia vester ordo nitore claro coruscans universalem gregis Domini aulam illuminat, et currentibus in stadio rectum iter insinuat, quo ad salutis bravium facilius perveniant. Nos quidem ob hoc et propter magnum devocionis affectum quem ad nos et apostolicam sedem habetis ordinem ipsum et vos et alios ejusdem ordinis professores intima caritate prosequimur, ac sinceris affectibus excitamur ad vestrum et illorum commoda in quibus honeste possumus promovenda. Ideoque præmissorum intuitu et optentu dilecti filii nostri Roberti N. Sanctæ Prudentiæ presbiteri cardinalis, qui tanquam præfati ordinis cujus professor existit promotor assiduus, necessitates vestras et dicti ordinis reverenter nobis exposuit, et super illis nostræ provisionis auxilium imploravit, vobis auctoritate præsentium indulgemus, ut de terris vestris cultis et incultis ad ordinem vestrum spectantibus, quas aliis concessistis vel concedetis in posterum excolendas, de quibus tamen aliquis decimas se primicias non percepit, nullus a vobis seu cultoribus terrarum ipsarum, aut quibuscumque aliis decimas seu primicias exigere vel extorquere præsumat. Nos enim nihilominus irritum decernimus et inane quicquid contra tenorem hujus nostræ indulgentiæ fuerit attemptatum. Nulli ergo, &c. Si quis, &c. Dat. Lateranensi quinto decimo kalendas Januarii, pontificatus nostri anno octavo.

from Alan de Plokenet, John la Warre, and Walter de

ORE ABBEY was founded by Robert de Ewyas, the youngest son of Harold, Lord of Ewyas, in the time of King Stephen, to the honour of the Virgin Mary.^a Robert, Earl of Ferrers, gave Oxemeod to this monastery in fee;^b and King John gave to it all the land between the water called Dore and the rivulet of Trivelbrook.^c Other deeds will be found in the Appendix

Clifford, bestowing on the monks the advowson of the church of St. Andrew, at Lugwardyn, in Herefordshire, the church of Wyketofte, in Lincolnshire, and lands in Nanteglas and Cantersclif.^d

In the Taxation of Pope Nicholas, the spiritualities of this monastery amount to 9*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* the annual amount of the temporal possessions to 120*l.* 16*s.* 11*d.*^e

What were the possessions of this abbey at the time of the Suppression will be seen in the Valor Ecclesiasticus and the Minister's Accompts.^f

In the 26th Hen. VIII. the gross revenue of this House amounted to 118*l.* 0*s.* 2*d.* The clear income to 101*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.* per annum.

A very imperfect impression of the Common Seal of this Abbey is in the possession of one of the Editors of this work; its subject is, an abbat at full length, in one hand a crozier, in the other a book; and having on his dexter side a shield with the arms of the abbey, being those of the family of Tregoz, who married the heiress of the founder, Ewyas, viz. gules, two bars gemels, and in chief a lion passant, guardant or. The arms in the shield of the sinister side are, in this impression, wholly obliterated, nor can any more of the legend be made out than s. c. DE DORA.

Carta Roberti Comitis de Ferrariis.

[Vincent contra Broke. p. 677.]

ROBERTUS comes de Ferrariis, omnibus filiis sanctæ ecclesiæ, et omnibus hominibus suis et amicis, tam præsentibus quàm futuris, salutem. Notum sit vobis omnibus, me dedisse et concessisse, Deo et sanctæ Mariæ et monachis, vallis de Dora, in perpetuam elemosinam, in feudum et hæreditatem, totam Oxemeodum, desuper viam et desuper terram, quam antea in elemosinam eis dederam, totam in circuitu sicut terra arabilis dividit, solutam et liberam et quietam ab omni seculari servitio, per tressolidos singulis annis reddendos ad festum S. Petri ad vincula, in recognitionem apud Kingestonam, donec inde melius faciam eis. Et concedo si voluerint fossare totam in circuitu, et arare, vel quid voluerint facere, sicut de feudo suo, et garantizabo contra omnes homines, sicut elemosinam meam. Hoc autem feci pro salute domini mei H. et mea, W. filii mei, et hæredum nostrorum, et pro anima regis H. et antecessorum nostrorum, et pro anima Sibillæ de Braosa, uxoris meæ, matris W. filii mei, et sua, et pro salute Bertæ (fuit filia Milonis comitis Herefordiæ) matris uxoris meæ, quæ dedit mihi hanc terram, et pro pace et stabilitate totius Angliæ et Walliæ. Pro hac donatione de caritate ecclesiæ, habui duas marcas argenti. Testibus Nicholao de Cloptune, Waltero Giffardo, Waltero Baschervilla, Gaufrido Warisseden, et Johanne filio ejus.

Et ita tantam terram in bosco et in plano infra Nantmanach, et Kaletur-bochan usque ad caput Nantmanach, quod est enter Wuritkei et Epint, sicut Nantmanach descendit usque in Kaletur. Et præterea dedi, et concessi antedictis monachis totam terram in bosco et in plano ultra Kaletur-maur, sicut Kaletur-maur descendit ad Epint, usque in Waram, et usque ad fines de Buelt, scilicet per viam à Menivielm, usque ad Crinwedhanc, et a Crinwedhanc, usque ad Nantlethdunaitt, et sicut Nantelechdunaut cadit usque in Waiam. Et si aliquod servitium evenierit, ego, et hæredes mei prædictos monachos adquietabimus. Volo autem ut prædicti monachi habeant et teneant prædictas terras, in puram, liberam, et perpetuam elemosinam bene et in pace, libere et quiete, honorifice et plenarie, integre, et inconcusse, cum omnibus libertatibus, et liberis consuetudinibus ad prædictas terras pertinentibus, et ut prædicti monachi de supradictis terris, in bosco et in plano, in pratis et in pascuis, in viis et in semitis, in stagnis, in aquis, et in molendinis, omne beneplacitum suum faciant, et tam bosco, quam plano, secundum velle suum tractent; si autem feræ, de foresta mea, vel aliunde, infra supradictas terras monachorum transierint, venatus meus erit, et si accipiter nidum suum ibi fecerit, nidus meus erit. Præterea concessi prænominato abbati de Dora, et ejusdem loci monachis, et suis, liberum ingressum et exitum cum catallis suis per viam super Waiam, quæ dirigitur à Liswen usque Buelt.
